CHANGE DUE TO DOMINIONS

Emergence to Nationhood Turns Britain to Build New Colonial Empire—Shift Will Affect Us.

By ALLEN RAYMOND.
Wireless to The New York Times.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The Prince of Wales is going to Africa tomorrow to hunt big game. He is going ostensibly as Great Britain's beloved sportsman and purely in a private capacity to camp in the jungles and experience the thrill of bringing down dangerous beasts with his rifle. Actually, he is going out to participate as a member of the royal family with the British Government in a major operation of statesmanship, namely development of a new Colonial Empire to replace the one lost when the Dominions came of age.

This governmental adventure is one for which preparations have been made far surpassing in magnitude the Prince's packing of his personal belongings in York House. It has been a matter for discussion in the Cabinet, at Buckingham Palace, at the Colonial Office, in the Board of Trade, and particularly in conference between statesmen and England's great newspaper powers since Colonel L. S. Amery, the Minister for the Colonies, returned early this year from a tour of all the British Dominions and colonies.

Vanguard Already Gone.

Several weeks ago several star reporters of the greatest London papers started the exodus of important persons toward Africa. About the same time fashionable men and women whose pictures one usually sees in the pictorial weeklies at this time of year basking on the sands at Deauville, began buying tickets for Kenya Colony. Scions of wealth here have begun to buy ranches in Kenya much as they used to do in Canada and South Africa.

The Prince of Wales goes tomorrow with his brother the Duke of Gloucester, guns, tents, tropical wardrobe and retinue. In American terms the great "ballyhoo" has begun. The attention of British investors and potential British emigrants will be drawn during the next six months to the potentialities of the colonies that are as against those of the colonies that used to be.

The colonies that used to be have become independent nations. While retention of their association in the British Commonwealth will be one of the major preoccupations of British statesmen, it is recognized here that they are no longer part of the empire as the world has always understood the meaning of the word empire. They are no longer under control.

British Sway Is Continental.

Practical business men like to have their principal enterprises thoroughly under control. They may be associated with other business men for common ends, but the bulk of their labor and risk is likely to be where they have absolute command.

When Tanganyika Territory—formerly German East Africa—was granted to Great Britain as a mandate after the war, it gave this insular power practically absolute command over a unified single vast empire in Africa from Cairo to the border of the Union of South Africa. Its rule was modified technically in Egypt, but not actually.

From Abyssinia south England's rule is absolute over an unexploited plateau a third of the size of the United States, climatically suitable in large part for the white man's occupancy, with great resources of timber, farm land and mines. And there also is the world's cheapest labor.

"The time has come to pay our principal attention to development of the Crown colonies and protectorates," is the word spread down from the highest British circles. In the coming six months Fleet Street is going to blossom with special editions and supplements about the wealth of Uganda, Kenya, Tanganyika and Rhodesia. The magazine world will see two British princes and other noted Britons having the time of their lives in the greatest hunting reserves yet remaining outside civilization.

Move of Import to America.

The more serious publications will tell how Kenya's coffee crop, of the highest quality and increasing fast, ought to rival Brazil's; how Tanganyika's production of sisal and other hemp fibres is jumping annually and waiting only capital, and how Rhodesian tobacco is entering the world market.

The fact is that these undeveloped resources, together with Great Britain's often demonstrated ability to pioneer profitably in distant colonial regions, amply justify enthusiasm.

SCIENTIST INSISTS MAN HAS A SOUL

REVEALS A WAR SECRET

By the Associated Press.

GLASGOW, Sept. 5.—Sir William Bragg, making his first address as President of the British Association for the Advancement of Science tonight, flatly told his distinguished audience that man has a soul. His incisive declaration was in direct contradiction of the address made to the body last year by its then President, Sir Arthur Keith, who rejected the idea of an after-life.

Standing before 3,000 scientists assembled in St. Andrew's Hall, Sir William shook his finger at his hearers and tossed the iron gray hair fringing his bald head as he declared:

"Science is not setting forth to destroy the soul, but to keep body and soul together."

The Nobel Prize winner and discoverer of a new method of measuring electrons and atoms in crystals took as his premise that science and religion are not incompatible.

"There are some who think," he said, "that science is inhuman. They speak as though students of modern science would destroy reverence and faith. I do not know how that can be said of the student who stands daily in the presence of what seems to him to be the infinite.

"Science is not so foolish as to throw away that in which the slowly gathered wisdom of the ages is stored. In this she is a conservative of conservatives."

The audience heard Sir William in silence as he began turning the tables on the retiring President, who had introduced him and who remained on the platform. The applause increased, however, as he warmed to his subject.

How British Located German Guns.

Sir William revealed how the British Army became so expert in locating and destroying German artillery in the World War. An electric thermometer which registered the temperature of puffs of air occasioned by artillery fire, gave the experts a basic figure upon which they could calculate the exact whereabouts of the artillery, he said.

It was during the early years of the war that a group of young scientific students was assembled from the British universities to devise and test methods of locating enemy guns, Sir William explained. They soon decided that what was most needed was a method of measuring very exactly the time of arrival of the air pulse, due to the discharge of the gun, at various stations in their own lines. If the relative positions of the stations were accurately known it would then become a simple matter of calculation to ascertain the gun position. Their own forces could then destroy it.

It so happened that an enemy airplane came over the lines one morning at daybreak. One of the science students, an officer, lay awake in his bunk listening to the discharges of the anti-aircraft guns and the more distant explosions of their shells. Every now and then a faint whistling sound seemed to be connected with the louder sounds. The wall of the hut was of felt; it was in poor condition and there were tiny vents close to the officer's head. The gun

GERMANY TO OFFER ALLIES CONCESSIONS TO QUIT RHINELAND

Chancellor Mueller Will Make Proposal for Evacuation at Conference of Powers.

MEETS BRIAND IN GENEVA

In Friendly Conversation He Is Told Matter Must Be Negotiated.

BERLIN TAKES DEBT STAND

Holds International Problem Cannot Be Associated With Reparation Payments.

By WYTHE WILLIAMS.
Special Cable to The New York Times.

GENEVA, Sept. 5.—For the first time Foreign Minister Briand and Chancellor Mueller had an "official" meeting admittedly to discuss the problem of Rhineland evacuation. At the same moment it was announced by the Geneva press that the grand manoeuvres of the French Rhine army began today, to continue for a week and extending from the northern frontier of the Sarre to the "extreme limits of the occupied territory," over an area nearly 100 miles in length.

The Mueller-Briand engagement, which took place at the French Foreign Minister's hotel, was announced to the press by the German Chancellor himself, who declared he would formally ask for an opening of negotiations for complete evacuation of the Rhineland and not merely of the Second Area, which under the Versailles Treaty will occur anyway in sixteen months. The Chancellor considered that the time had arrived to demand a complete gift on the part of the Allies for which as compensation Germany offers exactly nothing.

Request Had Been Discouraged.

It is learned that at the beginning of August Germany, through her Ambassadors in the various capitals, asked whether it was desirable to open negotiations at Geneva. It is reported that all the replies were discouraging, but that nevertheless the Reich's Cabinet considered it a political necessity, inasmuch as the Chancellor is attending the League Assembly instead of Foreign Minister Stresemann, that he should return from Geneva, having made formal demands.

Thus at today's meeting Herr Mueller based his request on Article 431 of the Versailles Treaty, in which it is stated that if Germany complies with all treaty obligations earlier evacuation will be considered.

Their interview today lasted an hour and a half. Information on what took place comes to me direct from the French Foreign Minister.

He explains that soon after introducing the subject Chancellor Mueller realized that no actual negotiations were possible unless the Reich was willing to offer certain definite concessions.

The talk then developed much along the lines of the famous Briand-Stresemann pourparlers at Thoiry, which resulted in the Locarno agreement. Just as Dr. Stresemann departed from Thoiry promising to make concrete offers, so Chancellor Mueller tonight left the Hotel Bergyes likewise promising that concessions would be offered within the next few days.

Agrees to a Conference.

M. Briand explained to the Chancellor that he alone was not in position to negotiate a matter that was still before the Conference of Ambassadors. Herr Muller then agreed to present his proposals to Lord Cushendun, Signor Scialoja and M. Hymans, the delegates of Britain, Italy and Belgium. Following these interviews he will again be received by M. Briand.

Thus it is admittedly possible that during the present League Assembly a conference of the representatives of the five powers concerned will take place at Geneva which perhaps

Treated by Radio for Snake Bite in Midocean; Ditmars Sends Aid to Victim on Berengaria

Special Cable to The New York Times.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The story of how a passenger on the Berengaria was treated for snake bite while in midocean in accordance with prescriptions wirelessed from New York by Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the zoo there, was told today by passengers when the liner docked at Southampton.

The patient was M. Shiffman, a student at the University of Vienna, who had been to the United States collecting snakes from which casts will be made for the university's museum.

On the third day out from New York one of the rattlesnakes died. While he was removing it from the crate a copperhead bit Shiffman on the finger. He wirelessed immediately to Dr. Ditmars for instructions on how to treat the wound. At first his arm swelled badly, but after he had followed the instructions sent to him the swelling subsided and he left the ship practically well again.

How he had prescribed by wireless for Shiffman was related last night by Dr. Ditmars at his home in Scarsdale.

"While the ship was in midocean," he said, "I got a wireless saying:

"'Bitten on finger by copperhead. What shall I do?'

"I wirelessed back immediately:

"The object of the dressing was to keep the wound soft. I did not think there was any danger for a husky young fellow of 25 years who had been bitten by a medium-sized copperhead, but I knew he was in for a sore arm.

"About four hours later I got another wireless saying:

"'Swelling extending up arm. What shall I do?'

"I wirelessed back:

"'Make drain incision in wound. Continue wet dressings. Moderate swelling must be expected.'

"On the following day I got a third wireless saying:

"'Swelling reduced. Feel much better. Many thanks.'

"I knew that he was all right. Many people have been bitten by copperheads, and the bites are not necessarily fatal. In his case I was sure there was no grave danger, but most of all I wanted to keep him from worrying."

HOOVER FUND TOTAL REACHES $683,418

HAS EXPENDED $312,216

Sloan, Durant, Eastman Among Ten Giving $25,000 Each—Gifts of $20,000 and $15,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Owing to substantial contributions in August, the bottom of the Republican Presidential war chest is now comfortably covered and an appreciable advance toward the $3,000,000 fund which the National Committee is seeking to raise has been made. This was revealed in a financial report filed today with the clerk of the House of Representatives by J. R. Nutt of Cleveland, National Committee Treasurer, in accordance with the pledge contained in the platform that a statement of collections and expenditures would be made public monthly.

Copies of the report were also filed with the Senate and House committees appointed to investigate Presidential campaign expenditures.

According to Treasurer Nutt's statement, the contributions in August were $560,039 and expenditures that month were $263,899. With $98,379 collected in July and $48,317 expended in that month, the total collections to Aug. 31 are $658,418 and the total expenditures $312,216.

On Sept. 1 $25,000 was received from Walter Chrysler of 347 Madison Avenue, New York, manufacturer of the motor car which bears his name and one of the organizers of the Chrysler-Dodge merger. With that contribution the total receipts as of Sept. 1 are $683,418. This is 22.78 per cent. of the maximum $3,000,000 fund sought. Election day will be two months from tomorrow, and between now and then the National Committee must raise $2,316,582, or more than three-fourths of the total desired.

In making Treasurer Nutt's report public the National Committee called attention to the fact that Mr. Chrysler had sent his $25,000 after the close of the August accounting. It also called special attention to a contribution of $25,000 received on Aug. 30 from Alfred P. Sloan Jr. of New York, President of the General Motors Corporation. Apparently it was desired by the committee that the donation of Mr. Sloan should receive prominence in the press to offset the public effect of the fact that John J. Raskob, the "financial wizard" of General Motors, was the manager of Governor Smith's campaign.

The special note attached to Mr. Chrysler's contribution was supposed to be intended as another hint to the electorate that all big men of the automobile industry had not followed Chairman Raskob into the Democratic Party. A summary of the contributions received in August is contained in the following table:

	No. of Contributors.	Amount.
Over $100	246	$553,922.00
$50 to $75	27	1,350.00
Under $50	1,263	4,503.20

In the report of Treasurer Nutt for July the highest contribution listed was for $10,000. Three persons each gave that amount. In August, however, there were ten contributions of $25,000 each, including those of Mr. Sloan and Mr. Chrysler; one of $20,000, one of $15,000, seven of $10,000 and fifteen of $5,000. Mrs. Whitelaw Reid who gave $5,000 in July, is listed in the August report for two contributions, one of $5,000 and the other of $1,000, making her total to date $11,000.

In addition to Mr. Sloan and Mr. Chrysler, those who gave $25,000 in August were E. R. Hutton Mortimer L. Schiff, Webster B. Aldridge and Jeremiah Millbank, Eastern field manager of the Hoover campaign; Charles Hayden and W. C. Durant, the automobile manufacturer, all of New York City, and Ernest L. Woodward of Leroy, N. Y., and George Eastman of Rochester, the camera manufacturer.

The contributor of $20,000 was F. Edson White of Chicago. The $15,000 contribution was made by Arthur Whitney of Mendham, N. J., who in July gave $10,000.

Among those who gave $10,000

WILLEBRANDT GIBE AROUSES WALKER

"Congratulations" on Activity of Police Bring Call for Data on All Dry Arrests Here.

WILL SEND FIGURES TO HER

Information From Precincts Will Include Injunctions Obtained by Speakeasies.

Mayor Walker is about to place on record a report of the activities of his administration, through the municipal police force, in the effort to enforce the Volstead law and to make effective the prohibition amendment.

As the result of a conference last Tuesday, during which the Mayor requested Police Commissioner Warren to supply the detailed facts at the earliest possible moment, Commissioner Warren issued orders to every precinct commander in the city for reports embodying detailed data on all arrests for violations of the Volstead Act and the facts concerning injunction proceedings undertaken to impede padlocking or other restrictive measures undertaken by the police.

Speed was urged upon all precinct commanders as well as accuracy and thoroughness. The information, which is expected to cover the entire period of the Walker Administration since it came into office on Jan. 1, 1926, will probably be in the hands of the Mayor today.

Detailed Information Requested.

The precinct reports, many of which were already in Police Headquarters last night, called for the dates of all arrests for alleged violations of the Prohibition law, designation of the premises in which arrests or raids had been made, the specific charges and the final disposition of all such cases, as well as all available data on court injunctions sought by speakeasy proprietors to restrain the police from further interference with their activities.

Mayor Walker's desire for immediate and comprehensive information on this subject, it was learned, was prompted by his recent receipt of a letter from Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, the Republican Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Federal enforcement of prohibition, in which she is said to have made somewhat ironical comment upon the activities of the New York Mayor and his Police Department in cleaning up the illegal liquor traffic in the metropolis.

The Mayor admitted having received such a letter, but he declined to make it public until he can couple with it the reply which he intends to send after familiarizing himself with the data sought from the Police Department.

Mrs. Willebrandt's communication, a garbled version of which was printed yesterday, "congratulated" Mayor Walker on the apparent recent increase of activity by the police force in helping to eliminate the illegal liquor traffic in New York. Mrs. Willebrandt pointed out the difficulty of Federal enforcement of the prohibition law because of the inadequacy of the number of its agents. She suggested that, as the Mayor has under his orders a police force of 17,000 men, he ought to encounter less difficulty and that, as the city's night clubs which are "nothing more nor less than saloons for rich men," all have to be licensed by the city, he should be in position to make a splendid showing if he is really in earnest in a desire to cooperate with the Federal authorities.

Denies She Called Him Expert.

Mayor Walker was asked last night if it were true, as reported, that Mrs. Willebrandt's letter referred to him as one who ought to make "a first-class inspector of night clubs."

"No," said the Mayor, laughingly. "There was no such personal reference in the letter, which was entirely courteous in all its terms. Even if there had been such a suggestion I fear I could not qualify to Mrs. Willebrandt's satisfaction, as I have been in a New York night club only once in the last three years. I will say this, however: If I were to qualify as an inspector I don't think I should need to become a reckless purchaser of orchids or of Staten Island champagne or to spend $60,000 of the Government's money to learn facts which are well known to vir-

DEMOCRATS PLAN WAR ON CAMPAIGN OF 'WHISPERERS'

Speakers and Pamphlets Will Be Used to Meet Attacks on Governor Smith.

PARTY LEADERS AROUSED

Nominee Is Expected to Reply to the Insinuations When He Takes the Stump.

SURVEY OF APPOINTMENTS

ALBANY, Sept. 5.—The full strength of the Democratic Party is to be thrown against the "whispering campaign" which its leaders believe is being directed against the national ticket, it was indicated here today.

Speakers selected by the national committee and pamphlets now in the course of preparation are to be sent into territory exposed to the tactics of "insinuation and innuendo" to follow the lead of Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Vice Presidential candidate, in meeting covert attacks on the character and religious faith of Governor Smith with open challenge and reasoned argument.

Although the Governor is ignoring the "whispers" and is not participating in plans to bring them out into the open, he, himself, may be drawn into the fight before his campaign is over. He is understood to share the feeling of his executive subordinates, against the increasing reports of what they term the "underhanded" assaults upon his candidacy. If during his campaign tour he comes upon evidence of "whispering," his associates are confident that he will desert his prepared speech to meet it face to face.

"Whisperings" in New York.

One report to the Smith camp has it that even in New York there are signs of insidious campaigning. According to this story, a house-to-house canvass has been made among some of the Protestant families in one up-State County to warn them that the election of the Democratic candidate would mean "priest rule" in the United States.

It was this so-called whispered charge that Senator Robinson denounced at Dallas, Texas, on Monday. He roundly condemned, too, whispered reports that his running mate was a "drunkard" and attacked the accusations against the Governor's legislative record made by William Allen White, the Kansas editor.

Governor Smith himself has replied to Mr. White and the officials of the national committee believe that the answer speaks for itself. It is on the insinuations of religious favoritism that the committee is now planning a reply.

Dissatisfied with preliminary surveys of the religious affiliations of the Governor's appointees and the subordinates in his administration, which were compiled for pre-convention use, a group headed by Secretary of State Robert Moses has almost completed a comprehensive survey of the religious representation in the State government. A part of the result is already in type and will be distributed soon by the national committee. It will list several hundred names of appointees and include biographies of those who have received the most authority.

Mr. Moses in a statement summarized a part of the findings today. They show ten Protestants, three Catholics and a Jew in the Governor's Cabinet of fourteen fully accredited members, and fourteen Protestants with eleven Catholics among the twenty-five other major officials at the head of State departments and the more important departmental divisions.

According to the new compilation the other present State officials now in office, whose appointments are approved by the Governor, not including judicial appointments, are overwhelmingly Protestant in their church connections. There are thir-

31 PLANES REACH COLUMBUS IN FIRST LAP OF AIR DERBY; SIX MAKE FORCED LANDINGS

Free State Plans Air Line Between Dublin and Paris

Special Cable to The New York Times.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—The establishment of a regular air route between Paris and Dublin is under serious consideration by the Irish Free State. Osmond Grattan Esmond, member for Dexford in the Irish Free State Chamber of Deputies—the Dail Eireann—is now in the French capital discussing the situation with French aerial transport officials.

Mr. Esmond left Argenteuil, near Paris, today for Dublin by air. The flight will take him via Cherbourg and Wexford. He plans to return by the same way with an idea of selecting a Paris-Dublin air route. His plane and pilot both are French.

ICY WATER DEFEATS 199 IN TORONTO SWIM

MANY OTHERS COLLAPSED

Finish of $25,000 Marathon Is Seen by 150,000—Awards of Prizes Are in Doubt.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Sept. 5.—Last survivor of 199 contestants in the Wrigley Marathon swim, with prizes of $25,000, Georges Michel, corpulent baker from France and conqueror of the English Channel, was taken from the water at 10:15 o'clock tonight.

He had then completed twelve and one-half miles of the fifteen-mile course but was completely exhausted as he gave up.

Previously to this he had been paddling along in floodlighted waters, doggedly hoping to reach the goal.

Along the shore were mustered probably 150,000 persons, awaiting the outcome of one of the most extraordinary tests of endurance in an athletic contest.

Almost from the start of the race the chilly waters of Lake Ontario forced the ambitious swimmers to quit the struggle.

At 6:40 o'clock there were only three left in the race. Ernst Vierkoetter of Cologne, who was leading everybody by a mile and a half; Michel and Louis I. Mathias of Long Island. Only ten minutes before Roland H. Tegetmeier of Seattle had quit.

Then Vierkoetter, who had been weakening, but gone ahead of all competitors, as he did a year ago, collapsed. He was hauled into the Red Cross boat, unconscious. He was only 3½ miles from the finishing goal.

It was a day of casualties among swimmers of note. George Young, Catalina champion, went under at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. He had overhauled Norman Ross of Chicago in a thrilling sprint at the end of the second lap. Ross, outdistanced, gave up. Then Vierkoetter came along after Young and in another spectacular duel headed the Canadian. The two ordeals and the cold were too much for Young who signaled that he was through.

Mendell Burditt of Toronto, who was taken out of the water later, was unconscious for ten minutes.

The collapse of Mathias was so serious that he nearly died, hospital authorities said, but he came around finally.

Olive Gotterdam, who was second in the women's marathon a week ago and the only woman entrant, lasted for only about a mile. So much dif-

EARL ROWLAND IS LEADER

Arrives 11 Minutes Ahead of Robert Dake in the Class A Race.

FLIERS GO ON THIS MORNING

Weather May Delay Start Here Today of B Group—$5,000 in Prizes Added.

Earl Rowland, piloting a Cessna monoplane, was the first of Class A in the transcontinental air derby which started at Roosevelt Field, L. I., yesterday morning, to land at Norton Field, Columbus, Ohio. He dropped down from the east at 11:05 A. M., after a faultless ride over the mountains. Columbus was the first overnight stop and all the planes which reached there remained for a second lap westward this morning.

Rowland was just eleven minutes ahead of Robert Dake in the small American Moth, powered with one of the new Warner motors, who landed at 11:16 A. M.

Thirty-seven planes left Roosevelt Field at 6:43 A. M. yesterday, and last night thirty-one of them had been checked in at Columbus. Six were forced down on the way, there were a number of landings due to mechanical troubles and one plane dropped an oil tank, but in most cases the mishaps were slight and resulted in nothing more than a quick hunt for a landing field.

Two Races Due to Start Today.

Twenty-one planes in Class B and four larger and faster planes in Class C were scheduled to leave Roosevelt Field this morning in the second and third races to leave for the Pacific Coast. The non-stop race will start next Wednesday.

It seemed probable last night, however, that Class B might not be able to start until late in the day because of weather conditions. The reports received at Roosevelt Field showed unfavorable flying conditions, and Lieutenant H. B. Clark, manager of the field, said that he would not let them leave unless the weather improved. There was a low ceiling reported over the Alleghanies which would make flying over the mountains a difficult task, he said.

Close behind the leaders last night was E. J. Kramer of Tarrytown, N. Y., who made a good record in the derby to Spokane last year. Theodore Kenyon of Boston, who is flying with his wife, came in fourth, landing only forty-five minutes behind Rowland. The Kenyons have been flying together for some time, and do most of their traveling by air.

Following is the order of the arrival of the planes at Columbus, and the hour of their landing (Eastern Standard Time):

Kellogg Reads Detective Stories on Ship, Resting After Strenuous Days in Europe

Wireless to The New York Times.

ON BOARD THE LEVIATHAN, Sept. 5.—With his treaty to renounce war finally locked in the Leviathan's strongbox and with a ten days' strenuous round of European entertainment behind him, Secretary Kellogg has settled down to a voyage during which he will mix work with reading.

His first words on coming aboard last night were "who has got anything exciting to read? I am completely out. I must have good detective stories."

Mr. Kellogg started out with a good supply of mystery novels, but he finished them coming across. Fortunately Ambassador Houghton had given Spencer Phenix, Mr. Kellogg's adviser, a stack of novels and the Secretary was able to read himself to sleep.

Most of the day Mr. Kellogg spent in preparing one of the speeches he will deliver on his return, namely, that for the dedication of the Severance Memorial Hall, Carleton College, Northfield, Minn. Mr. Kellogg has refused nearly all requests to make speeches following his return, but since the hall is in memory of Cordenio A. Severance, his former law partner, he is making this ceremony an exception.

Mr. Kellogg also paid a call on Sir Thomas Lipton, thanking him for giving up his suite. The famous yachtsman replied that the first time he came to America he traveled steerage, and this time he was only too glad to be able to relinquish his first-class suite to the Secretary of State of the United States.

During the morning Mr. Kellogg chatted with several Washington friends, among them being Senator Edge and Supreme Court Justice Sutherland.

Other Congressional travelers returning aboard the Leviathan are Representative E. R. Ackerman, Representative Frederick M. Davenport, Fiorello LaGuardia and Representative J. C. Linthicum.

Strike in 50 Legitimate Theatres Talked; Managers Fight Stage Hands Over Wages

With no agreement yet reached between the stage hands and the theatrical managers, union leaders were inclined to feel yesterday that a strike was possible, although this opinion was not shared by the managers. The old agreement between the International Theatrical Association and Local No. 1 of the Theatrical Protective Union expired on Sept. 2, and negotiations for a new agreement have been in progress daily. In previous years, when the period of negotiation exceeded the term of the old agreement, the new terms agreed upon were made retroactive.

The question at issue is one of wages, and all of the city's legitimate theatres would be affected in the event of a strike. It is estimated that about 2,000 stage hands are concerned.

About fifty managers or their representatives met yesterday in the Hotel Astor and voted to leave negotiations in the hands of the Labor Committee, which is composed of Ralph W. Long, Chairman; Harry D. Kline, Leonard Bergman, David B. Finestone, Ligon Johnson and J. J. Dillon. This board will meet early this afternoon, and confer later in the day with representatives of the union. A special meeting of the union will probably be held on Saturday to accept or reject a revised wage scale proposed by both committees.

The union is asking $100 weekly for department heads, of whom three are required at each theatre—property man, carpenter and electrician. They are now receiving from $75 to $100. Assistants to department heads, who have been receiving $55 weekly, are asking $90. The union is also asking a change in working hours, a crew of seven men in theatres alternating weekly with musical and dramatic attractions, and $8 a performance for ordinary stagehands, or grips. These last are now paid at the rate of $6 a performance.

The old agreement was made two years ago.

Walter E. Nicoll of Detroit, who made a forced landing near Boston, Pa., and Paul Estes Charles, who landed near Woodlawn, Pa. Both the planes were damaged and are out of the race. With Nicoll was Dr. Joseph A. Nowacki of Detroit, who had entered two Mohawk Pintos, but as his plane was unable to start he went on with Nicoll.

The plane piloted by H. A. Speer of Cincinnati was reported out of Middletown, Pa., but did not reach Columbus. Wilford E. Gerbracht flying a Travel Air landed at Middletown with engine trouble. Douglas Davis of Georgia made a forced landing at Lebanon and cracked up his ship, but escaped without injury. S. P. Gilley was forced down near Coatsville, Pa., but left again for Middletown. He did not reach Columbus.

George W. Hopkins in his Stinson Jr. lost an oil tank somewhere just before he reached Columbus, and when he arrived he telephoned to Detroit for another. It was taken to him in the Stinson-Detroiter in which Eddie Stinson and George Haldeman set an altitude record in Florida, and which will be entered in the non-stop race.

Big Crowd Sees Start.

A large crowd of people who shivered in the early morning air saw the planes leave Roosevelt Field for their first stop at Middletown.

As early as 4 o'clock many men, women and children had gathered at the field, hugging coats about them and glancing frequently at the eastern sky for the sunrise, which did not come till after 6 o'clock. Aviators and their mechanics put the final touches on planes by the light of pocket flashlights. The planes, all stock models of relatively low power rating, but of varied design, stretched away from the hangar and down the fairway, a long row of dim bird-like forms.

In the main hangar officials bustled around making last-minute check-up of entries and order of start, while flier after flier went to telephones to inquire the weather conditions from Mitchel Field. "Flying conditions excellent from here to the Alleghanies," was the report. There was a northwest ground wind of three miles per hour, rising in velocity at an altitude of 5,000 feet.

At 6 o'clock, when the night sky was turning gray, the telephone in the main hangar office rang and Stephen S. Day, Chairman of the Air Derby Committee, was called to the instrument by Mayor George E. Crier of Los Angeles.

"Fine. The weather's fine," said Mr. Day. "No, we can't start for another fifteen or twenty minutes. We need more light." Ruth Elder, who flew most of the way across the Atlantic before her ship came down and was rescued, came on the wire at the other end and wished all "good luck."

Mayor Crier's voice was heard again, saying "Give my regards to Mayor Jimmie."

Planes Line Up for Take-Off.

Meanwhile, George Townsend, starter, and his assistant, George Post, were arranging the planes in a north and south line that stretched across the field. The air vibrated with the drumming of many motors.

The sun peeped out from banks of brilliantly colored clouds, throwing long shadows of wings down the turf. Mr. Townsend and Talbot O. Freeman, official timer, hurried across the field. A squadron of motorcycle police bumped over the sod and ordered the crowd back.

The starter dropped a red flag and the first plane, roaring with open throttle, lurched forward, sped a few hundred feet and swerved up into the air. It was a Waco 10 with Fisher & Jacobs air-cooled radial motor, piloted by Albert R. Jacobs. It left at 6:43:45 o'clock.

A minute later the flag dropped again. Another roar, and the second plane was off, heading into the west on the tail of the Waco. At intervals of about one minute, plane after plane took to the air, each disappearing into the haze within three or four minutes.

The last plane, a Travel Air with Curtiss O-X-5 motor, got away at 7:27:27 o'clock. None of them suffered any mishap here. Clinton A. Burrows, one of the entrants, was prevented from flying by illness. The planes are scheduled to make sixteen stops en route to Los Angeles, terminus of the race. Prizes are offered at most of the cities where they stop.

There was some possibility for a time yesterday that a number of pilots in the Class B race would not start today because of a protest which they made against three Wacos and two Laird plane entries. The pilots sent word to Chairman Day of the starting committee that these planes had special racing wings and were not stock models, a protest similar to that which was entered against a number of planes last year. Mr. Day referred the protest to Harry Booth, advisory engineer, and Mr. Booth ruled that the planes complied with the regulations.

Prize Money Increased.

However, W. A. Burns of the Richfield Oil Company, who is one of the backers of the race, said he felt that the Los Angeles committee would provide money for additional prizes and this was arranged over the long-distance telephone. Additional prizes to the extent of $5,000 were offered, making the total purse $20,000 for this race, and the protesting pilots agreed to fly. They said they felt impelled to make the protest as many of them had put all the money they had into preparation for the race and did not feel that they had a chance against the faster planes.

The planes in Class B which will start today in the order of their starting are:

Lee Schoenhair, Buhl with Wright Whirlwind.
C. W. ("Speed") Holman, Laird with Wright Whirlwind.
Stuart F. Auer, Waco 10, Whirlwind.
Paul R. Braniff, Travel Air, Whirlwind.
G. C. Quick, Cessna with Cessna Anzani motor.
John Livingston, Waco 10, Whirlwind.
Matthew W. Whittall, Fairchild, Whirlwind.
John P. Wood, Waco, Whirlwind.
C. W. Meyers, Waco 10, Whirlwind.
E. E. Beilough, Laird, Whirlwind.
C. W. Mayse, Waco 10, Whirlwind.
Leo Nomis, Travel Air, Whirlwind.
Edward G. Schultz, Cessna, Whirlwind.
Errold Bahl, Lockheed - Vega, Whirlwind.
Francis Bowhan, Cessna, Whirlwind.
A Travel Air, Whirlwind, pilot unannounced.
Ive McKinney, Pacer, Whirlwind.
R. H. Shaw, Lockheed-Vega, Whirlwind.
J. Warren Smith, Cessna, Whirlwind.
Jay Sodowsky, Cessna, Whirlwind.
R. J. Merritt, Ryan, Whirlwind.

In Class C, the larger planes, which will get away later in the morning, there are the following pilots and planes:

Robert W. Cantwell, Lockheed-Vega, Pratt & Whitney Wasp engine.
Edward J. Brooks, Fokker Super Universal, Wasp.
Pilot Williams, Cox-Klemin, Liberty.
Captain C. B. D. Collyer, Fairchild, Wasp.

GOODYEAR LEADS IN AIRSHIP DESIGN

Three Out of Seven Approved by Navy Board Were Submitted by Akron Company.

BIDS MADE FOR BUILDING

Craft of the Preferred Specifications Would Cost $5,450,000 Each, or Two for $7,950,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—The Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation of Akron led all competitors who submitted designs for the two new dirigibles of 6,500,000 cubic feet of volume each, according to the Naval Board judging designs, whose report to the Secretary of the Navy was made public today.

Ten designs were submitted, but only seven of these substantially fulfilled the requirements that had been laid down.

Three of these were from the Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation.

Under the terms of this company's bid it would construct two dirigibles under the first of its designs for $7,950,000, or one for $5,450,000; it would construct two under its second design for $7,750,000, or one for $5,350,000; it would construct two under its third design for $7,575,000, or one for $5,275,000.

The American Brown Boveri Electric Corporation offered to build two airships for $9,000,000, or one for $5,880,000.

S. V. Trent of Los Angeles offered to build one for $2,426,000.

Designs as Listed.

No construction bids were made by the other cometitors. The Navy Department in its specifications called for designs on three projects, and the Board reported the designs submitted to be of the following order of merit:

(1) Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation, Project I:
(a) Rubber gas cells with Maybach engines	91.9
(b) Rubber gas cells with Packard engines	90.8
(2) Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation, Project III, with rubber gas cells	90.6
(3) Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation, Project II, with rubber gas cells	89.9
(4) Schuette & Co.	87.2
(6) Max Kaestner	66.7
(7) Geisler & Seth	61.2

Three design competitors were listed under the classification of "those which cannot be considered, due to lack of information, but which represent considerable thought and time"—Gustav Wilhelm Hagemann, Oschatz, Germany; E. Pollak, 706 Monroe Street, Brooklyn, and S. V. Trent of Los Angeles.

Albrecht Luck, 524 Wales Avenue, the Bronx, was listed under the classification, "Those which are merely sketches descriptive of an idea and as a design can receive no consideration."

The prices quoted by the several competitors for the designs were given with the following comment:

"It should be understood that in a matter so involved as this, direct comparisons between bid prices are impracticable. A full knowledge of all qualifying clauses, reservations, guarantees and other pertinent matters is necessary before any real comparison of prices is possible."

Quotes Prices for Designs.

The quoted prices for designs were:

American Brown-Boveri Electric Corporation	$100,000
Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation—
Design 1	1,750,000
Design 3	1,650,000
Max Kaestner	285,000
Schuette & Co.	No price quoted
Gustav Wilhelm Hagemann	No price quoted
E. Pollak	25,000
S. V. Trent	No price quoted

Congress has authorized $8,000,000 for the construction of the two dirigibles. The sum of $2,500,000 has been set aside for beginning the work.

The board of judges consisted of Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, Commander S. M. Kraus, Lieut. Commander C. H. Havill, Lieutenant T. G. W. Settle and Lieutenant G. V. Whittle, all of the United States Navy.

"The Navy Department," it said in a statement today, "appreciates the interest shown by all the competitors. It is a favorable omen for the future development of the airship industry. After the lapse of the ten-day period specified by law, the department will proceed as promptly as possible to let a contract for the two ships which Congress, with the approval of the President, has authorized and appropriated for."

CHAMBERLIN PLANS AIR LINE TO CAPITAL

Expects to Begin Operation Over New Water Route to Washington Next Week.

Clarence Chamberlin, who piloted Charles A. Levine to Germany, is contemplating starting an air line from New York to Washington using amphibian planes. There have been a number of attempts to run air lines on this route, but Chamberlin has in mind a different route than was ever traversed before, one that will take passengers over the water nearly all the way and provide landing places on the water or land nearly every mile of the way.

He expects to begin the operation of his line next week, although he wishes to have landing stages with ramps constructed first so that he will be able to embark and land his passengers comfortably on the Hudson. Climbing out of a boat on the river into a plane or tying up to a buoy before disembarking is not a good way, Chamberlin thinks, to encourage flying.

Several trips have been made between New York and Washington already in laying out a route and making arrangements for landing, the plane being a Loening amphibian which will hold four and possibly six passengers. The plane will leave New York about 10:30 o'clock and arrive at Washington about 1 o'clock, and will leave Washington at 4 and arrive at New York about 6:30.

The plane will follow the water down to Perth Amboy, then will fly overland to the Delaware River, which it will follow past Philadelphia, then down the canal below Wilmington to the Chesapeake, and after another short overland hop will land either in the Potomac or at Hoover Field. Hugh Wells, formerly pilot on the Colonial Line between New York and Washington, one of the most difficult routes in the country, and on the Pan-American air line between Key West and Cuba, and now a test pilot for Fokker, will pilot the first plane to inaugurate service. If it proves popular other Sikorskys and Loenings will be purchased. The fare will be between $35 and $40.

DIRIGIBLE TO SEEK ITALIA.

N-5, Sister Ship, Is Being Fitted for Final Hunt for Explorers.

ROME, Sept. 5 (AP).—The dirigible N-5, a sister ship of the lost Italia, is being prepared for a final attempt to locate those of the Italia's crew last seen with the gas bag, says the Giornale d'Italia today.

The dirigible will have Maibach motors and in a few technical details will differ from its ill-fated predecessor. It is said that General Nobile himself is supervising the work, and it is expected that the N-5 will be taken to the Ciampano flying field before the end of the week.

The newspaper adds that General Nobile and the other experts preparing for the expedition are skeptical about the fires seen on Franz Josef Land being significant of the whereabouts of the missing men from the Italia. They are determined, however, that something must be done within a few weeks as the long polar night is at hand.

The newspaper relates further that General Nobile is going all over the scientific data brought back from the North in the hope of finding something that will aid in determining the methods to be adopted with the N-5.

SEES CHICAGO PORT OF 40 PLANES DAILY

Air Transport Manager Says Huge Passenger Ships Will Serve 109 Large Cities.

FLIGHT MAIL TONNAGE GAINS

With Rates Down, August Increased Loads of Postal Machines—Two New Services Announced.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 5.—Forty passenger planes will be flying in and out of Chicago every day within the next year, Thomas Wolfe, Division Traffic Manager for the National Air Transport Company, predicted in an address today before members of the Chicago Shippers' Association.

"These planes, most of which will be tri-motored and carry from ten to twelve passengers, indirectly will serve 109 large cities, embracing an area having 70,000,000 population."

A 60 per cent. increase in air mail tonnage over July's figure was registered in August, with the planes now handling from five to seven tons of mail daily since the decrease in rates, according to Mr. Wolfe.

When operations begin on air-mail routes which are now being surveyed, postal planes in this country will fly more than 10,000,000 miles a year, according to an announcement today by the American Air Transport Association.

Included in the routes which are to begin operations not later than Jan. 1, 1929, is the Chicago-Atlanta airway, with spurs from Evansville, Ind., to St. Louis and Louisville, and from Atlanta to Miami. The next few months also will witness inauguration of air-mail service to Montreal, and to the Panama Canal Zone and Mexico.

At present, air-Mail planes are flying approximately 25,000 miles a day. The planes operating on the New York-San Francisco route, 2,895 miles long, will fly nearly 3,000,000 miles this year and will carry more than half of the total mail poundage of the country.

Mail planes are doing more night flying than ever before, operating over 7,000 miles of lighted airways, while the Government plans to light an additional 4,000 miles during the year.

Additional airplane passenger service from Chicago to St. Paul and Minneapolis has been announced by Northwest Airways.

P. G. Kemp, President of the Universal Airways System, which operates mail and passenger planes between Chicago and Cleveland, today announced the inauguration on Saturday of an additional passenger service between the two cities.

FOUR BYRD PLANES TO FLY SOUTH TODAY

To Leave Mitchel Field for Hampton Roads—The Floyd Bennett Will Test New Radio Sets.

Special to The New York Times.

MITCHEL FIELD, L. I., Sept. 5.—The four planes to be used by Commander Byrd on his expedition to the South Pole have been fully tested at this field and are prepared to leave tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock on a flight to Hampton Roads, prior to their shipment from Norfolk, Va., according to Bernt Balchen, chief pilot, who was in charge of operations at the field today.

The trimotored Ford monoplane Floyd Bennett was equipped with a set for radio beacon reception of from 550 to 750 meters, which will be tested more fully on the flight tomorrow, according to A. W. Parkes, engineer of the radio frequency laboratories at Boonton, N. J., in charge of the installation.

The other planes, including the Fokker Universal cabin monoplane the Virginia, for use at the base; the Fairchild monoplane the Stars and Stripes and the small General Airplanes Corporation monoplane, will be piloted by Harold I. June and Dean Smith.

BALTIMORE SUN FOR SMITH.

Paper Declares Support for Him as "The Better Man" in Race.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 5.—The Baltimore Sun, independent, in an editorial statement to be published tomorrow, is declaring its support for Governor Smith as "the better man" in the Presidential contest.

Praising "Mr. Hoover's virtues," The Sun says, "the good qualities that he shows are in Governor Smith, too, and in addition Governor Smith has many that he lacks. "One of them is frankness. Smith is the frankest man heard of in American public life since Grover Cleveland. . . . With this frankness goes courage. When he thinks he is right, he sticks bravely to his guns and no lure of political advantage can move him. More than once in New York he has risked his whole career for what he regarded as the truth. He is risking it again today. No one can call him a trimmer.

"Mr. Hoover, since he took to partisan politics, has shown no such candor and reason. No one knew what he thought about any major issue until the nomination was safely in his hands. His campaign was a campaign of policy, of compromise, of tricks and evasions. He has nothing to say about prohibition, though the country talked of little else."

It was at 6 o'clock that Vierkoetter showed signs of distress, and had apparently lost his sense of direction. First his stroke slowed down, then he stopped swimming altogether, while the people in his boat shouted directions to him and implored him to keep going.

two or three minutes he halted entirely and frequently took nourishment.

A Picturesque Start.

To the thousands of spectators it was apparent that he was in dire straits. When he was finally pulled out of the water he was in an almost stupified condition.

With the crack of the gun the 199 swimmers hit the water at 11 o'clock in the morning. Lyle S. Hubbard took the lead and was followed by O. C. Hummel. These two swam that way out through the breakwater gap into the lake. A few seconds later came Norman Ross of Chicago, then Vierkoetter and Byron Summers, swimming stroke for stroke and shoulder to shoulder. Next came George Young, J. H. Hawkins, Georges Michel, Key Mullins, Mark E. Wheeler and Olive Gatterdam. Another few seconds space and a group of swimmers broke into the gap together.

The fastest man in the start was the first man out through the gap from the breakwater into the rougher, colder water of the lake proper. The temperature of the water was said to be fifty-two degrees. George Young said that it seemed like zero further out in the lake.

Talk of Giving Part of Prize Money.

TORONTO, Ontario, Sept. 5.—Agreeing that the temperature of Lake Ontario was responsible for the failure of all the entrants in the Wrigley marathon to finish the course today, officials will meet tomorrow to discuss allocation of a part, at least, of the $35,000 prize money.

MRS. KNAPP'S APPEAL TO BE DECIDED TODAY

Former State Official Wants Release From Jail in Fight for Theft Vindication.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 5.—It will be determined tomorrow whether lawyers for Mrs. Florence E. S. Knapp, former Secretary of State, convicted of grand larceny in connection with stealing funds during the taking of the last State census and now serving a thirty-day sentence in the Albany County Jail, are to make an appeal, according to Earl Barkhuff, who is associated with John J. Conway, counsel for Mrs. Knapp.

Mrs. Knapp, who started her sentence yesterday, is reported to be insistent that a certificate of reasonable doubt be sought. This would release her from jail and place her under bond. It is understood that many friends of Mrs. Knapp have urged her to spend the thirty days in jail and then have the matter dropped forever.

To this Mrs. Knapp is reported to be opposed, for she seeks vindication. However, tomorrow's conference with her lawyers will settle the question.

Mrs. Knapp is occupying a large, comfortable front room in the quarters of Sheriff Joseph H. Henchey and Mrs. Henchey. Her room is filled with flowers, and Mrs. Henchey has seen to it that edible dainties are supplied to the former Secretary of State.

While Mrs. Knapp is said to have partially adjusted herself to conditions, she not infrequently bursts into tears and bemoans her fate. Mrs. Knapp's stepson has arranged to have her meals sent in from a hotel.

The room which Mrs. Knapp occupies is directly over the women's quarters of the jail, where nine other women are under lock and key. The room assigned her is known as the jail sick room, and here the women prisoners are cared for in case they are taken ill.

Roma Tests Radio in Flight.

CURTISS FIELD, L. I., Sept. 5.—The Bellanca sesquiplane Roma, in which Cesare Sabelli, Peter Bonelli and Roger Q. Williams hope some day to fly from New York to Rome, was taken up this afternoon by Williams for a forty-minute test of its radio apparatus. When it descended Bonelli, who is radio expert for the party, said it functioned satisfactorily, but gave not details. Dr. L. M. Piscull went along as a passenger.

COOLIDGE DISPLAYS PROWESS AT TRAPS

HANDLES HIS GUN EXPERTLY

By a Staff Correspondent of The New York Times.

SUPERIOR, Wis., Sept. 5.—Before a gallery of thirty persons President Coolidge today proved his prowess as a trap-shooter, breaking twenty-nine out of thirty-seven clay pigeons as they went whirling through the air. Motion picture cameras and "still" machines were pointed at the President as he fired away with his twelve-gauge automatic shotgun, but, unperturbed, he shattered one after another of the clay birds at a range of about fifty yards.

Of the thirty-seven shots, Mr. Coolidge missed the fourth, fifth, fifteenth, nineteenth, twenty-fourth, twenty-sixth, thirtieth and thirty-fifth pigeons. He set out to demolish as many of twenty-five as he could, and did break all but five of these. The shots after the twenty-fifth were made merely to please the photographers.

Although statements concerning the President's skill at the traps have come from members of his staff, the performance today was the first witnessed by outsiders. The invited group met Mr. Coolidge by appointment early in the morning at a small range on the grounds of Cedar Island Lodge. Correspondents and photographers saw there a small-tented pavilion overlooking a green, half-sunken trap box fifteen yards away.

President Is Dressed for Part.

In a few minutes the President came walking through the dewy grass with Colonel E. W. Starling of the Secret Service and other members of the entourage. The Executive was dressed in his famous ten-gallon hat, creased cowboy fashion, and with a feather in the band; khaki riding trousers, 14-inch moccasin-type laced boots and a Brule stag jacket, which is a red-and-black mackinaw with a green fish over the right breast. Shining on his bosom was his gold fishing license. Peeping above the coat was a stiff white turned-down collar fastened with a neat necktie.

Losing no time, the President raised the gun to his shoulder and held it there.

"Ready!" he called.

Colonel E. W. Lambert, Superintendent of the Pierce estate, sprung the trap and the clay pigeon sailed outward.

Mr. Coolidge sighted it, held it in his vision, pulled the trigger. Bang! The target flew to pieces in the air.

Two more birds were hit, then Mr. Coolidge missed the following two. Then he shot nine targets to smithereens. The ninth pigeon flung from the trap wabbled in the sky, but Mr. Coolidge brought it down as easily as he did the foregoing.

As the sixteenth pigeon rose from the trap, Mr. Coolidge started to fire, but found his gun had not been closed at the breech. This bird was not counted. As he missed the thirtieth bird, Colonel Starling remarked:

"That was a wavy bird."

"No, I waved my gun," the President protested.

To visitors Mr. Coolidge explained that he had not had a great deal of experience with a shotgun, but had handled a rifle considerably about fifteen years ago. He added that when a boy he had used an old flintlock muzzle-loading shotgun, a relic of the Revolutionary War, to fire dried peas at squirrels. His manner of shooting now showed confidence of his ability to hit the clay pigeons.

Attends Fair With Mrs. Coolidge.

After the trapshooting the President and Mrs. Coolidge were photographed with their dogs outside the dining room of the estate. Rob Roy, scenting food, tried consistently to get inside the dining hall. Tiny Tim, the Chow, was obstreperous, and the President caught him by the tail, pivoted him on his foreleg and sat him firmly down.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge attended the Tri-State Fair at Superior in the afternoon, receiving an ovation as they entered. They remained an hour and a quarter, seeing two trotting races and part of a vaudeville performance. George Babb, the President's preceptor in fly-fishing, was the official starter of the races.

On the way to the Fair Grounds George Harris, a Douglas County motorcycle officer clearing the streets for the Presidential party, was in a collision with an automobile, suffering a broken arm and other injuries. Learning of the accident, the Coolidges, returning to Cedar Island, called at the hospital to offer their sympathy.

HURL EGGS IN ALABAMA AT CRITIC OF SMITH

Two Bombardments Follow Evangelist's Debate With Woman Over Catholic Church.

FLORENCE, Ala., Sept. 5 (AP).—The rostrum in the auditorium of the Lauderdale County Court House here from which the Rev. George E. Wilburn, a Little Rock (Ark.,) evangelist, was delivering an anti-Smith speech, was twice pelted with eggs thrown by unidentified persons last night after he had engaged in a debate with a woman in the audience over his utterances concerning Catholicism.

Although, as the minister said, "the eggs came from every direction," no hits were scored, but the rostrum was badly spattered. The Rev. Mr. Wilburn never moved from his position during the bombardment, and on its completion finished his attacks on Governor Smith of New York, the Democratic standard-bearer.

Miss Jem Weakley of Florence, a Smith supporter, rose from her seat in the audience and took the evangelist to task for his criticism of Governor Smith's adherence to Catholicism. Miss Weakley declared she had a sister who was a member of the Catholic Church and that Wilburn's statement regarding that Church was untrue.

Fifty Smith Votes in One Family.

Sandy McBeth of McBeth's Cross Roads, five miles west of Dixon, Miss., has informed Democratic national headquarters that he would deliver fifty votes, all of his own family, for Smith. Mr. McBeth is 76 years old. He and his wife, who is 66, have twenty sons and daughters. With sons-in-law, daughters-in-law and grandchildren there are fifty qualified voters in the family, and Mr. McBeth announced his intention of seeing that all went to the polls.

RUDOLPH SPRECKELS FOR SMITH AS WET

Californian Champion of Civic Reform Says 18th Amendment Corrupts the Nation.

CONDEMNS HOOVER STAND

Governor Also Wins Support of De Lancey Kountze and Hibbs, Regular Republicans.

THEY, TOO, ARE FINANCIERS

Kountze Asserts Fearlessness of Governor on Public Issues Shows He Merits Election.

Declaring that the position taken by Governor Smith offered the only hope for legislation to promote temperance and stop gang war murders, poisoned alcohol, hypocrisy and the debauching of the youth of the nation, Rudolph Spreckels of San Francisco, banker, civic reformer and member of the family of sugar planters and refiners, declared yesterday for the Governor in a letter to John J. Raskob, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee. The letter, which was dated at Mr. Spreckels's office at 82 Wall Street in this city, was made public by Mr. Raskob.

Mr. Spreckels, who was originally a Republican, has not much of a record for party regularity in recent years. He supported Woodrow Wilson for President in 1912 and Senator Robert M. La Follette for President in 1924.

Mr. Spreckels's Letter.

The letter to Mr. Raskob follows:

John J. Raskob, Esq.,
Democratic Campaign Committee.
Dear Sir:

Believing it to be the duty of every good citizen to take a definite stand on public questions, I have given careful consideration to the issues in the Presidential campaign. It is my firm conviction that today there is no material difference between the Democratic and Republican Parties on Governmental policies. Therefore, I have turned my attention to an examination of the publicly expressed views of the candidates for President. The only important conflict of opinion between Governor Smith and Herbert Hoover, so far developed, is in regard to prohibition. That is a question far more serious to the welfare of this nation than is any other awaiting our decision on Nov. 6.

The Eighteenth Amendment was adopted nine years ago and no fair-minded person can honestly claim that it has promoted the cause of temperance. And every sincere advocate of good government must realize that the era of corruption, hypocrisy and disrespect for law directly chargeable to the Eighteenth Amendment is a distinct menace. Neither Governor Smith nor Herbert Hoover could, as President, enforce a law so repugnant to vast numbers of our people, and any serious attempt to do so would, no doubt, lead to serious conflicts between those holding opposing views upon that subject.

Governor Smith has courageously stated his views upon this all important problem. While he, as President, could only recommend repeal or modification, his election would be regarded by the members of various State Legislatures and the members of Congress as a mandate to them, from the people, to follow the President's suggestions in that respect. Therein lies the hope of reasonable legislation to promote temperance and correct the evils fastened upon us through the Eighteenth Amendment.

Herbert Hoover, on the other hand, has announced that he is opposed to repeal or modification. He would build up still further, at the taxpayers' expense, the great army of enforcement officers, thus enlarging the field of corruption and continue the farce, which after nine years of failure and disastrous consequences, he declares to be a "noble experiment." If the people will, by their votes, indicate approval of the murders, gang wars, poisoning of alcohol, hypocrisy and debauching of our youth, by electing candidates who favor the continuation of prohibition under the Eighteenth Amendment, we may as well admit that nine years of prohibition has destroyed the moral fiber of the American people.

In these circumstances I deem it to be my duty to give my support to Governor Alfred E. Smith.

Very truly yours,
RUDOLPH SPRECKLES.

Two other Republicans, of a more regular type than Mr. Spreckels, declared for Governor Smith during the day. They were W. H. Hibbs, a resident of Virginia, head of W. H. Hibbs & Co., of Washington, D. C., bankers and brokers and members of the New York Stock Exchange, and De Lancey Kountze, banker and Chairman of the board of Devoe & Raynolds Company, Inc., of this city. Mr. Hibbs announced his support of Governor Smith in a telegram to Mr. Raskob. In explaining his position Mr. Kountze said:

"It is my intention to cast my ballot on Nov. 6 for Governor Smith for the Presidency. Although a lifelong Republican I have come to this decision on account of Governor Smith's long public record of fearlessness in stating in no uncertain words his convictions on matters affecting the good of the people of this State, and I believe from the record he has shown in New York that he would carry the same principles to the good of the country at large.

"I admire particularly his attitude on the Eighteenth Amendment. A great many people think that if he is elected he could not do anything to remedy existing conditions. He probably couldn't change anything, but he could lead people to think that something must be done to change the frightful conditions that exist today."

CONDEMN ENTRANCE OF RELIGIOUS ISSUE

Kentucky Lieutenant Governor and Three Others Send Protests to Smith Headquarters.

Statements by four persons denouncing the injection of the religious issue into the campaign were made public at Democratic national headquarters yesterday. There were by Lieutenant Governor James Breathitt Jr. and Desha Breckenridge of Kentucky, Professor Clifford R. Snider of the University of West Virginia and Professor Scott Rowley of Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa.

"Kentucky will be found safely in the Democratic column," said Mr. Breathitt. "The quiet dignity with which Governor Smith has ignored the scurrilous whispering campaign which has been directed against him, together with the straightforward and frank manner with which he dealt with the issues before the American people in his speech of acceptance, has to a large extent overcome the opposition to his views on prohibition.

"I am a Protestant and behind me is more than 150 years of American Protestant ancestry, but I believe there is nothing in the political history of this country which could justify the thought that one who was nurtured at the breast of a Catholic mother is not as patriotic a citizen as one whose footsteps were first led to the chancel of a Protestant church. Certainly, those of us who served in the World War know this to be true and, certainly, those who seek to create a different impression in this country are surely striking at the foundation of free government."

Similar declarations against intolerance were made by Mr. Breckenridge and Professors Snider and Rowley.

LOCKWOOD FOR FISH AS SENATE CANDIDATE

Transit Commissioner Urges Drafting of Congressman to Make Race.

The drafting of Representative Hamilton Fish Jr. from the Twenty-sixth New York District as the Republican candidate for United States Senator was urged last night in a statement issued by Transit Commissioner Charles C. Lockwood, Chairman of the Kings County Republican Committee.

Declaring that the Gubernatorial nomination was certain to go to a New York City man, Chairman Lockwood advocated the choice of Representative Fish, an up-State man, to make the Senatorial fight. He said:

"He served in the State Legislature before the war and has an outstanding record of eight years' continuous service in Congress. His record is one of accomplishment with an appeal to all Republicans. He was an officer of a colored regiment in France, is widely known as the author of the Zionist resolution in Congress and for his measure for the relief of the starving German women and children.

"He has devoted most of his life to public service and comes of a family distinguished in national and State affairs and therefore has the political background which attracts support from the American people."

THOMAS ATTACKS GOVERNOR'S RECORD

Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, asserted last night that Governor Smith had no claim on the votes of labor. Speaking before a conference of trade unionists at Webster Hall, 119 East Eleventh Street, called to aid the Socialist campaign, Mr. Thomas said that in his eight years as Governor, Smith, "the darling of New York labor leaders," has made no fight against injunctions and none for the unemployed or old age insurance. He further assailed Smith's appointment of Raskob, "the open shopper," as his National Chairman.

Immediately after his address Mr. Thomas departed for the West on a speaking tour that will take him to the Pacific Coast. His first address of the series will be delivered at Duluth, Minn., tomorrow night.

The conference, attended by 300 representatives of local unions, resulted in a vote to raise a campaign donation of at least $25,000 by the sale of 50 cent assessment stamps and to organize a New York Trade Union Committee of 1,000 to work in the campaign. Morris Hillquit and A. I. Shiplacoff, President of the International Leather Goods Workers' Union, also spoke.

RASKOB SAYS LIQUOR IS EAST'S BIG ISSUE

Gives First Place to Farm Aid in West—Does Not Believe Religion Will Be a Factor.

SAYS PROSPERITY IS UNEVEN

Enjoyed Chiefly by Large Industry and Not by Small Communities, He Declares.

Relief for agriculture and prohibition were declared to be the paramount issues of the Presidential campaign by John J. Raskob, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, in an interview yesterday at Democratic headquarters. Mr. Raskob placed prohibition first in the East and said farm relief was the most important issue in the West. Questioned about the so-called religious issue, which has been raised against Governor Smith, he replied that the efforts of those engaged in what he called a vicious campaign of religious bigotry would cease to be effective by election day.

Mr. Raskob's discussion of the religious issue was brought about by a question as to what he thought of the assertion of the Rev. Dr. Henry van Dyke in a recent letter that the religious issue was all important.

"I don't think he is right in that," Mr. Raskob replied. "I think the paramount issues are the agricultural situation and prohibition."

Doubts Religion Is an Issue.

"Where would you place the religious issue?" he was asked.

"I dislike to recognize the fact that the American people are making religion an issue in this campaign," Mr. Raskob said. "I don't believe they are. I think it is pretty much exaggerated, largely on account of the publicity the question has received."

"Do you think a lot of the agitation on this will have subsided by Election Day?" he was asked.

"I think that the efforts of those who are engaged in a vicious campaign of religious bigotry will cease to be effective," Mr. Raskob replied. "It is certainly difficult to conceive the American people as being influenced by propaganda tending to spread hatred of any kind, particularly religious hate."

Mr. Raskob made it clear that he regarded the farm relief as particularly important to Governor Smith and declared that the farmer must receive protection, which would put him on an equality with industry.

When asked if he regarded the country as prosperous, Mr. Raskob said:

"I think that with the rest of the world recovering, as it is, from the effects of the war, it is now in a position to challenge a lot of trade we have been getting and that the greatest insurance for our future prosperity will depend upon our ability to increase the purchasing power of the farmer. That can only be done through giving the farmer tariff protection, thus putting him on an equality with industry and enabling him to pay high wages for labor, which he is compelled to pay in competition with industry. This would result in high wages, putting the farms on a profitable earning basis, and thus giving to our farm population which constitutes 30 per cent. of our total population tremendously increased purchasing power. Now purchasing power means consumption and consumption requires production. Production requires labor and labor employed again means purchasing power and thus the cycle of prosperity is completed."

Says Prosperity Has Been Uneven.

Pressed to say whether he believes the country is prosperous, Mr. Raskob said:

"Yes. The country has been prosperous, but it has been spotty. The farmer and the small business man who is dependent upon the farmer have not been prosperous. The prosperity in this country has been confined chiefly to large industry but the farmer and small business man who is dependent on the farmer and the small communities have not been prosperous."

Mr. Raskob was asked whether he expected the discontent among the farmers to be to Governor Smith's advantage.

"The farm organizations are sold on Governor Smith's sincerity," he replied. "He has the reputation of always keeping his promises. The Republicans are laboring under the disadvantage of having made promises of giving relief in 1920 and 1924 but relief has not been forthcoming."

Mr. Raskob added that Governor Smith's itinerary for his speaking campaign was nearly completed and probably would be made public today. It is understood that the Governor will travel West and return for the State Convention at Rochester on Oct. 1 and that he will start on a second speaking trip soon after that.

HOOVER MEN CLAIM STATE BY 100,000

Party Leaders Outside of City Base Estimates on Votes Cast in 1924.

Basing their estimates upon the Presidential vote of 1924, up-State Republican leaders, it was learned yesterday, claim New York State for Herbert Hoover by a margin of at least 100,000 votes. Their calculations, which allow for a falling off of 100,000 in the Republican lead of 1924 in five up-State counties, assume that Governor Smith will pile up a lead in New York City to match his 518,000 margin over Colonel Theodore Roosevelt in the Gubernatorial campaign of that year.

Chairman William H. Hill of the Hoover-Curtis Campaign Committee, who predicted several days ago that Mr. Hoover would come down to the Bronx with a sufficient lead to insure victory, declined yesterday to comment on the up-State leaders' estimates.

While not conceding that Governor Smith would be able to cut down the normal Republican pluralities by the amounts indicated, the party leaders, in forming their estimates, assumed that the Republican pluralities obtained by President Coolidge in 1924 would be diminished as follows: Erie County, 30,000; Onondaga County, 15,000; Oneida County, 10,000; Albany County, 15,000; Monroe County, 30,000; total, 100,000.

President Coolidge came down to the Bronx in 1924 with a margin of 732,000 votes, the leaders up-State pointed out, while Governor Smith, in the same year, piled up a lead of 518,966 votes over Colonel Roosevelt in the five boroughs of New York City. The up-State men are confident that Mr. Hoover will cross the Bronx line with a lead of at least 682,000 votes over Governor Smith, whose plurality in the city they do not expect to surpass that of 1924.

Senator Moses of New Hampshire, Vice Chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Republican National Committee, who returned to his headquarters at the Waldorf yesterday after a trip through New England, reported that conditions in those States looked favorable for Mr. Hoover and that adequate attention was being given to whatever weak spots his survey may have disclosed.

"I still continue to differ with Mr. Raskob," was Senator Moses's only comment when informed that the Democratic leader had added the electoral votes of Indiana, Illinois and Ohio to the 309 which he has already claimed for Governor Smith.

LABOR IN NEW JERSEY TO SUPPORT ALL WETS

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 5.—Although officially non-partisan, the New Jersey State Federation of Labor at this afternoon's session of its fiftieth annual convention went on record as fostering the election of Governor Smith for President. No names were mentioned when it adopted a resolution condemning the Eighteenth Amendment and favoring any candidate who approved its modification.

Prolonged cheers greeted the adoption of the resolution, which read:

Resolved, That the New Jersey State Federation of Labor reasserts the attitude taken by the American Federation of Labor and does hereby condemn the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead law as being really detrimental to the interests of the people and as bringing about an utter disregard for law and order, and does hereby pledge its support at the next election to any and all candidates in the State and nation who are committed to the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment or to such modification of the amendment as will bring about a wise and proper solution of the great question of prohibition and will insure real temperance in the nation.

KOHLER IS WINNER IN WISCONSIN RACE

Hoover Republican Defeats Beck, Backed by La Follette for Governorship.

SENATOR WINS EASILY

Stalwart Leaders See Serious Setback in Primary to the La Follette Cause.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 5.—Walter J. Kohler of Kohler, wealthy manufacturer of enamelware, won the nomination for Governor in the Republican primaries yesterday. Running as a Conservative Republican he defeated Joseph D. Beck, his radical La Follette opponent.

With all but 103 out of 2,760 precincts heard from Mr. Kohler held a lead of 21,491 votes over Mr. Beck, who was brought into the Gubernatorial race at a secret conference called by Senators La Follette and Blaine.

Mr. Kohler will be opposed at the November election by Mayor A. G. Schmedeman of Madison, endorsee of the Democratic State convention.

The 2,667 precincts gave Kohler 219,433; Beck, $197,952; Zimmerman, 82,917 and Ferris, 4,241.

Despite this particular rebuke of Wisconsin voters to the radical element, Senator Robert M. La Follette Jr. gained an overwhelming victory over George W. Mead, Mayor of Wisconsin Rapids, whose Conservative candidacy for United States Senator was not aligned with the Kohler ticket.

M. K. Reilly, Democrat, will oppose La Follette.

On the basis of the returns from 2,586 precincts out of 2,760 in the State La Follette received 300,961 votes and Mead 152,946.

The Kohler ticket of State offices failed to make an impression on the voters, who nominated the entire list of incumbents, Lieutenant Governor Henry K. Huber, Attorney General John W. Reynolds, Secretary of State Theodore Dammann and State Treasurer Solomon Levitan.

They also cast a light vote in the Senatorial balloting, in which Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg and Mayor John W. Bailey of Battle Creek were unopposed respectively for the Republican and Democratic nominations.

Conservative Republicans today were confident that yesterday's primary represents the end of the La Follette régime of radical politics in Wisconsin. Despite the fact that young Bob's popularity has not decreased, as evidenced by his two to one victory over Mead, it is pointed out that even with the help of Governor Blaine he was unable to pass along his strength to others on his slate as did his father before him.

Mr. Beck's continuous harping on national politics instead of State policies also was an important factor in his defeat, it is believed.

John J. Raskob, Democratic National Chairman, said here yesterday that he did not regard the victory of Mr. Kohler in Wisconsin as indicating that Mr. Hoover would carry the State.

"I believe Smith will carry Wisconsin," he said. "The Republicans have about lost hope of that State."

GREEN VICTOR IN MICHIGAN.

Republican Governor Renominated by Big Majority Over Welsh.

DETROIT, Sept. 5 (AP).—Although he made virtually no campaign and faced a fire of criticism by his opponent, Governor Fred W. Green, Republican, was renominated in yesterday's Michigan State primary by a majority that will range between 225,000 and 233,000.

On returns from 2,737 precincts out of 3,184 in the State, Governor Green polled 371,917 against 146,627 for George W. Welsh, former Lieutenant Governor.

Democratic voters seemingly took little interest in the Governorship, giving William A. Comstock, their National Committeeman, an unopposed candidate, but 8,858 votes.

DEMOCRATS PLAN WAR ON WHISPERERS

ty-three Catholics, 105 Protestants, eleven of Jewish descent and seven undesignated.

Republicans and Independents.

The pamphlet will also contain all the judicial and related appointments made by the Governor to fill vacancies during his four terms to date. The final figures have not yet been compiled, but will be given out probably tomorrow. The affiliations of a few persons are still in doubt because, according to Mr. Moses, "there are numerous cases which neither the politics nor religion of appointees was known to the Governor at the time appointments were made, and it was found that no information whatever was in existence in the Executive Chamber on this subject."

The figures made public today showed the number of Republicans and independents in the State Administration. They easily maintain the balance of power. There are ten Republicans and Independents in the Cabinet, against four Democrats; eleven as against fourteen Democrats among the other departmental and division heads, and eighty-one as against fifty-eight Democrats and seventeen undesignated persons among the other present State officials.

Supporters of the Governor feel that with the wide circulation of the facts in his State record those who have raised the religious issue and cast aspersions on his moral character will find their guns backfiring on themselves. They venture to predict that the reaction will be as emphatic as to the "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion" episode in the Cleveland-Blaine campaign.

These attacks against Governor Smith were said to be nothing new. They had cropped out in his State campaigns and were now more vicious, but only extending over more territory, it was said. They had proven worse than vain in New York, it was pointed out, and the Governor had turned them to his advantage. The manner in which he had faced the whispered drive in some of those earlier campaigns was cited as cause for predicting that he would meet it and overcome it again on its new scale in his national tour.

Reply to Lowman Recalled.

On two occasions when he entered the home territory of Seymour Lowman, Republican, of Elmira, now Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of prohibition administration, and found what he thought was evidence of unfair attacks upon his candidacy, the Governor met them at their source.

Once in 1924 he had a Supreme Court stenographer take down an out-of-town speech by Mr. Lowman which had received no publicity, and he replied to it in Elmira. On Oct. 25, 1922, he put aside his prepared address in Elmira to reply to political advertisements associating him with the saloon, which he attributed to Mr. Lowman.

Secretary Moses's Statement.

Mr. Moses's statement on the compilation of appointments follows:

"A number of requests have been made by representatives of the press for statistics regarding the political and religious affiliations of appointees of Governor Smith. It happens that information on this subject has just been gathered for the Governor and has been sent by him to the Democratic National Committee for publication. A pamphlet on this subject has already been set up in type and will be issued shortly.

"It has been difficult to obtain all the information desired, as there were numerous cases in which neither the politics nor religion of appointees was known to the Governor at the time the appointments were made, and it was found that no information whatever was in existence in the Executive Chamber on this subject. It was therefore necessary to spend a considerable amount of time in making local and other inquiries. There are still several blanks on the list which is being printed.

"The information in the pamphlet is placed under four heads:

"First, members of the Cabinet; second, other present State department and major division heads; third, other present State officials whose appointments are approved by the Governor; fourth, judicial and related appointments, and appointments to county offices to fill vacancies during the Governor's four terms to date.

"The pamphlet does not give all of the minor administrative appointments throughout the Governor's four terms. For instance, it does not include the numerous members of Boards of Visitors to State institutions. Many of these were originally appointed by other Governors and were reappointed by the Governor on account of satisfactory service. Neither the religion nor the politics was known to the Governor, and this could not be obtained in many cases without personal application to the appointee.

Summary of the Data.

"The statistics which have been gathered may be summarized as follows:

"Members of the Cabinet, total 14.
"Catholic, 3; Protestant, 10; Jewish descent, 1.
"Republican, 8; Democrat, 4; Independent, 2.
"Other present State Department and major division heads, total 25.
"Catholic, 11; Protestant, 14.
"Republican, 8; Democrat, 14; Independent, 3.
"Other present State officials whose appointments are approved by the Governor, total 156.
"Catholic, 34; Protestant, 105; Jewish descent, 11; undesignated, 7.
"Republican, 72; Democrat, 58; Independent, 9; undesignated, 17.
"Judicial and related appointments and appointments to county offices to fill vacancies during the Governor's four terms to date, not yet completely tabulated."

The Governor spent another quiet day today, working in his office and playing golf in the late afternoon. Brigadier General William Mitchell, former assistant chief of the Army Air Service, called and told him, according to the Governor's own account, that "Wisconsin was all right for me."

The General, who resigned from the service after controversy over air policies, was on his way to his home State and his visit was largely of a social nature.

In response to an observation that John J. Raskob, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, had added three more States to the Democratic column in his forecast of the election, the Governor contented himself with a smile and the single word, "good."

HOOVER RECEIVES CHEERING REPORTS

Leaders Tell Him Trend to Him Is Strong in West and in the Doubtful States.

OPENS IN SOUTH ON OCT. 6

Nominee to Visit Elizabethton in Tennessee and Perhaps Other Southern States.

BROOKHART ENTHUSIASTIC

Iowa Senator Declares He Found a Republican Wave Sweeping the South.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—This was a day of conferences at Herbert Hoover's personal headquarters in which prominent Republican leaders from all parts of the country participated. In every instance Mr. Hoover was assured that everything was in good shape in the West and the so-called doubtful States generally.

Senator Brookhart of Iowa, one of those with whom Mr. Hoover talked at length, even put Louisiana and Georgia in the semi-doubtful column. He has recently been in the South and said a Hoover wave was sweeping Dixie, while in the West the Democratic defections were so numerous, he declared, that even though all the Republicans stayed at home on election day there would be enough Democratic votes to carry the Corn Belt for Hoover and Curtis.

From New Jersey came Hamilton Kean, Republican candidate for the Senate. He said the tariff would hold New Jersey in line for the Republican ticket. Representative Will R. Taylor of Tennessee, Republican leader in that State, said the Republican majority in Tennessee would not be less than 25,000 and might exceed 40,000 votes.

The Secretary of War, Dwight F. Davis, just returned from the West, was equally optimistic and declared that the people of the West did not want to see the Government at Washington "Tammanyized." Senator Sackett of Kentucky asserted that the trend everywhere in Kentucky and West Virginia was toward Mr. Hoover.

Hoover to Visit Tennessee.

Mr. Hoover agreed today to make a speech in Tennessee and fixed Oct. 6 as the date and Elizabethton, in Carter County, Eastern Tennessee, near the North Carolina line, as the place. He may also speak in North Carolina, probably in Greensboro or Charlotte, and there is talk of extending the trip to include one speech in Kentucky and another in West Virginia. The Tennessee date was agreed on after a conference Mr. Hoover had with Representative Taylor.

Elizabethton's history goes back to 1772, when pioneers who crossed the mountains from Virginia and the Carolinas formed the Watauga Association. Articles were drawn up by the association for the management of local affairs. The community was wholly self-governing making treaties with the Cherokees and administering municipal affairs, until 1777, when the North Carolina General Assembly took over the territory. Later it became a part of Tennessee. It lays claim to being the first place on the American continent where Americans established their own free and independent Government.

Mr. Hoover's address will come as the culminating feature of Elizabethton's annual industrial celebration. He will speak in the open air. Should the weather not permit this, the address will be delivered in a tabernacle on the fair grounds, that seats more than 7,000 persons. Arrangements are being made to enlarge it.

Former Governor Alfred A. Taylor of Tennessee, now 80 years of age and living in retirement in Happy Valley near by, will introduce Mr. Hoover. The address will be broadcast over an extensive radio hook-up. Locally the occasion will take on the aspect of a mammoth festival with aviation stunt flying, a sham battle, automobile races, a pageant, fireworks and fete dancing. Towns and cities of the entire section will be invited to participate.

Senator Brookhart said his conference with Mr. Hoover was almost entirely devoted to a discussion of farm relief.

He declared he was wholeheartedly in agreement with Mr. Hoover's position and was certain that he would, if elected President, lose no time in urging the passage of a worthwhile law, one that would meet every angle of the problem.

"There is no need for Mr. Hoover to take any more definite position than he already has taken," said Senator Brookhart. "The whole West is satisfied with his proposals and out there we know he has already handled more than ten billion dollars in farm surpluses, that it was Hoover who held the prices of farm products up in those years—during and immediately following the war—and that as President he can be depended on to do the right thing for agriculture.

Advocates $600,000,000 Fund.

Senator Brookhart said he was in favor of a $600,000,000 Government-financed farm export corporation. He did not say that Mr. Hoover and himself were in agreement on this.

"Mr. Hoover," he continued, "can speak for himself and will, at the proper times and places. The Government financed the railroads to the extent of more than half a billion and there is no reason why it should not be equally generous to the farmers. I put the amount needed at $800,000,000, and I say the Government owes that much to the farmers. It is a pledge in both party platforms, besides.

"What about the political situation in the States you have visited since the convention?" Senator Brookhart was asked.

"In nearly all the States I have been in," he answered, "it is my opinion that even if the Republicans remained at home on Election Day the Democratic defections would be enough to carry them for Hoover and Curtis. There is no question of the size of the Democratic revolt in the West. It is as widespread as in the South, and we know what unhappy nights the Southern situation is giving the Democrats.

"I have been in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Nebraska, Missouri, Georgia, Tennessee and Louisiana. There is a revolt against the Democrats in every one of those States and nowhere more pronounced than in Georgia and Louisiana, and both those are worthy the serious attention of the Republicans."

In the opinion of Senator Brookhart, there is no need of Mr. Hoover making any campaign speeches in the agricultural States west of the Mississippi. They are safe for the Republican ticket, he declared. Senator Brookhart said he had not been in Wisconsin and could not say anything as to the situation in that State. He has no information that leads him to think Senator La Follette will declare for the ticket nor has heard from Senator Norris of Nebraska, who, like Senator La Follette, is still outside the party camp.

Governor Smith's power and water program is the "worst ever brought forward," said Senator Brookhart.

"In what way?" he was asked.

"Why, he would have the Government build the plants and then lease them to private interests," he replied.

"What would you do?" the Senator was asked.

"My position is that the Government should not only build them but that it should also operate them."

"Is this also Mr. Hoover's position on this question?"

"I did not talk about power and water with Mr. Hoover," Senator Brookhart answered.

Taylor Confident of Tennessee.

Representative Taylor said his conference with the candidate related to the speech Mr. Hoover is to make in that State.

"Tennessee," he said, "is all right for the Republican ticket. We are holding our own lines and are being reinforced by great numbers of Democrats who have refused to support Smith. Hoover's Democratic vote in Tennessee will assume tremendous proportions and he will carry the State by from 25,000 to 40,000 votes and it may be more than 40,000."

Senator Sackett of Kentucky went in when Mr. Taylor left Mr. Hoover's offices. He reported on Kentucky and West Virginia.

"The drift in both these States," he said, "is almost entirely to Hoover. We will, in my opinion, carry them both."

"What effect will the declaration of The Louisville Courier-Journal for Governor Smith have on the result in Kentucky?" Senator Sackett was asked.

"None whatever," he replied.

Secretary Davis said he found crop conditions good all over the West. He has crossed the Continent twice since the Kansas City convention. Everywhere, he declared, he found the reaction to Mr. Hoover's speech of acceptance favorable. On the other hand, the reaction to Governor Smith's acceptance speech was not so favorable, he said.

Unity in Jersey, Says Kean.

With a united party working for the success of the entire ticket, Republican workers have high hopes of carrying New Jersey in November, said Mr. Kean, nominee for Senator, who called on Chairman Work today.

"There is no dissension among New Jersey Republicans over the ticket this year," Mr. Kean said, "and all of our groups are working hard for a smashing victory. New Jersey needs the tariff protection offered by the Republican Party as much as any State in the Union. No other State has the diversified interests found in New Jersey and if we don't have a high protective tariff our people will be walking the streets looking for work.

"The Democrats are lauding the Underwood Tariff act, which wrought havoc with American business just before the war, and it is the same type of tariff legislation we can expect if they get into power again. It would be a sad day for New Jersey."

Mark W. Woods of Lincoln, Neb., a former supporter of Governor Lowden and a leader in the McNary-Haugen movement, declared for Mr. Hoover today. He said Mr. Hoover's declarations on farm relief were more definite than those of Governor Smith, and said that after studying both party platforms, as well as the acceptance speeches of the candidates, he was of the opinion that Mr. Hoover was best fitted to solve the farm problem.

"While I am satisfied," he said, "that both parties are sincere and will do the best they can for agriculture, from the nature of things I feel that the Republican Party will be most likely to work out a program for permanent solution along lines which industry enjoys. I shall therefore give what influence I may have in support of Mr. Hoover. If we send men to Congress who will work for a real protection policy for agriculture and the development of inland waterways, the battle for agriculture is won."

Borah Will Speak Here.

Senator Borah of Idaho said today he approved the decision of Mr. Hoover to make personal appearances in the Democratic South.

"It is a good move whether it wins votes or not," said Senator Borah. "It is entirely proper for a candidate for office to campaign this country far and wide. We are one country and in mapping out campaign tours, a candidate should not limit himself to any section.

Senator Borah has made no definite engagement to speak beyond the addresses he is scheduled to deliver in Detroit on Sept. 19. He will make speeches in Illinois, Missouri and Ohio, and perhaps some other Western States, and the Republican National Committee is making arrangements for him to appear as the headliner at a meeting to be held in New York late in October.

A prediction that Mr. Hoover may carry Texas was made here today by Mrs. J. C. Griswold, Republican National Committeewoman from that State.

"If the skeptical political writers of New York smile when we say there is a good chance for Hoover to carry Texas," Mrs. Griswold said, "let them tell us why the Democratic National Committee is, for the first time, making an intensive campaign in the Lone Star State.

"Why did they send their Vice Presidential nominee into Texas? Why have Texas papers broadcast the promise that the Presidential nominee himself is going to visit Texas? Why are they raising a stupendous fund to run special trains at bargain rates to get out a crowd for this event?

"Why is all of this necessary when we have only 150,000 Republican votes normally compared to 700,000 Democratic votes usually cast in national elections? Ordinarily no Democrat would lift a finger in Texas in a Presidential campaign, but Democratic leaders have perceived their danger and are badly frightened."

Mrs. Elizabeth L. Clark, Republican National Committeewoman for Ohio, told Mrs. Hert, the party vice chairman, that a stirring campaign was in progress in her State to get out the woman vote for Mr. Hoover. "It is unusual to find a man who is as great a business man as Herbert Hoover has proved himself to be, who yet finds time to be actively concerned in the welfare of the children of our country," Mrs. Clark said. "As President of the American Child Health Association, he gives impetus to the work of that organization, and is indirectly responsible for improving the health of our juvenile population. That alone is enough to win the admiration of the mothers of the country."

WILSON SIDE TO CLOSE TESTIMONY ON SEPT. 18

Vare Counsel Will Begin Rebuttal the Next Day in Contest for Senate Seat.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Counsel for William B. Wilson of Pennsylvania, who is contesting Senator-elect William S. Vare's challenged Senatorial seat, today agreed to conclude the oral testimony which Senator Charles E. Waterman of Colorado has been taking for his subcommittee, in charge of the contest. The final session from the Wilson angle is now definitely set for Sept. 18.

Counsel for Mr. Vare also agreed today to begin on Sept. 19 the presentation of such oral testimony in rebuttal of that offered by Wilson witnesses in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and here as they may desire to offer. Following that Senator Waterman indicated he would return to Philadelphia for at least one day to conclude the taking of testimony there.

Then, if Senator Waterman's suggestions hold, counsel for both Vare and Wilson will brief their cases for the consideration of the subcommittee, which Senator Waterman hopes to convene here about Nov. 26, and enter at that time into final argument.

It is the expressed desire of the Colorado Senator to have the subcommittee's report ready for the full membership of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections by the time Congress convenes in December. This would enable that body to submit promptly its report on the contest for the much-discussed Pennsylvania Senatorial seat.

NORTH DAKOTANS SPLIT ON SUPPORT OF HOOVER

BISMARCK, N. D., Sept. 5 (AP).—Rejecting the leadership of Senators Lynn J. Frazier and Gerald P. Nye and others high in their party councils, the Non-Partisan wing of the Republican Party in North Dakota today refused to endorse the candidacy of Herbert Hoover for the Presidency.

The independent wing of the party, opposed to the league, however, endorsed Hoover and the record of the Republican Party with respect to helping agriculture.

Action was taken at the meeting to organize the Republican State Central Committee, on which the Non-Partisans have twenty-eight members and the Independents twenty-one.

DEMOCRATIC DRIVE ON IN NEW ENGLAND

WALSH AND GERRY STRONG

Two Winning Senators, Catholics and Wet Issue Play Big Parts in Three of Northeastern States.

BOSTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—Forty-four New England electoral votes await the November plucking, hemmed in by such delicately balanced possibilities as have rarely existed before in this Northeastern orchard of normal Republicanism.

For both Republicans and Democrats, Massachusetts appears to be the strategic key, by reason of its weighty eighteen votes as against the seven of Connecticut, six of Maine, five of Rhode Island and four each of Vermont and New Hampshire.

On the basis of past performance alone in these States the Democrats would seem to have no overpowering reasons for encouragement now, but nevertheless they are nourishing an inspired belief that control of a majority of the combined New England electoral vote is well within the field of possibilities. They are most determinedly shooting at the eighteen of Massachusetts and Rhode Island's five to total twenty-three, one more than half of the forty-four at stake.

See Hopes in Three States.

Covetous eyes are turned also to Connecticut's seven votes and there are some Democrats who insist that a three-State victory is not out of prospect. In any case, their most serious fight is to be made in those States, by far a more determined effort than is planned for the Republican strongholds of Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire.

The winning of Massachusetts and one other thus would send Alfred E. Smith out into the remaining forty-two States on an equal or better than an even footing with Herbert Hoover, a circumstance that no other Democrat, except Woodrow Wilson in the memorable Republican split of 1912, has enjoyed in recent years.

To gain that success the Democracy is resting its cause upon personalities and one dominant issue—prohibition. In Massachusetts the Smith name is linked with that of Senator David I. Walsh, up for re-election, who has been a fairly consistent winner far in advance of his ticket. Both are Catholics and their prohibition views coincide.

The Catholic vote is large in the Bay State, which often has been a battleground for wets and drys. Until the advent of national prohibition the State was under local option, and in a referendum in the general election of 1924 a rigid enforcement bill was adopted by a margin of only 8,183 in a total of 901,129 votes.

Two Did Not Ratify Amendment.

Connecticut and Rhode Island long have been deemed fair ground for anti-prohibition fights; they stand as the only States that refused to ratify the Eighteenth Amendment. Prohibition is the mainspring of the Democratic effort in Connecticut, where an aggressive campaign is under way with material assistance from the speakers' bureau of national headquarters.

Senator Peter G. Gerry, who twice has defeated Republican opponents in Rhode Island, the last time in 1922 between the Harding and Coolidge landslides, is standing for re-election, teamed with Smith. He is relied upon by the Democrats to put the tiny State in the Smith column in November, a reliance that takes into account not only his popularity and winning habit but also that Rhode Island, like Connecticut, has a large foreign population declared to be mainly wet and Catholic.

Republicans are admittedly concerned about this new situation, but are ready to take the field actively once the State party activities are out of the way. Theirs is a combined defensive-offensive manoeuvre; while combatting the Democratic wet advance they will swing an old familiar weapon—the protective tariff.

That is to be the theme of the Republican campaign in this manufacturing zone. It is now loudly and earnestly proclaimed in Maine, where every effort is being expended to roll up for the State ticket next Monday a majority so big that it may be offered to the country as a psychological guide in November.

Army Fliers Off for Los Angeles.

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich., Sept. 5 (AP).—Twelve planes piloted by officers of the First Pursuit Group of the Army Air Service took off from Selfridge Field at 8:10 A. M. today for Los Angeles, where they will compete for the Mitchell Trophy. The squadron was led by Major Ralph Royce, flight commander. The pursuit group will make the journey by easy stages, stopping at Rantoul, Ill., Fort Riley, Kan., Amarillo, Tex., El Paso, Tucson and San Diego, Cal.

a "petit maison" last season—an important couturier today

The jewelled evening mode—typified by this white chiffon gown, embroidered in red, white and blue crystal—stamped Eymard's opening as one of the great successes of the season.

Of course, it's a habit with Russeks to present the smart thing just a bit ahead of anyone else, but we consider it a special triumph to present so lovely a gown so short a time after its debut.

were James A. Patten, the Chicago wheat operator; Julius Rosenwald of Chicago, head of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Edward W. Bok of Philadelphia, whose residence is listed as New York. In July Mr. Patten gave $2,500.

$5,000 From Ambassador Morrow.

Dwight W. Morrow of New York, Ambassador to Mexico; Charles Dewey Hilles, National Committeeman for New York, and Silas H. Strawn of Chicago were among those who contributed $5,000 each.

Among women contributors in addition to Mrs. Whitelaw Reid were Mrs. Elizabeth M. Horne of New York, Mrs. B. F. Jones and Mrs. Alex Laughlin of Pittsburgh and Mrs. Alice J. Willock of Lakewood, N. J., each of whom contributed $5,000.

Mrs. Henry F. Lippitt of Providence, widow of the Senator from Rhode Island, gave $4,000 and Mrs. Eliza L. Philipps of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick of Chicago each gave $2,000. Mrs. Helen Hall Upham of Chicago, widow of Fred W. Upham, for many years Treasurer of the Republican National Committee, and Mrs. Elizabeth H. Nutt of Cleveland each gave $1,000 and Mrs. Paul Morton of Long Island $500.

With the total expenditures to Aug. 31 amounting to $312,216, it is apparent that the Republicans have conducted an economical campaign so far. Dr. Hubert Work, Chairman of the National Committee, has indicated that he would make that effort, and in this he is strongly in accord with Mr. Hoover. Dr. Work revised his original estimate that $5,000,000 would be required and made it $4,000,000, the figure which Chairman Raskob of the Democratic National Committee, has fixed as his goal.

On the arrival of Mr. Hoover in Washington on Aug. 24, he immediately began a resurvey of the National Committee plans and let it be known last week that $3,000,000 was the total the committee would be expected to spend.

Contributions Over $100.

A full list of the August contributions over $100, with the exception of those for $25,000, $20,000 and $15,000 each, given above, is as follows:

100 WOMEN LEADERS PLAN TO BEAT SMITH

SEEK MEANS TO WIN STATE

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, Hostess, Predicts Size of Feminine Vote Will Astound Politicians.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., Sept. 5.—More than one hundred leading Republican women of the State, including Vice Chairmen of seventy county organizations, gathered this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, Republican National Committeewoman, to discuss ways and means to defeat Governor Smith in his own State in the Presidential elections.

By the shores of Peconic Bay, the Governor's favorite swimming ground, they listened to W. Kingsland Macy, Suffolk County Chairman; Miss Sarah Schuyler Butler, Vice Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and others tell them that November of 1928 presented them not only with an almost certain chance of gaining a majority for the Republican national ticket, but with an "amazing opportunity to release the State Government from Tammany control."

Hold Clam Bake Today.

The speeches at the home of Mrs. Sabin marked the opening session of what is to be a two-day rally, culminating tomorrow with a clam bake—said to be the first woman politicans' clam bake ever planned, at Montauk Point, where women from inland and fresh water counties at the other end of the State will join others in a salt water swimming party.

Mrs. Sabin was very much gratefied by the attendance at the first session. "That women from almost every county in the State would come as far as the east end of Long Island proves the interest and enthusiasm which the women have for our candidate in this campaign," she said, predicting that while in previous elections only 40 per cent. of the eligible women voted, the vote this year by women would astound the men in politics.

"Mr. Hoover," she said, "is admired and respected by women, irrespective of their party affiliation. He is the greatest humanitarian of this age."

There was only one male speaker on today's program. He was Mr. Macy, and he led off by telling the women that the least optimistic figures assured the Republicans of carrying the State for Hoover and Curtis by 100,000 majority. He cited figures of the 1924 Presidential election with allowances for the Governor's personality and hold on his home territory, and ended by predicting success for the Republican organization.

Machold Telegram Read.

Miss Butler, who became Chairman of the meeting when Mrs. Sabin stepped aside, read from a telegram she had received from H. Edmund Machold, the State Chairman, as follows:

"I cannot stress too much the important part that women will play in the coming elections. We must redouble our efforts to get out the greatest possible vote in the Fall."

Supplementing Mr. Machold's message, Miss Butler declared the part that women would play in November was destined to be more important than ever before. "We are making every effort not only to get out the registered Republican vote," she said, "but the thousands who never voted before."

Three things were listed by Miss Butler as good and sufficient reasons why the Republicans should be retained in power nationally. First was the prosperity of the past eight years, which, she said "indicated public confidence in the party and a sane party policy toward industry."

Second, came Coolidge economy. "Drastic, maybe, but necessary. She said the Republicans had changed what was a "terrible bureaucracy" in Washington before 1920 to an efficient and economical system administration. "Coolidge economy," said Miss Butler, "was very interesting to us in New York State where budgets were mounting and bond issue followed bond issue. Millions and millions of dollars were borrowed in New York and in several cases bond issues were made where there was no need for asking for them. However admirable the ends were which they were designed to meet, in several cases there were sufficient funds in the treasury to take care of the expenses."

Points to Kellogg Treaty.

The third item on Miss Butler's list was the Kellogg multilateral treaty signed recently in Paris. "This has not really begun to penetrate yet," she said.

"We are still all a little dazed. It was such a remarkable thing for the nations of the world to get together and renounce something they have a perfect legal right to do. The fact that there is nothing in their constitutions to prevent them from declaring war adds to the impressiveness of the treaty. For a nation's honor is like an individual's, it is more binding than any threat of punishment.

"It is true that Briand of France gave the initial impetus to the treaty, but the United States has taken all the responsibility, for the nations signing it will make this Administration go down in history."

Miss Butler said the Kellogg treaty did not violate any conviction of the majority in the United States that we should remain out of the League of Nations.

Other speakers were Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore, First President of the Women's National Republican Club; Miss Florence Bardwell, Miss Helen Varick Boswell and Miss Maude Wetmore. They stressed party organization as well as the qualifications of Hoover and Curtis and Miss Boswell told of the work being done by women Republicans in New York to help "keep down the Democratic majority."

"Some Democrats Coming Over."

"We've got some Democrats coming over," she said. "That is one way we'll keep down the majority. A man came to me recently—and I knew by his looks and his accent what party he belonged to—and he said, 'I always used to vote for Smith, but not since he took to high hatting us.' We've got some coming over like that. Then we're working with the southern women who are in New York—Democrats who have nothing in common with Tammany. We may not be able to make some of them go the whole hog, but we know that many of them will vote for Hoover."

Miss Wetmore, President of the Women's National Republican Club, said: "There are three things we must do—we must elect Hoover, we must elect Curtis, and we must eliminate once and for all the bugbear of Tammany in national politics."

Mrs. Livermore said she regarded as "traitorous" the action of Democrats in making the Philippines a campaign question. The Philippines and Latin America, she said, should have no place in national platforms. She said she trusted to Hoover to give the Philippines and Latin America "fair treatment, and not for political purposes."

Tomorrow morning the women will meet at 10:30 to work out "further details of the national campaign and plans for the work of electing both a Republican Governor and Republican United States Senator from New York this Fall."

Miss Butler said it was very important that the great Republican vote up-State should have representation in the United States Senate, a thing it lacks at present.

Among those present were:

Mrs. Charles Schindler, Mrs. Lillian Bedell, Albany; Mrs. Ella McPherson, Allegheny; Mrs. H. Barnett, Mrs. Rose Davis, Mrs. Roberta Hart, Miss May Port, Bronx; Mrs. Helen Camen, Mrs. Catherine McNitt, Broome; Miss Effie Mason, Chautauqua; Mrs. May Hyde, Chenango; Mrs. Minnie Knapp, Clinton; Mrs. Katherine Waterman, Mrs. E. B. Strinham, Dutchess; Mrs. Gertrude Hyde, Franklin; Mrs. Anna McKillip, Mrs. Flora Keck, Fulton and Hamilton, Oswego.

Mrs. Blanche Carpenter, Mrs. Charles Winslow, Mrs. Madeline Jacobi, Mrs. Eva Schumacher, Mrs. Lillian Gariar, Queens; Mrs. Norris Pike, Miss Katherine Rail, Rensselaer; Mrs. Carrie Verland, Mrs. Anna Riley, Mrs. John Steiner, Richmond; Miss Marjorie Tompkins, Miss Natalie Couch, Rockland; Mrs. E. Schwab Likes Both Candidates.

Special to The New York Times.

LORETTO, Pa., Sept. 5.—Charles M. Schwab is one big business man who is not going to retire, temporarily or permanently, to take part in this Presidential campaign. To an inquiry about the two candidates, he said: 'I think they are both very good men. I know Smith personally, I know Hoover. I like both of them."

AS TO NOTIFICATIONS, ROGERS IS AGAINST 'EM

Let Candidates Find Out What's Going on Without a Committee Telling 'Em, Says He.

Will Rogers is unalterably opposed to notification ceremonies. In his weekly appeal in Life for support of himself as the candidate of the Anti-Bunk Party, he says today:

"I think sometimes notifications are done too early and taken too seriously. Of course there is one thing about a notification and that is it is the last big public function that most political Candidates will ever have.

"So, as I say, the Summer has been practically taken up and ruined by nothing but notifications, so the Anti-Bunk Party comes out strong against Notifications.

"Let the Candidates learn their fate on Nov. 6. Our Party thinks that if a man is in Public life and he can't find out what is going on without a Committee telling him, why he has no business asking for the Public's support."

MAINE SPLIT HEALED BY CHAIRMAN WORK

His Visit Was for This End, Rather Than as Campaign Tour, Observers Say.

BREWSTER IS BACK IN LINE

GARDINER REFUSES DEBATE

Spurns Democratic Challenge to Make Water Power the Issue in Monday's Election.

By W. A. WARN.

Special to The New York Times.

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 5.—The recent visit to Maine of Dr. Hubert Work, Chairman of the Republican National Committee and campaign manager for Herbert Hoover, was not, as had been generally supposed, primarily for the purpose of discussing with local managers details of the State campaign. The rolling up of a large vote at the election Monday might have a psychological effect through the country as a manifestation of Republican strength, but the prime purpose of the National Chairman's visit was to seek to heal a breach within the Maine Republican organization.

This is thoroughly understood here and tacitly admitted by the Republican leaders, who declare that Dr. Work's mission was attended by success. To back up their assertion they point to the fact that Ralph P. Brewster, the Republican Governor, at last is on the hustings and fighting for the ticket, State and National.

Governor Brewster made his first speech in the present campaign last night. In fulfillment of a pledge made personally to Dr. Work he will preside at a big rally in Bangor on Friday evening, when Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, the nominee for Vice President, will make his bow to a Maine audience and deliver the principal address.

Work's Stay Was Brief.

Dr. Work made the long journey from Washington to this city for a brief stay of only three hours, during which he addressed the Republican State Committee at a conference held behind closed doors at the Augusta House. He gave the Republican State Committeemen and candidates for office, who attended by invitation, a straight-from-the-shoulder talk, in which he urged upon them the necessity of presenting a united front to the Democratic enemy and obtaining a big poll at Maine's early election.

The result in Maine, Dr. Work told them, would be accepted throughout the country as an indication of the strength or weakness of the Republican Party at the general election in November, when here, as elsewhere, the vote is to be taken on Presidential electors.

Dr. Work, it is said, insisted upon Governor Brewster and some of his close friends and political followers being invited to the conference. This was done, and the Governor and his following had an opportunity, under the benevolent auspices of the Republican National Chairman, who if Hoover wins will occupy the driver's seat as to patronage, to renew their speaking acquaintance with party leaders with whom they have had no close personal or political contact for years.

Whether Dr. Work came of his own initiative or in response to a summons from Republicans of prominence who were anxious to see the breach between the Governor and the organization healed for the period of the present campaign at least is not generally known in Republican circles here. Leaders who should be in a position to tell are not telling.

It is well known, however, that Governor Brewster and Dr. Work are on excellent terms and that close and friendly relations had existed between them long before Dr. Work became Chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Had Sought Instructed Delegation.

When the Republican State Convention met Governor Brewster, after several trips to Washington, was the proponent of a plan, which the convention, however, turned down, of instructing the delegation from the Pine Tree State to the Kansas City National Convention outright for Mr. Hoover. The faction opposed to Governor Brewster was instrumental in having the Brewster plan for an instructed delegation voted down.

One of the leaders in this adverse move, however, explained to the correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES that this was not due to any unfriendliness toward the present Republican candidate for President, but because it would have involved a radical departure from long-established precedent and run counter to general sentiment within the organization, and under the circumstances might have done Mr. Hoover more harm than good. The delegates immediately after they had been elected pledged themselves individually and with unanimity in favor of his candidacy and the State convention adopted a resolution warmly eulogizing Mr. Hoover.

The Maine Republicans are as strong for precedent and as strong for independence as they are for party regularity, it would appear; but Governor Brewster is an exception. He prefers to do what is expedient when confronted with an emergency.

As Governor, Mr. Brewster has been doing things in his own way with little or no resort to party advice, and that in a large measure is responsible for the coolness that has existed between him and an organization which did not favor him in the first place when he entered the 1924 primaries as a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination and then managed to have the narrow victory of his opponent upset by the courts and turned into an even narrower victory for himself.

Governor Brewster's friends pronounce him an idealist. Some of those within the Republican organization, who have not been getting on well with him, say that he is "funny."

He entered the primaries this year as a candidate for the nomination for United States Senator against the incumbent, Senator Frederick Hale, and was defeated by an adverse vote of almost two to one, a striking contrast to the handsome vote he had managed to roll up as a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination in 1924 and again in 1926.

Hale is a name to be conjured with in the political history of Maine, the father of the incumbent, who had represented his State with distinction in the Senate before his son did, was one among many illustrious Republicans who have helped to make State history at home and national history in a broader forum at Washington. The present Senator Hale had served acceptably for two terms, and the Republican organization under the circumstances could not see its way clear to turn down a Hale for a Brewster.

The primary fight was exceedingly bitter and marked by personalities; but even the opponents of Governor Brewster do not ascribe his attitude of aloofness in the present campaign, that came to an end only with the visit of Dr. Work, to a survival of that bitterness. Some even admit that he is a good sport and that his aloofness was forced upon him by the organization, which had made no place for him when the campaign plans were drafted.

The fact that Dr. Work literally forced the organization to recognize the Republican Governor of the State as a factor in the Republican State campaign is said to have caused soreness in some quarters, but it is the general opinion here that it will have little or no adverse effect upon the outcome of Monday's election.

Gardiner Spurns Challenge.

William Tudor Gardiner, the Republican nominee for Governor, said today that he had received, subsequent to newspaper publication, a letter from his Democratic opponent, Edward C. Moran Jr. of Rockland, challenging him to a joint debate on the water power issue and that he was going to ignore it.

"The demand of my opponent for a joint debate, in fact, was not addressed to me but to the galleries. It was formulated for the effect its publication in the newspapers would have," Mr. Gardiner said. "I am not getting excited over this issue at all. Its agitation is not a matter of reason, it is a matter of sentiment pure and simple.

"The Governor will have very little to do in fact with the disposal of our surplus water power. It is a question which in the last analysis will come before the Legislature and the voters themselves for decision.

"It was an issue in the primaries and I received the biggest vote ever polled for a Republican candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, defeating three rivals and receiving a majority of 17,000 in round numbers over the combined vote of all three. I have not been discussing this matter at all in my campaign because it is not properly an issue. I stand on the Republican platform.

"I made my attitude clear as early as last January in an address before the Portland Club, when I stated that this question will not be settled right until it is somewhat removed from politics, at least separated from the political fortunes of any partisan group or any individual who is running for office."

Mr. Gardiner said that two years ago, when a bill was before the Legislature dealing with this subject, a referendum was attached, and that this had established a precedent from which there could be no easy departure, so that in the end it became a matter for popular decision how surplus water power, if any, should be disposed of.

Democrats Make It an Issue.

Edward A. Moran Sr., father of the Democratic candidate for Governor and Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, speaking over the telephone to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent from Rockland, said that the water power issue would be fought to a finish by the Democrats in the campaign.

"We are fighting this campaign on State issues, while the Republicans are ignoring State issues," Mr. Moran said. Waterpower is the dominant issue in our State campaign, and from my talks with voters I feel fully convinced that they understand the situation and that we are going to get many Republican votes on this issue alone.

"Gardiner, the Republican candidate, is frankly an export man. The Republican newspapers are maintaining a conspiracy of silence on this important question."

The Democratic platform appeared to favor exportation of surplus power, Mr. Moran was told.

"I am aware of that," he said. "The Water Power Trust dominated both party conventions and put it into the Democratic as well as the Republican platform. But after the primaries had been held and the present candidate for Governor had won the nomination, he refused to run on that plank, so we threw it overboard.

"The Republicans are making their fight against us now with funds that have come out of the Power Trust dough bags. If the people of Maine know what is good for them and have the hard-headed common sense for which they are given credit, and I think they do and have, they will see in this election the referendum the Republicans are talking about and vote accordingly."

RALLIES MAINE DEMOCRATS

Mrs. Ross Addresses Portland Meeting, Stressing Vote of Women.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 5.—Challenging the right of the Republican Party to be returned to Washington after eight years of corruption, and lauding the public spirit and courage of Governor Smith, former Governor Nellie Tayloe Ross of Wyoming addressed 1,800 persons in the City Hall Auditorium here tonight. The rally marked the high point of the Democratic State campaign before the election Monday, and was the only demonstration of magnitude made by the party in this rock-ribbed Republican State.

Mrs. Ross made a particular appeal to the women to vote the Democratic ticket in both State and National elections. Convinced herself that prohibition was being violated in every part of the country and by every class of society, Mrs. Ross said she believed that Governor Smith would back up the law, leaving it to the people to decide by referendum whether it was to be changed.

Other speakers were Charles Dana Gibson, the artist; Francis E. Slattery, Chairman of the Boston Board of Schoolhouse Commissioners; Edward C. Moran Jr., candidate for Governor, and Herbert E. Holmes of Lewiston, candidate for Senator.

DONOVAN IS ELECTED TO SUCCEED BRENNAN

Joliet Man Is Chosen as Illinois National Committeeman—Igoe's Name Is Not Presented.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 5.—Thomas F. Donovan of Joliet was elected Democratic National Committeeman from Illinois at a harmonious meeting of the State Central Committee held here today. The selection of Mr. Donovan was by unanimous vote, as the name of State Representative Michael Igoe of Chicago was not presented.

Twenty-one of the twenty-five members of the State Committee voted for Mr. Donovan to fill the vacancy on the National Committee caused by the death of George Brennan of Chicago. Mr. Donovan did not offer his resignation as Chairman of the State Central Committee and will remain in charge of the State organization for an indefinite period.

Mr. Donovan said that in his judgment no man could be selected in Illinois to fill the place made vacant by the death of Mr. Brennan.

Mr. Donovan declared that after the election in November he will retire from the National Committee and from political life.

VIRGINIA DRY FOR SMITH.

H. R. Fitzgerald, Methodist and Hoover Friend, Stresses Tolerance.

Special to The New York Times.

DANVILLE, Va., Sept. 5.—H. R. Fitzgerald, President of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association and for years an active supporter of the dry cause, came out today for Governor Alfred E. Smith for President and enrolled as a member of the Danville Smith Club.

In a letter to John W. Carter of the local Democratic Committee Mr. Fitzgerald expressed the conviction that the Democratic nominee "is a man of great ability, an executive of the highest type, of sterling character and of unquestioned integrity, but also a man of such breadth of character and sweet-spirited personality that if many of those who seek to vilify him could know the actual facts they would regret having done so."

Mr. Fitzgerald wrote further:

"As to the objection so commonly raised that he is a Catholic, I wish that all of our people would read the letter from Dr. van Dyke in THE NEW YORK TIMES of last Sunday. I do not believe that our people realize that in the religious intolerance so commonly and insidiously employed against Governor Smith there lies a subtle poison to Democracy.

"I believe that our churches and real Christianity are being obstructed more than they are aided by these extremists who are so occupied with political agitation that they do not realize the spirit they are broadcasting."

Mr. Fitzgerald, long prominent in Virginia as a Methodist layman, referred to a long personal friendship with Mr. Hoover, but points out that he cannot "agree with those friends who call themselves Hoover Democrats and who apparently do not recognize the inevitable effect upon the future of our State."

MARSHALL DISPUTES VAN DYKE ON SMITH

SAYS SMITH IS DOING IT

Asserts Hoover's Beliefs Were Also Questioned and People Must Weigh Both Disclaimers.

Charles C. Marshall, the lawyer who wrote Governor Smith last March asking him to reconcile his membership in the Roman Catholic Church with his allegiance to the United States, challenged yesterday in a letter to The Evening Post, Dr. Henry van Dyke's espousal of the cause of the Governor on the question of religion, and took issue with his assertion that Herbert Hoover should check the activity of his supporters who persisted in making Governor Smith's membership in the Catholic Church an issue.

Mr. Marshall said that Governor Smith's views on the relations between the Catholic Church and the State, as expressed in the Governor's reply to his March letter, had been made a part of Governer's Smith's campaign literature, and declared that Governor Smith himself would dissent from Dr. van Dyke's view that discussion of these relations by those opposing the Governor's election as President constituted bigotry.

Mr. Marshall continued:

Says Voter Has Right to Question.

"For the first time in the history of the United States has the American electorate been told that it must not discuss the very issues to which a Presidential candidate himself, in an able document and with a liberal spirit, has given an honored place in his campaign.

"Owing to late references in the press to myself I may be indulged in the statement that I have never advanced the conclusion, as charged, that Governor Smith should not be elected to the Presidency because he is a Roman Catholic. On the other hand, I have never advanced the view that an American citizen was not entitled to take into consideration and to discuss the religious views and training of a candidate as determining necessarily his subconscious and conscious action on the great moral questions of politics and government.

"Were Dr. van Dyke himself a candidate I should want to take into consideration his Protestantism, which, he avers, is hereditary from the school of William of Orange, and to consider to what extent he were free from the Institutes of Calvin and guiltless of the flames that burnt Servetus.

Refers to Hoover's Religion.

"It is a well-known fact that a question has been raised as to whether Mr. Hoover's religious faith in the Society of Friends made it impossible for him in good conscience to discharge the offics of Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States. Mr. Hoover has disclaimed all religious convictions that could support this objection. Governor Smith, in the letter to which I have referred, has disclaimed all religious convictions which the American people consider obnoxious in Roman Catholic doctrine and dogma to their constitutional policies and civic life. The American people in reaching their verdict will insist on their right to give due consideration and due discussion to both disclaimers.

"Just what Dr. van Dyke means by claiming that the American people should refrain from such consideration and discussion it is impossible to determine from his pronouncement.

" 'Freedom of conscience,' he says, 'is the greatest thing at stake in this campaign.' In that all good Americans will agree, but why should it be limited to freedom of conscience for Dr. van Dyke and his friends? Perhaps the Democratic National Committee will explain."

FARM LEADER TO AID SMITH.

Minnesota Republican Gives Up Post to Work for Governor.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 5 (AP).—J. F. Reed, an avowed Republican for forty years, resigned today as President of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation to campaign actively for Governor Smith for President.

Reed declared he quit as head of the non-political organization of 35,000 farmers to support the Democratic Presidential candidate because he considered Smith's pronouncements and platform "embrace the principles held vital to any adequate farm relief plan."

Both the Republican platform and Mr. Hoover, he said, have confined their agricultural pledges "to vague generalities which in no way define, nor suggest, nor promise the remedy long sought by American agriculture."

LEAKAGE IN STINNES CASE.

Find Secret Evidence Revealed to Friends of Accused.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 5.—The Stinnes affair took a new turn today, when, after the examination of a number of men believed to have been implicated in the registration of newly acquired war bonds as "old possessions," it became evident that every word said in the court room was being reported to Stinnes's former friends, some of whom will be called before the court later.

The typist of the investigating Judge is blamed for the leakage.

Every effort of the defense to get Stinnes out of jail on bail has proved futile, and it appears that the young millionaire will be obliged to remain confined until after the trial. That time is far in the future, since many foreigners are implicated in the alleged fraud.

BAY STATE BATTLE OPENED BY CURTIS

Republican Vice Presidential Nominee Makes Tariff Theme in Two Speeches.

HEARD ON BOSTON COMMON

At Norumbega Park Senator Assails Democratic Platform as Lacking a Definite Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 5.—Dealing chiefly with the tariff, which he declared should be raised, Senator Charles Curtis, the Republican candidate for Vice President, opened the National Committee's campaign in Massachusetts this afternoon, speaking at Norumbega Park.

Senator Curtis spoke to a large gathering on Boston Common following his first address, the tariff again being his chief subject. Tomorrow he will attend a luncheon at the Hotel Hawthorne, Salem, and then go to Maine for the final drive before the State election there Monday.

"Of particular importance in New England, pre-eminently the industrial section of the country, are the tariff policies of the two parties," the Senator began his first speech. "Interpret as you may the ambiguous declaration on the tariff adopted by the Democratic National Convention at Houston, you all know that the traditional Democratic policy has been a tariff for revenue only, and basically that is all it ever will be."

Asserting that "the last expression of that policy in a tariff law was the Underwood Tariff act of 1913," and that "though it was supposed to recognize the principle of protection, actually it did not give protection," Senator Curtis quoted Governor Smith as saying in his speech of acceptance:

"The Democratic Party does not and under my leadership will not advocate any sudden or drastic revolution in our economic system which would cause business upheaval and popular distress. This principle was recognized as far back as the passage of the Underwood Tariff bill. Our platform restates it in unmistakable language."

Attacks Democratic Plank.

"If the Underwood bill is his idea of a protective tariff, and apparently it is from his words, then I need spend no time to convince you that American labor, industry and agriculture will receive no tariff protection from the Democrats."

After quoting from the Democratic plank on the tariff, he went on:

"The fact of the matter is that the entire plank neither disowns prior Democratic tariff policies nor definitely promises any new policy. It merely states a glittering generality about maintaining the wages of labor, and then it proceeds to set forth with unmistakable emphasis that what is assumed to approximate protection must be the extreme measure of any tariff rate enacted by the Democratic Party.

"The Republican Party recognizes no 'extreme measure of any tariff rate.' Whatever rate is necessary to protect American labor, industry and agriculture must and shall be applied."

On his arrival Senator Curtis was met by Charles S. Proctor, President of the Middlesex Club; Robert M. Washburn, President of the Roosevelt Club; Henry Parkman Jr., President of the Republican Club of Massachusetts, and Charles Nichols, Executive Secretary of the Republican State Committee.

Later the Senator called on Governor Fuller and Lieutenant Gov. Allen in the State House. Then at noon he was the guest of Louis K. Liggett, national committeeman from Massachusetts, at luncheon. He made no reference in his speeches to the Fordney tariff tax on wools, his stand on which was asked yesterday by President Edward Moir of Marcellus, New York, President of the Carded Woolen Manufacturers' Association, in an open letter to the candidate.

Departs from Set Speech.

BOSTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—In speaking at Norumbega Park this afternoon Senator Curtis departed somewhat from his set speech in referring to Mr. Hoover and Governor Smith. The Senator emphasized that the policies of Herbert Hoover and of himself were the "policies of Calvin Coolidge." The Democratic nominee, the Senator said, proposed to put the prohibition service under civil service and "apparently forgets that a Republican administration already has done that."

"If he is correctly quoted," Senator Curtis continued, "he would wipe out one of the great bureaus which spends $500,000,000 annually for the veterans—the Veterans' Bureau. He says he will give us a wonderful building program. If properly informed he would know that this administration has given the nation the greatest public building program in history."

Touching on the textile situation, the Vice Presidential nominee told his audience he would "put the duty on cotton high enough to protect American producers and give the producers the American market."

Secretary Franklin Fort of the Republican National Committee spoke briefly.

Women formed a large majority at the rally, and Mrs. Leona Curtis Knight of Providence, daughter of Senator Curtis, was called to the stage, receiving hearty applause. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stearns, intimate friends of President and Mrs. Coolidge, were on the speaker's stand.

In his speech on the Common, Senator Curtis referred to Mr. Hoover as one "who stands today without equal in the services he has rendered to the people of the world and one who has shown his interest in the family, the home and the nation."

CURTIS TOUR IN MIDDLE WEST.

Senator Scheduled for 13 Speeches in as Many Days.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—Revision of Senator Curtis's speaking tour in the Middle West was announced today by Walter H. Newton, director of the Chicago Republican Speakers' Bureau.

Beginning on Sept. 15 thirteen addresses in as many days are now scheduled for the Vice Presidential nominee in the following places: Lexington, Ky., Sept. 15; Evansville, Ind., Sept. 17; Henry, Ill., Sept. 18; Spencer, Iowa, Sept. 19; Rosebud, S. D., Sept. 20; Sheridan, Wyo., Sept. 21; Hardin, Mont., noon, and Billings, Mont., evening, Sept. 22; Idaho Falls, Sept. 23; Cheyenne, Wyo., noon, and Denver, evening, Sept. 24; Omaha, Sept. 25, and Springfield, Mo., Sept. 26.

Three of the addresses will be made before Indian tribes—the Sioux at Rosebud, the Crows and Northern Cheyennes at Hardin and the Blackfeet at Idaho Falls. Since the last of these, at Idaho Falls, will be made on a Sunday, it was said at national headquarters that it would not have a political character.

FUND POST FOR REYNOLDS.

Washington Banker Is Appointed Vice Treasurer of Republicans.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—James Burton Reynolds, Vice President of the Commercial National Bank of Washington, today was appointed Vice Treasurer of the Republican National Committee, with headquarters in Washington.

For many years Mr. Reynolds was Secretary of the Republican State Committee of Massachusetts. Under Presidents Roosevelt and Taft he served as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and later was a member of the Tariff Board created in the Taft Administration. He was Secretary of the Republican National Committee from 1912 to 1920.

Mr. Reynolds was a prime mover in the effort to nominate Calvin Coolidge for President in 1920 and is credited with having had a major part in bringing about Mr. Coolidge's nomination for Vice President.

PARIS OFFERS HOMAGE AT BOKANOWSKI RITES

Respectful Crowds Throng Long Avenues as President and Officialdom Follow Hearse.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—The national funeral given today to Maurice Bokanowski, Minister of Commerce and Aviation, who was killed in an airplane accident Sunday, had a character of real and impressive grandeur.

Premier Poincaré and all those of the late Minister's colleagues who could followed behind the dead man's sons as mourners. Innumerable wreaths were sent by those who had known the Minister in his private and public life. President Doumergue, his colleagues in the Cabinet, Chamber of Deputies, Senate, and the various ministries with which he was connected, all foreign embassies and ministries, the city of paris division which he represented in Parliament for many sessions, the Commerce and Aviation Services, and many other public and private bodies sent wreaths until the courtyard of the Ministry in the Rue de Grenelle was piled high with flowers, too heavy and too numerous to find a place on the four cars which had been reserved for them.

Two aviation regiments formed a guard of honor and while the body was being placed in a hearse a military band played the "Marseillaise."

Overcome by emotion, Mme. Bokanowski was forced for some minutes to abandon her place beside her husband's coffin. From the Ministry, across the Seine and the Place de la Concorde, the procession, over half a mile long, wound its way up to the Cemetery Montmartre, and along the whole route hundreds of thousands of persons had gathered, not merely out of curiosity, but to render a real tribute to this brilliant man whose life had been sacrificed by his desire to take a real part in the development of the airmanship for which he was responsible.

SUBMARINE DEAD ARRIVE IN ENGLAND

Portsmouth Harbor Is Silenced as Cruiser Enters With 42 Bodies From Russia.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PORTSMOUTH, England, Sept. 5.—The entire harbor was hushed today while the cruiser Champion, escorted by four submarines, steamed through, carrying the remains of forty-two officers and men who died aboard the submarine L-55 in the Baltic Sea nine years ago.

No salutes were fired as a tribute to the dead. The grim guns on battleships in the harbor were mute. Except for the brazen note of a bugle and the distant strains of the cruiser's band playing the Dead March from "Saul," the silence was unbroken. Even the weather seemed strangely stilled for the impressive homecoming of the dead crew. It was a day of brilliant sunshine with a blue sky streaked by some clouds. The horizon was misty and the calm sea just ruffled by a gentle southerly breeze.

Six miles east of the Isle of Wight the four submarines of the honor guard waited until the cruiser made its appearance and moved between two groups of the undersea craft. It was exactly the same neighborhood in which the submarine A-3, one of the pioneer underwater vessels, was rammed by a merchant vessel in 1904 and plunged to the bottom.

Ensigns of all vessels in the harbor were flying at half-mast as the cruiser, with submarines on each side, moved up through the port. On the quarter deck of the Champion were rows of coffins draped in the red, white and blue of Union Jacks and piled with evergreen wreaths. A bluejacket sentry with arms reversed stood at each corner of the Champion's quarterdeck, while the remainder of the ship's crew stood in motionless ranks amidships.

Just beyond the entrance to the harbor the mighty battle cruiser Renown passed the funeral procession, moving out to sea in the opposite direction. The Renown's ensign was at half-mast and her crew, like the others, stood in long lines on deck amidships.

The shore was crowded with Portsmouth residents watching the sad procession come into port. Even after the cruiser bearing the bodies had drawn up along the quay her bluejacket guards stood at attention beside the coffins. At sunset the bodies were taken across the harbor in readiness for the funeral Friday.

ZOGU SAYS HIS AIMS ARE PEACE, LIBERTY

Defends Title, "King of Albanians," in Interview as Similar to That of Belgrade Ruler.

TO AMNESTY EXILED FOES

National Assembly Is Expected to Vote $500,000 for New Palace—Crown Is Being Made.

TIRANA, Albania, Sept. 5 (AP).—Friendly relations with neighboring nations and freedom of political thought at home are the objects which Zogu, King of the Albanians, will seek in his reign. He made this plain today in an interview with The Associated Press.

He explained that the change in the Albanian Government was made to conform to the history and psychology of his people. He promised that amnesty would be extended to all his opponents, including those political enemies who have fled to other countries. He expressed an intention to adhere to the Kellogg Treaty and said that Albania would be loyal to the League of Nations.

It was a chatty, amiable man, clad in a tight-fitting khaki uniform of a general, who thus discussed his hopes and aspirations. He received the correspondent in the reception hall of what has been the Albanian White House, but now is the King's palace.

His first words were a laughing command to "Fire away with your indiscreet questions."

He was asked what changes he contemplated making in Albania's foreign policy and replied:

"My Minister of Foreign Affairs has already notified all diplomatic representatives in Tirana that Albania will, as heretofore, observe a most peaceful and friendly attitude toward all nations, more especially toward neighboring States and the League of Nations."

Gives Precedents for Title.

Next he was asked why he assumed the title "King of the Albanians" instead of "King of Albania," it being pointed out that the former had proved objectionable to neighboring Governments which had a considerable Albanian population under their jurisdiction.

"The Constituent Assembly decided, in exercise of its sovereign prerogative, that I assume that title because I have not inherited the throne," explained King Zogu. "The throne was offered me by the Albanians so that I cannot be called other than King of the Albanians.

"In giving me this title my people have followed the example of other Balkan peoples who have called their sovereigns not king of a country but of a nation. Yugoslavia Alexander is called 'King of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes' and in Bulgaria the sovereign is designated as 'Czar of the Bulgarian People.'"

The King said that he soon will sign the Pact of Paris for renunciation of war as a national policy. He added:

"I value most highly Secretary Kellogg's initiative as something which tends to strengthen the cause of peace among nations. Albania will not be remiss in adhering to this noble cause, sponsored by the great American Republic, nor to any enterprise inspired by elevating human motives."

Amnesty to Include Opponents.

He was asked about the amnesty decree that recently liberated almost all the prisoners in Albanian jails. He said this would include not only common criminals and ordinary political prisoners, but even those bitter political opponents who have sought refuge in the United States, Italy, Yugoslavia, Greece, Austria and Switzerland.

The King expressed gratitude for Italy's prompt recognition of his enthronement and said he hoped the United States, "which always has showed a sympathetic interest in and deep moral encouragement for Albania's struggle for a small place in the sun," would soon follow suit.

"What reasons prompted Albania to change from a republic to a monarchy?" asked the correspondent.

"There was but one reason," the King replied promptly. "The change was made in accordance with the spirit and wish of the Albanian people whose political foundation has ever been its division into chieftainships or baronies, each of which recognized a sumpreme chief over itself.

"I am sure I shall have the allegiance of all the tribes forming the Albanian kingdom.

"Besides, in thus adopting the régime most congenial to the country, Albania is guaranteed greater internal stability, which in turn will assure greater foreign support."

Says Change Furthers Democracy.

The King said that the establishment of a responsible Cabinet with a Premier at its head who would be directly responsible to the King, would assure an open field for the formation and functioning of different political parties. He explained that hitherto party existence had been virtually negative because constant political strife made uncertain the continued existence of any one régime.

"Hereafter, as King of my people, I shall have no interest as to which political party obtains the upper hand by constitutional methods," he said. "This will help to educate the people along democratic lines, as in the United States, and will insure greater freedom for all."

The Albanian National Assembly is expected soon to vote an appropriation of $500,000 for the construction of a great palace for King Zogu. Artisans, it is said, are already at work on an elaborate gold crown for him to wear upon State occasions.

Coccio Cotta, former Minister of Interior, completed the formation of the new Albanian Cabinet today which was announced as follows: Coccio Cotta, Premier and Minister of the Interior; Jemil Dino, Foreign Minister; Hickmel Bey, Minister of Justice. The former Foreign Minister, Elias Vrioni, who also was mentioned as possible premier at the time of M. Cotta's appointment, will resume his former post as Albanian minister in Paris.

Both the Greek and Italian legations today formally notified the Albanian Government that their countries had given a de jure recognition of the new monarchy, and recognition by Hungary was announced tonight.

The King today received messages of congratulations on his accession to the throne from King Victor Emmanuel and Premier Mussolini of Italy.

GERMANY TO OFFER ALLIES CONCESSIONS

By WYTHE WILLIAMS.

will be the initial step to rapid Rhineland evacuation, at least partial.

M. Briand admitted that the "spirit of negotiation prevailed," and that he received an excellent impression of the Reich Chancellor's good faith.

Among the suggestions offered by Herr Muller was that Germany without waiting for the American attitude on debts might make engagements for a certain period of years apart from the Dawes plan. Also as a guarantee of security she might formulate some system of allied control in the Rhineland during the remaining period of years when the allied troops will no longer be actually fulfilling the police duty granted under the Treaty of Versailles.

Three Speakers Laud Kellogg Treaty.

So far as concerns the League Assembly, the orators' strike was broken this morning when three speakers signified their willingness to tell the delegates what they thought of the work done by the Council in the past year—Wang Ching-chi, China, who was very optimistic on the subject of the League, the future of China and the Kellogg treaty; Belaerts van Blokland, Holland, and Osten Unden, Sweden, who likewise were enthusiastic over the Kellogg pact. The Netherlands Foreign Minister was also enthusiastic concerning the naval accord between France and Britain, which he believed would prove a "valuabale contribution to acceleration of the work of disarmament."

Apropos of disarmament, M. Unden took the Preparatory Commission to task and gave a hint that the debate, which continues tomorrow with four orators on the program, may yet develop some heat. M. Unden said:

"As the matter stands, the work of preparing a draft convention has not reached the stage enabling a date to be fixed for a general disarmament conference. Yet no one can fully realize that delay is dangerous if the Preparatory Commission does not achieve some definite results in the near future. Public opinion will soon be ready to conclude from that failure that disputes and rivalry still exist between governments in spite of the League Covenant and Locarno treaties and in spite even of the Kellog pact."

The committee charged with the new Secretariat building sent a strong letter to the Swiss Federal Council last night explaining that the committee was in great embarrassment because it was impossible to get the land desired. It therefore requested the Federal Council to influence the Geneva authorities either to expropriate the land belonging to Mrs. Barton, which she steadfastly refuses to sell, or else to consider the possibility of exchanging the land the league already owns for another site.

The letter concluded with the suggestion that if all negotiations failed and the local authorities could not aid, the committee would perhaps be obliged to consider eventual transfer of the League elsewhere.

It is understood the committee has thought about Lausanne and its surroundings, where the authorities are described as "very kind" and ready to help the League in every way possible.

Calls League "Shock Absorber."

By The Associated Press.

GENEVA, Sept. 5.—Many words have been written in attempts to define the scope and purposes of the League of Nations. Today a Chinese summed it up in three when he said the League was "a shock absorber."

When this terse phrase was dropped by Wang Chang-chi, spokesman for Nationalist China, Aristide Briand, who was nodding, came quickly to attention; Hermann Mueller peered with sharp interest through his inevitable spectacles and George Bernard Shaw, who was in the gallery, threw up his head.

The phrase was being repeated on all sides in League circles tonight, because it is held to embody succinctly the mission of the League to stave off war by receiving itself the first clash of national interests. Wang Ching-chi is now a celebrity, and from his speech the delegates have gained the impression that China will be heard from on frequent occasions at Geneva. Wang differs from Kipling by believing that East and West can find common ground here.

Mr. Wang in his speech, which was listened to attentively by a great audience, pledged the new unified China's whole-hearted support to the League. He was convinced that it was destined to be the domain of understanding between the Far East and the Western world, which, while representing different cultures, were not essentially hostile to one another. Confucius, he said, might rightly be considered a pioneer of the League's work.

Emphasizing that the League stood for protection of sovereign rights, he welcomed financial and technical assistance for China, and continued:

"Undoubtedly readjustment in our relations with some foreign powers must be made, but, acting with a spirit of good-will and an atmosphere of friendly cordiality such as prevails at Geneva, the difficulties will be overcome.

"I believe that the East and West will often find the League a shock absorber. When the League shall have helped cure the great evils from which China has suffered since her first contacts with the outside world it will have brought serenity to a nation that has been anxious and uncertain where to turn for a friendly hand and heart."

Monroe Doctrine to Be Discussed.

The Monroe Doctrine is expected to be discussed at a banquet on Sept. 17, arranged by the International Union of the League Societies. The chief Latin-American delegates have been invited to expound their viewpoints on the doctrine at that time.

George Bernard Shaw and Aristide Briand exchanged quips when they met today in "the hall of lost steps."

"Why, Mr. Minister," asked Shaw in very serviceable French, "do you allow Americans to capture Southern France? I have just been there and heard hardly a word of French."

M. Briand's eyes twinkled as he replied:

"Well, you know that in the direction of Marseilles even Frenchmen have a bit of accent when they speak."

Premier Mackenzie King of Canada today sent a communication to the Assembly withdrawing the names of Justice Duff and Eugene Lafleur as candidates for the Permanent Court of International Justice in favor of Charles Evans Hughes.

REICH STAND ON DEBTS.

Holds International Problem Has Nothing to Do With Reparations.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 5—That Germany does not consider the time ripe for discussing the question of connecting reparations with the international debt problem is apparent from the attitude of the Foreign Office here.

Germany has expressed without equivocation that she takes a firm stand on the thesis that reparations are purely and solely a European problem and that the international debt problem has nothing to do with the Reich. To try to make either one dependent on the other is sure to result in disaster, it is argued.

Reparations concern her since she is the one obliged to do the paying. The Reich plays no part in the international debt problem and holds that to try to make evacuation and reparations dependent on debt settlements is the same as trying to add dissimilar quantities and express the total as a single quantity.

The German Foreign Office again expresses its determination not to purchase freedom of the Rhine. From the political standpoint further occupation is wrong, it is argued, in view of the conclusion of the Locarno Treaty and the Kellogg Pact. Morally, keeping foreign troops on German soil works counter to the spirit of peace.

Again the Reich stresses that the Versailles Treaty provides for early evacuation provided Germany is fulfilling her obligations, which has been the case, and that besides the other nations hold guarantees for the future.

The fact that Chancellor Mueller had little to report after his conference with M. Briand tonight in Geneva caused little surprise since political circles here do not regard the Reich's chances as favorable as long as M. Poincaré holds the balance of power over M. Briand in the present Government. When the new French Parliament reassembles, giving more support to the Briand policies, Germany will make a greater effort with hope of success.

The fact that M. Briand was overruled recently by the Premier by 7 to 4 votes shows that the Foreign Minister is not in position at this League session to make proposals amounting to concessions in the eyes of M. Poincaré and have the backing of the French Government.

49 Years of Helping New Yorkers Keep Healthy and Happy

ALL the News Promptly Reported In The New York Times

From Mobile (Ala.) Register:

Regarded simply as a mechanical performance, The New York Times' report of the subway disaster of last Friday had all the qualities of greatness. The wreck took place at 5 o'clock, and from the nature of the conditions there ensued much confusion and delay in respect to learning what had happened; yet in the few hours intervening to press time there was prepared by The Times a comprehensive, clearly written narrative covering the wreck itself; with list of the dead and the injured; the police and firemen's rescue work; the hospital service; the effect upon city traffic; the interviews with the survivors; interviews with officials; and the starting by the Mayor of an investigation into the cause and responsibility for the accident—some twenty columns of type, equal to a volume, if printed in book form.

It is not known how much time the preparation of these many feature reports required, but, manifestly, the work was done in little time and at full speed, yet as well done as if all the time in the world had been at command.

Then it was printed, and before daylight over 400,000 copies were flying abroad, carrying the news of the greatest calamity of the sort that had ever afflicted the metropolis. From every point of view it was a remarkable feat—only possible in our own day of modern machinery and skillfully directed organization.

Readers of The New York Times receive prompt and accurate reports of all happenings wherever they occur. The Times presents every twenty-four hours a record of the worthwhile events in all lands, superior to anything in any other newspaper at home or abroad.

ZAMBONIS ON TRIAL FOR SHOTS AT DUCE

Father, Brother and Mother-in-Law of Youth Lynched for 1926 Attempt Deny Guilt.

ALL CALLED ANARCHISTS

Evidence Used Against Them in Military Court Includes Target Range Found in Their Home.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Sept. 5.—The special military tribunal for the defense of the state began its hearings of the case against Ludovico Zamboni, Momolo Zamboni, and Virginia Tabarroni, respectively brother, father and mother-in-law of Alteo Zamboni, who on Oct. 31, 1926, attempted to take Premier Mussolini's life with a revolver in Bologna.

Ludovico is accused of attempted murder, the prosecution seeking to prove that he also fired at the Premier. All three are accused of complicity in the crime by having instigated young Alteo to commit it. Alteo Zamboni himself was lynched by the crowd immediately after firing the first shot at the Premier. The prisoners heard today denied any guilt.

The charge of attempted murder against Ludovico Zamboni is backed by Premier Mussolini himself, who testified that he distinctly saw the man who fired at him wore a light suit and a soft felt hat. Alteo Zamboni wore a light suit and a cap. Other people also testified that they saw two men fire at the motor in which Premier Mussolini sat. Various circumstances are alleged to point to Ludovico as the guilty party. For instance, when questioned he advanced an alibi, which broke down completely on investigation. He also made false statements concerning the source of the revolver found near Alteo's body after the lynching.

Cite Papers Found in Search.

The charge of complicity brought against all three of the accused is based on testimony by a number of witnesses that young Alteo, who was little more than a boy, was completely under the influence of his family. That they all professed the anarchist and Communist faiths is held to be proved by various writings found in their home.

In one notebook the following phrases were found scribbled:

"Nobody ever did so much good to his friends or so much harm to his enemies. I killed. Ungrateful country, you won't have my bones. I can't love you because I don't know whether I shall live after committing what I have promised to do. It is not a crime but justice to kill a tyrant. It is noble and holy to die for liberty."

These phrases were in Anteo's handwriting, but in a surprise search made a year later other similar ones were found written by his brother and father.

Momolo Zamboni has long been prominent in Anarchist circles. Before the advent of Fascism he tried to found Anarchist schools, stating his political belief as follows:

"We are Anarchical Communists. Anarchical because we do not want any government. Where there is government there is authority, and where there is authority there is not that true liberty which we desire. We are Communists because we wish that everything which exists or which is produced be shared by everybody."

Family Had Target Range.

Further evidence against the Zamboni family includes a kind of shooting range with a target found in their home. More than 2,000 shots had been fired at this target, experts declared. The prosecution maintains that the would be assassnis practiced on this range before the attempt on Premier Mussolini's life.

Similar evidence is brought against Virginia Tabarroni, who is also known to have anarchical communist leanings. She is said to be intellectually the strongest member of the family, making her influence felt by all. She it was, according to the prosecution, who fanned the resentment and hatred against the Fascists régime among the male members of the family.

According to the prosecution's reconstruction of the crime, the attempt on the Premier's life was carefully prepared by all four members of the Zamboni family. Ludovico and Alteo Zamboni, the State charges, did the actual shooting. They slipped through the military cordons when Premier Mussolini's motor car went by and both fired at him, the prosecution says. It holds that while Alteo, who was in the more exposed position, was immediately lynched by the crowd, Ludovico managed to escape in the confusion.

The trial is expected to last about a week.

Father Asserts Innocence.

ROME, Sept. 5 (AP).—Zamboni's father, Mammolo Zamboni, proprietor of a small print shop, today asserted complete ignorance of his son's plan and said that he and his wife participated in the city's welcome to the Premier.

In fact, he said, he did not know that it was his son who had attempted the assassination until 11 o'clock that evening. He denied having sent a telegram to his son on the day of the attempt and said that he doubted that his son was really the one who had fired the shot.

Ludovico Zamboni presented similar testimony after the father had testified that he was "an idealistic anarchist" who knew nothing about his son's political opinions.

Lay Plans for Safety Congress.

Plans for the seventeenth annual Safety Congress, which will be held here from Oct. 1 to Oct. 5 under the auspices of the National Safety Council, were discussed yesterday at a meeting of the New York Safety Committee at the Hotel Pennsylvania. Lewis A. De Blois, Chairman of the committee, announced that two of the speakers at the annual dinner of the congress at the Commodore on Oct. 3 would be Dr. Stephen S. Wise and Isaiah Hale, General Safety Agent of the Santa Fe system.

Army Pilots to Fly at Albany.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—Army aircraft will participate in the dedication of the Albany, N. Y., Municipal Airport on Oct. 3 to 6, the War Department today having approved such a request by Mayor John D. Thacher of Albany. The Department ordered the commanding General of the Second Corps Area at Governor's Island, New York City, to send to Albany such airplanes under his control as can be spared.

GEN. PEREZ LEADING TO SUCCEED CALLES

Army Officers in Secret Meeting in Mexico City Are Said to Have Agreed to Back Him.

ELECTION EXPECTED SOON

Officer Favored Was Obregon's Chief of Staff—His Attitude Toward America Is Friendly.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 5.—Although political leaders are silent regarding their intentions, well-informed circles indicate that Brig. Gen. Manuel Perez Trevino, at present Governor of the State of Coahuila, is the most likely candidate for provisional President of the Mexican Republic and his designation by Congress is expected without unnecessary delay.

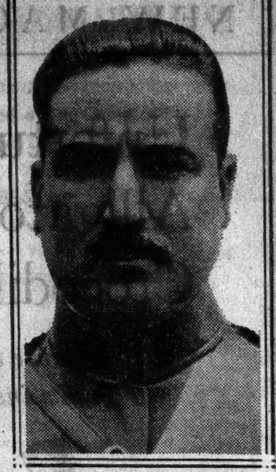
The small army of generals of divisional and lesser rank who are temporarily in Mexico City are reported to have held a meeting last night at the hotel where they are lodged and to have discussed what should be the military attitude on the all-important question of Mexico's interim ruler. A hermetic silence was observed this morning by all on what was done at their meeting, but the names talked over are reported to have been these three only: General Perez, Señor Portes Gil, a lawyer, at present Minister of the Interior, and Aaron Saenz, a lawyer, chief of the late General Obregon's political propaganda, now Governor of the State of Nuevo Leon and formerly Minister of Foreign Relations in the Obregon Cabinet.

Superiors in Rank Support Him.

What must be admitted as extraordinary, if the report of this meeting is true, is that all the divisional Generals expressed no interest in becoming the Mexican President and voted to support an officer who is their inferior in rank. Whatever they resolved is, of course, not final, for the election of the provisional President remains ultimately in the hands of Congress, but it is significant that President Calles's appeal for the election of a man satisfactory to both the military and civilians was taken into serious account, Señor Portes Gil being a civilian without military connections.

Whatever may be the final decision of Congress, the well-informed consider that it must come at an early date. There are various reasons for this. First, the fact that the election is for two years only. Possible candidates for the full six-year term that follows, must, if they now hold office, be allowed the necessary time to resign their posts to qualify for election when the general poll occurs.

Secondly, the country must have time to consider the qualifications of new candidates for the supreme office. Lastly, and this is the fervent hope of all good Mexicans, the outside world which has such heavy investments within the republic must be advised of the progress in Mexico's internal struggle toward that goal which President Calles in his recent message to Congress outlined.



International News Reel.

GEN. MANUEL PEREZ TREVINO, Who May Be Named Provisional President of Mexico.

Catholics Present Memorial.

Before anything practical can be accomplished Congress must by its electoral college first declare that General Obregon was duly elected President of the Republic and then call upon him to present himself. As that will be impossible they must then decide upon his provisional successor. What time will elapse before that action is taken is yet problematical, but the early future will doubtless decide it.

The advisability and convenience of such meetings as that of the military leaders last night is held proved by the event.

General Perez is not unknown to Ambassador Morrow and significance here is attached to that fact.

Pending the nomination of the provisional President and general political developments, the Catholic situation again has come to the limelight due to a petition signed by prominent Catholics who confirm Bishop de la Mora's recent declarations, as published in THE NEW YORK TIMES, and seek from Congress the complete repeal of the laws which caused the crisis between State and Church.

Bishop de la Mora outlined that nothing less than the reform of the laws objected to by Rome could be accepted by the Vatican. The fact that Congress now has the Catholic petition confirms also his belief that the new body has among its members a number of Catholic sympathizers. The memorial, however, will not officially reach the Chamber of Deputies until it has been thoroughly studied by the Senate.

Perez is Friendly to America.

General Manuel Perez Trevino was born in Piedras Negras, Coahuila, opposite Eagle Pass, Texas, in 1880. He was in his third year in the School of Engineering at the University of Mexico when President Madero was assassinated. Joining the revolutionary forces, he rose through the ranks to a brigadier-generalship.

Subsequently he continued his engineering studies in California, where he spent two years. On returning to his homeland, General Perez became General Obregon's chief of staff in 1920, a post which he continued to hold after the General became President.

He was advanced to the Ministry of Industry, Commerce, and Labor by President Obregon, and in that capacity was active in encouraging American corporations to establish branch factories in Mexico. In 1926 he was elected Governor of his native State of Coahuila.

General Perez has always been friendly to the Unitetd States and the inclinations formed in his youth have been strengthened recently by personal friendship for Ambassador Morrow. He is married and has five children.

Mexico Promises to Help Oil Men.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 5 (AP).—Dr. Jose Manuel Puig-Casauranc, Minister of Industry and Commerce, announced today that he was ready to give all kinds of legal facilities to parties engaged in the oil industry who were willing to abide by the oil laws. The industry, he said, will be viewed hereafter as a public utility. He added that he would not consider hostile any action by oil companies or other parties who, exercising the legal rights granted to them by law, filed an appeal with the President against any decision he might make.

siasm about the future of these colonies.

But it is not intrinsically the wealth of Uganda's cotton crop or the possibilities of the undeveloped wheat fields of Kenya that make the shift of British policy toward Africa a matter affecting the United States as well as Europe. It is the political consequences which this shift in the policy of Great Britain is bound to have around the world.

The British drive to develop Tanganyika is bound to interest Germany, which has not yet given up hope of getting the mandated territory returned. The very fact that Britain is turning for major efforts from the independent dominions to the Crown Colonies is bound to have repercussion sooner or later at Ottawa, which is a neighbor of Washington.

The move amounts to virtual recognition by the realists in the British Government that Canada, through absorption of American capital and American population, has already drawn as close to Washington as it is to London.

FRENCH COIN DESIGNS BAN BOBBED HAIR

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—The new French gold and silver coins, the designs for which are now in process of being selected at the National Mint, will bear the head of a woman for ever unbobbed. In whatever forms of art the prevailing mode of hairdress may go down to posterity, it will certainly not be recorded on the coins of the republic, for not a single one of the sixty-four models by well-known artists has short hair.

The designs differ widely on what should constitute the "form divine" for a figure symbolic of the Republic of France. Some go in for curves and others for the more angular shapes, but all the figures have luxuriant hair.

From the models now on exhibition 100 franc gold pieces, and 10 and 20 franc silver coins will be chosen. The artists have had to apply their genius to drawing the figure of a woman symbolic of France on one side, their fancy being left free to ornament the other side.

WOULD HONOR GALLATIN.

Celler Urges His Portrait for New Issue of Currency.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Representative Celler of Brooklyn has sent a letter to Secretary Mellon, congratulating the Treasury Department on its plans to issue the first of the new small-size United States currency bills on July 1, but expressing regret that the portrait of Albert Gallatin, Secretary of the Treasury under Jefferson and Madison, will appear on none of them.

Referring to Gallatin as the most distinguished of all foreign-born citizens who have risen to power and fame in the United States, Representative Celler asked that the Treasury include him in the list of those to be honored.

"In addition to all his other accomplishments," wrote Mr. Celler, "New Yorkers are proud to relate that he was one of the founders of the present New York University as well as one of the original sponsors of the greatest bank in the country, the National City Bank of New York."

INDORE WOMAN SUES FORMER MAHARAJAH

ROBBERY OF HOME ALLEGED

BOMBAY, India, Sept. 5 (AP).—Once again the name of Tukojirao Holkar, former Maharajah of Indore, has been linked publicly with that of a woman in such a way as to call widespread attention to the erstwhile Indian potentate.

Twice before at least has this happened: Once in 1925 when the merchant friend of a former dancing girl of his was murdered in Bombay, and this year when he chose an American girl, Miss Nancy Miller of Seattle, Wash., for a bride.

Today a former member of the household of a cousin charged him with luring her to his own residence and there attempting to gain her daughter as his mistress. When she thwarted his purposes, she says, he caused both her and her daughter to be imprisoned, keeping them incarcerated for more than eleven years while he despoiled her own residence of furniture and jewelry.

The charges are made in the course of a high court appeal case in which the woman, Sowkabai Pandarination Rajpurkar, asks for 184,000 rupees (about $65,000) to compensate her for alleged damages.

It is Rajpurkar's story that while she was a member of the household of the cousin of the Rajah, Tatyasaheb Holkar, in 1915, he sent his agents to her and caused her to come to his own house to take part in festivities connected with the birth of a child to his second wife.

On the day after her arrival there, she says he had her arrested and imprisoned in Mandaleshwar Fort, where he visited her. On one of these visits he is alleged to have made the proposal that she give him her daughter, who had accompanied her to Indore and also had been arrested, for his mistress.

Upon her refusal he subjected both daughter and mother to imprisonment and cruelties from which she did not gain their release until 1926, after petitions to the British Viceroy, who, in the meantime, had caused Tukojirao, to be disposed as Maharajah as a result of revelations growing out of another affair.

Once released, Rajpurkar says, she discovered that much jewelry and furniture had been taken from her, and after conferring with attorneys brought the present suit.

This court action the Rajah, who is supposed here to be in Paris with his American wife, is fighting on the grounds that the alleged events took place in Indore, outside the Bombay jurisdiction. A denial of cruelty has also been entered into the record.

The question of jurisdiction has been taken under advisement on the plea of counsel for the plaintiff for confirmation of the order of Justice Devar that the case should be tried in the high court at Bombay.

Justice Devar had stated in his opinion: "In view of the revelations of the Bawla murder case I conclude that if this unfortunate woman dares to enter the State of Indore again her life most probably would be in jeopardy again."

He added that it would be simply a "denial of justice if she who was deprived of her liberty for eleven years should also lose her property without cause" adding that the Rajah was "rolling in wealth and had officers, henchmen and agents who were at his beck and call for purposes both good and nefarious."

The Bawla murder case to which Justice Devar referred occurred in January, 1925, and led eventually to Tukojirao's removal as Maharajah of Indore. It followed the escape of his dancing girl, Mumtaz Begum, from his seraglio to Bombay after she had been a member of his domestic establishment for several years and had borne him a son which had been killed, allegedly by his agents.

At Bombay she took refuge with one of the richest and most influential merchants there, named Abdul-Kabir Bawla. The then Maharajah tried in vain to have her come back to him. Finally, one night the automobile in which she and Bawla were riding was attacked and Bawla was killed. She escaped abduction only when her cries for help brought some English officers. In the fight which ensued the girl's face was disfigured by the knives of the attackers, among whom it was proved afterward were officials of the Indore State. Three of these were sentenced to death and four were deported.

The former Maharajah, who by reason of his ancestry claimed priority over all the rulers of India, lost his throne as a result of the affair. In March this year he married Miss Nancy Miller of Seattle, Wash.

It is said here that the present suit is an outward manifestation of an old family feud with regard to women which existed among members of Tukojirao's family.

ADOPTS LIGHT RAYS TO STOP TRAIN WRECKS

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 5.—Light rays in future will prevent railroad disasters if the invention of a Munich engineer named Baeseler stands the test, according to the Neue Berliner Zeitung. His device consists of a number of mirrors which, placed along the tracks, control the speed of trains and have power to halt an engine if it runs past the block stations.

As a train passes, light from the locomotive strikes the mirrors. If the section is closed the rays are transferred to a selenic cell, which becomes a conductor, closes the electric circuit and automatically puts the brakes in action.

To prevent too sudden a stoppage of the train the mirrors are placed at special distances apart. On passing the first mirror the speed will be reduced to 60 kilometers (about 37 miles) in case of danger; the second and third mirrors bring the speed down to 40 and 20 kilometers, while the fourth mirror stops the train completely.

It is claimed that the mirrors, which have a peculiar construction, can be used in all kinds of weather and are absolutely reliable. The invention may also be used to reduce the speed of trains when passing dangerous curves. Whether the device will be acquired by the Reichsbahn depends on the final result of the tests now being made by the Technical Scientific Commission.

RUMANIA REFUSES TO TREAT ON OPTANT

Tells League That Land Issue With Hungary Must Be Considered Closed.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

VIENNA, Sept. 5.—Should the League of Nations decide to consider further the so-called Optant question which is in dispute between Rumania and Hungary, stormy waters will be stirred, according to tonight's reports from Bucharest. The reports state that the Minister of the Interior, Jean Duca, and the acting Foreign Minister, M. Argetoinau, conferred in Bucharest today and then sent a telegram to the Rumanian delegate to the League, M. Antoniades, instructing him in the name of the Government to inform the League Secretariat that Rumania considers the dispute closed and that if the League insists on bringing it up the Rumanian delegate will not be present at any council meeting where it is discussed.

The Optant question, it will be recalled, arose when Rumania, by an action which Hungary holds contrary to the specific provisions of the Trianon Treaty, confiscated in Transylvania property of Hungarian citizens. Hungary protested. The League took up the matter and appointed a neutral commission. The commission decided in favor of Hungary upon which Rumania withdrew from the commission and refused to accept it as authoritative.

pulses made a feeble sound as they came through.

This started the officer to thinking. If the pulse was strong enough to make a sound, it might be strong enough to chill a hot wire perceptibly.

A fine wire was made to carry an electric current by which it was heated. If it could be chilled by a puff of colder air, the resistance to the passage of the current would increase accordingly and could be measured on a gauge. The method was tried and found to be a complete success. The faint impulse of a big gun miles away was made to produce an obvious chill in the hot wire.

After the session Sir William disclosed that the inventive officer was his own son, Professor W. L. Bragg of Manchester.

Discussions on subjects ranging from the blubber on whales to theories respecting the causation of life and death will occupy the 3,000 savants from Europe, America and Asia here for the convention. Twenty-six women are on the program.

The United States group includes A. E. Kennelly of Cambridge, Mass.; F. L. Stevens, Urbana, Ill., both of whom represent the American Association for the Advancement of Science; George A. Dorsey, E. H. Emmett, Professor B. W. Johnson, the Rev. Joseph Lynch, Mrs. I. C. Namur, all of New York; Dean Shailer Matthews of the University of Chicago, Henry Field of Chicago, R. A. Franks, New York; Miss H. H. Roberts, New Haven, Conn.; Professor C. E. McClung, Swarthmore, Pa.; Dr. R. J. McCleary, Cincinnati; Watson Davis, Washington; Dr. C. S. Robinson, East Lansing, Mich., and Miss R. A. Doggett of Wellesley College.

The General Committee of the association announced today that Down House, County Kent, where Charles Darwin wrote his "Origin of Species," has been acquired for a memorial.

Urges New Industries For Britain.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES

LONDON, Sept. 5.—That Britain as a nation of craftsmen should utilize her superiority by deserting her old industries and seeking economic salvation in new ones, or new adaptations of the old, was the advice given at the opening of the meeting at Glasgow today of the British Association for the Advancement of Science by Sir William Bragg.

Sir William declared that mass production in the field of economics meant the greatest good for the greatest number. Science was now high priest of industry but in relation to mass production was a destroyer as well as a builder.

Established industries inevitably cheapened themselves by mass production and were eventually dominated by the cheapest labor, men of low intelligence. But improved processes might be devised and these would replace the old. The ideal for Britain was craftsmanship stimulated by scientific research.

Sir William showed in the gradual progress from the craftsman collecting his own materials, using and perhaps making his own tools and exercising his own knowledge and imagination, to the modern factory with its vast and specialized organization of workshop and designing room, research laboratory and management, that an increasing part was played by scientific knowledge.

He indicated that the most prosperous British industries, such as chemical and electrical engineering and motor car production, were precisely those based on recent scientific research. The clock could not be put back. Modern craftsmanship with all its noise and ugliness gave food, clothing, warmth and interest to millions who otherwise must die.

Electrical Engineering an Example.

The electrical engineering industry with all its branches might be said to have had its source in a single laboratory experiment and had grown because of the continuous adoption of fresh streams of knowledge. Few knew of research into rubber. They only knew that automobile tires lasted longer.

Mass production was the logical development of modern craftsmanship but it carried seeds of its own decay. If it were brought to such a pitch that its processes called for little intelligence in their working, then cheap people of little intelligence would be found in the end to be in charge. The relation of science to mass production was therefore that of both builder and destroyer. Mass productions were temporary lulls in the movement of imagination and knowledge. The new application of scientific knowledge, new ideas, new processes and new machines, must always be in preparation.

"Should it not be our policy to take advantage of our own country's qualities by continually seeking for fresh industries or fresh adaptions of old?" Sir William asked. "We should not cling unduly to older activities when they have reached a stage in which many others have learned to do them with equal efficiency and when we can go on to something new and maybe more difficult."

NEW BOOK BY WELLS SUMS UP HIS UTOPIA

'The Open Conspiracy,' Out Today, Offers Scheme to Create Better World Order.

WOULD SCRAP OLD FAITHS

A new Utopia in which "the serious minority of human beings" will get together to make the world as ideal as it can be, is outlined by H. G. Wells in his latest book, "The Open Conspiracy," issued by Doubleday Doran today. Mr. Wells calls this "scheme for all human conduct," "the perspective of my world," "Here are my directive aims and the whole criteria of all I do," he writes in his preface.

"The substance of this Open Conspiracy to which the modern religious mind must necessarily address its practical activities," he says, "is the open and declared intention of establishing a world order out of the present patchwork of particularist governments, of effacing the militarist conceptions that have hitherto given Governments their typical form, and of removing credit and the broad fundamental processes of economic life out of reach of private profit-seeking and individual monopolization."

Calls Old Creeds Insincere.

While religion is necessary to human life, according to Mr. Wells, "the old faiths have become unconvincing, unsubstantial and insincere, and though there are clear intimations of a new faith in the world, it still awaits embodiment in formulas and organizations that will bring it into effective reaction upon human affairs as a whole."

"The first sentence in the modern creed must be, not 'I believe' but 'I give myself,'" he says at another point.

In order to carry out Mr. Wells's plan there must be formed "a single world commonweal, preventing war and controlling those moral biological and economic forces that would otherwise lead to wars." This commonweal will have its beginning in a heterogeneous group of "finer, more energetic minds," such as the industrial organizer, the merchant, the advertiser, the agriculturist and the engineer, who will work for the common good.

These chosen few, according to Mr. Wells, had better come "from the more vigorous, varied and less severely obsessed centres of the Atlantic civilizations in the temperate zone, with their abundant facilities for publication and discussion, their traditions of mental liberty and their immense variety of interacting free modern types."

"The form in which the Open Conspiracy will first appear," he writes, "will certainly not be that of a centralized organization. Its most natural and convenient method of coming into being will be the formation of small groups of friends, family groups, groups of students and employes or other sorts of people meeting and conversing frequently in the course of their normal occupations, who will exchange views and find themselves in agreement upon the general idea. Young men and women may be collected into groups arranged upon lines not unlike those of the Bohemian Sokols or the Italian Fasci."

The Propaganda Program.

The propaganda which these advocates of the Open Conspiracy will foster is divided by Mr. Wells into six heads:

"(1) The complete assertion, practical as well as theoretical, of the provisional nature of existing Governments and of our acquiescence in them.

"(2) The resolve to minimize by all available means the conflicts of these Governments, their militant use of individuals and property and their interference with the establishment of a world economic system.

"(3) The determination to replace private local or national ownership of at least credit, transport and staple production by a responsible world directorate serving the common ends of the race.

"(4) The practical recognition of the necessity for world biological controls, for example of population and disease.

"(5) The support of a minimum standard of individual freedom and welfare in the world.

"(6) The supreme duty of subordinating the personal life to the creation of a world directorate capable of these tasks and to the general advancement of human knowledge, capacity and power. The admission therewith that our immortality is conditional and lies in the race and not in our individual selves."

"The Open Conspiracy proposes to end and shows how an end may be put to that huge substratum of under-developed, under-educated, subjugated, exploited and frustrated lives upon which such civilization as the world has known hitherto has rested, and upon which most of our social systems will rest," says Mr. Wells at the end of his book.

His scheme, he feels sure, is quite practicable, "subject only to one qualification, that sufficient men and women will be willing to serve it."

LABOR DELEGATES BALK AT NON-UNION MEAL

Insist on Having Waitresses at Atlantic City Hotel All Unionized.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 5.—Consternation gripped the 400 delegates to the fiftieth annual convention of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor when on entering the dining room of the Hotel Jefferson for luncheon today, they discovered they were about to be served by non-union waitresses.

The delegates balked, they sought to organize the waitresses, but found that the hotel management frowned on the effort. For a time it looked as though delegates would pick up bag and baggage and depart to continue their three day parley elsewhere. Finally a committee of the federation, the head waiter and the hotel manager went into conference. The upshot was that the waitresses were organized with the management's consent and the delegates returned to the dining tables.

In his Presidential address, Arthur A. Quinn of Sewaren called attention to the growing problem of unemployment resulting from reduced forces in manufacturing plants.

"Through enforced idleness, the unemployed will cease to be consumers, which in turn will mean slowing down in all industries unless prosperity is to continue and labor in the United States is to maintain a high standard of living, the unemployment problem must be solved so that labor is given an opportunity to work at good wages in order to keep intact its purchasing power."

A shorter working day and 5-day week was suggested by him as one solution.

Resolutions introduced at the opening session condemned injunctions in labor disputes; urged the creation of a State compensation insurance fund and the increase of the number of occupational diseases recognized as compensible and condemned the practice of physicians in getting on the payrolls of both the State Labor Department and compensation insurance companies.

The occupational diseases resolution was inspired by the recent radium poisoning cases. The resolutions will be voted on later.

State Senator Emerson L. Richards, a lawyer of this city, who is also an organist and member of the Musicians' Union, in a speech at the opening session, assailed talking the situation is solved," he said. "It movies as inartistic and unsatisfying.

URGES BRITISH LABOR TO PREPARE FOR POLLS

Henderson Advises Formation of Grand Council to Unite All Sections of Workers.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—Arthur Henderson, M. P., Secretary of the Labor Party and a possible alternative to Ramsay MacDonald as future Labor Prime Minister, urged the Trades Union Congress at Swansea today to organize in preparation for a general election.

What Mr. Henderson urged was the establishment of a joint consultative and coordinating body to link together the Trades Union Congress, the Labor Party and the cooperative movement. It would be known as the Grand Council and would separate the policies of its constituents so that the wage-earner in his capacities of producer, consumer and citizen might feel the policies were equally right and in his interests.

Mr. Henderson made his suggestion in intelligent anticipation of problems that will arise when the Labor Party is responsible for the Government of the country. In the short period when a Labor Government was in office in 1924 there were decided differences between the politicians and trades unionists, differences which were also apparent during the general strike.

BRAZILIAN TARIFF RAISE

Bill Increasing Rates on Gasoline and Autos Is Signed.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 5.—President Washington Luis today signed the Congressional bill authorizing an increase in the special import duties on gasoline and automotive products.

For the good roads fund levied in 1927 the President is now authorized to issue twenty-year 5 per cent. bonds aggregating more than $15,000,000. Some newspapers comment that "the comparatively low interest rate means probably that the Government will unload below the specified bond value of 1 conto, about $130."

American automobile and gasoline representatives point out the already heavy taxes on these lines, for example gasoline, on which there are regular customs duties, plus a special highway duty and plus a consumption tax, equaling the original bulk value f. o. b. American seaboard.

The Government is said to be anxious to push a scheme of extension of trunk roads connecting the Brazilian capital with Southern, Western and Northern Brazil. In May, 1928, President Luis presided at the inauguration of an improved highway between Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo. One Brazilian company is already operating freight trucks, two each way each week, thereby starting competition with the high freight charges by the railroad connecting Brazil's two largest cities.

FRENCH FLIERS DOWN AGAIN

Abandon Ocean Flight When Forced Back to Casablanca.

CASABLANCA, Morocco, Sept. 5 (AP).—After an air jaunt southward from here this morning, the French transatlantic flight aspirants, Jean Assolant and René Lefevre, returned to Casablanca and telegraphed to Paris for orders. They indicated that they had abandoned for the present their project of flying to either South or North America with Armand Lott as passenger.

The machine came down here late yesterday afternoon after it had taken off from Le Bourget Field with New York as its announced destination. An oil leak caused the halt in the project. This was repaired overnight but some further mechanical difficulties are understood to have developed on the attempt today to reach St. Louis, Senegal. That is the usual hopping off place for aviators who cross the South Atlantic to Brazil.

The Frenchmen indicated that they expect to be recalled to Paris.

PANAMA TO GREET FIERRO.

Prepares Rousing Welcome for the Mexican Good-Will Flier.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, Sept. 5.—Panama is preparing a rousing welcome for the arrival of the Mexican aviator, Major Roberto Fierro, here from Costa Rica, and with the experience gained in welcoming Colonel Lindbergh, Captain Costes and Lieutenant Commander Lebrix expects to outdo other countries in honoring the Mexican good-will visitor.

Lindbergh Field, where the other distinguished ambassadors of the air landed, is not in condition at present, and in compliance with the request of the Secretary for Foreign Affairs permission has been granted to Major Fierro to land at the Albrook Field, near the Pacific entrance to the canal. The Mexican Chargé d'Affaires here does not know the date of Major Fierro's arrival and it is believed the accident at the landing in Costa Rica, when his plans was damaged, may delay the departure from there for a week.

SOUTHERN BAPTISTS SUE CARNES'S SON

Seek to Tie Up Assets of Missing Ex-Convict and Mission Board Treasurer.

BODY TO BE REORGANIZED

Discovery Is Made That Fugitive Speculated in Stocks With a New York Firm.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Sept. 5.—With the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board facing a shortage which is expected to exceed $1,000,000 as the result of the financial juggling which preceded the disappearance of Clinton S. Carnes, its Treasurer, who has been identified as a former convict, steps were taken today for a complete reorganization of the board and for action by the courts to clear up the tangle and place responsibility for the huge losses now looming.

With this end in view, Walter R. Brown, a prominent Baptist layman, filed a petition for an injunction preventing Samuel Carnes, son of the missing man, from using his power of attorney to dispose of any of the assets left by his father. These include his home, motor cars, stocks and bonds and other articles of value.

The petition seeks to recover from the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, which bonded Carnes, and from Joel Hunter & Co., auditors, the full amount which the Home Mission Board loses as a result of the activities of the vanished treasurer. The auditing firm is included in that it is charged that it recommended Carnes as a responsible employe.

The discovery that Carnes had served two prison terms, one in Atlanta and one in Clinton, Mo., for misuse of the mails and for revelation of the immense loss that faces the board, have resulted in sweeping changes in its leadership.

Dr. B. D. Gray, former Executive Secretary, retires with the rank of Secretary Emeritus, at a salary of $2,400 a year, and Dr. Arch Cree takes his place, and other changes are being considered.

A statement issued by Carnes's son said that if a complete audit showed that the father did not account for all funds the family stood ready to do whatever it could to reimburse the board for any shortage.

Stock market deals made by Carnes were revealed today. It is stated that he dealt exclusively with Henry Clews & Co. of New York in stocks and that the brokerage house had sold securities for him for a number of years. From the records it appears that he profited by his deals. At the present time, it was said, Carnes had only about $100 left with the company and some ten shares of stock.

Carnes recently made an effort to become the promoter of a world-wide beauty contest.

Auditors today reported the discovery of a secret file which enabled them to uncover the huge shortage.

No trace of Carnes has been found since his disappearance several weeks ago.

Freeze with Heat and save money!

No method of preserving food has yet been found, no means of producing ice has yet been discovered, that operates at as low a cost per month as the new Gas Refrigerator. And not only that, but the Electrolux is noiseless, entirely free from moving parts and the wear, vibration and trouble that go with them.

Costs less to Operate
The total cost of operating the Electrolux—including both gas and water—averages only $1.50 to $2.75 a month in New York and vicinity.

MOST people still consider it a mark of distinction to own an automatic refrigerator. Yet the Electrolux is anything but a luxury. It is the most economical refrigeration system in existence.

No matter what the size or income of your family, the Electrolux will save you money compared with whatever way you now may be attempting to solve the refrigeration problem.

And best of all, the Electrolux is within easy reach of almost any home. A small deposit puts this miracle-working refrigerator in your kitchen. And then you have many months to pay the balance, a little at a time.

If you have planned to buy an automatic refrigerator, if you have ever hoped to own one in the future—this is your chance. Don't miss it.

Six years ago the Electrolux was just a successful laboratory experiment. Today it is in use in thousands of homes and is taking the country by storm.

In the comparatively short time since it was introduced it has been tested by more experts and approved with greater enthusiasm than any similar product in history.

Architects, engineers, scientific laboratories, women's institutes, municipal, state and federal bureaus, public utilities—all these by the hundreds have gone over the new refrigerator with microscopic thoroughness and endorsed it wholeheartedly.

These tests showed that the Electrolux should last indefinitely. No one has yet been able to find any good reason why it should ever wear out, any more than your kitchen cabinet.

The Electrolux has no moving parts to need replacement, to cause trouble. And with no machinery, the refrigerator is noiseless.

The unique principle of the Electrolux was discovered by scientists at the Royal University of Technology, Stockholm, Sweden, in 1922. Strange as it sounds, heat is used to make cold. A tiny gas flame and a trickle of water do all the work. The flame acts on a freezing liquid, perpetually. Without worry, without the slightest bother, you'll have plenty of ice cubes, a uniform low food temperature, indefinitely.

At the nearest display room you will see a wide range of models and sizes on view. You will be especially interested in the good-looking combination refrigerator and gas range, the convenient low-type Electrolux with white enameled table top, and the Kitchenette Model for apartment use. Prices range from $225 to $550.

In addition to the usual white refrigerators, there are lovely color combinations to harmonize with modern kitchens—Biscay Blue, Crystal Green, Silver Grey and Ivory Tan. These colors are obtained by a special new "veiling" process that is exclusive with us.

JURY INDICTS SEVEN FOR MAIL FRAUDS

Guy Huston and Other Westerners Charged at Boston With $1,000,000 Conspiracy.

THREE COMPANIES FORMED

Allege Money Was Put Into Banks in Which Promoters Were Interested.

BOSTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—Seven Mid-Western financiers were charged with conspiracy to use the mails in a scheme to defraud, through the sale of nearly $1,000,000 worth of securities in farm loan companies, in a joint indictment returned by a Federal Grand Jury here today.

Those named in the indictment were Guy Huston, John E. Huston, John L. Boyles and Harold A. Smith, all of Chicago; Walter E. Cravens of Kansas City; Oran F. Schee and Vernon U. Sigler of Des Moines.

The charges involve the sale of securities in three companies, the Missouri Kansas Farm Company, the Farm Company of Massachusetts and the Farmers' Fund of Illinois. It is charged that the companies were represented as having been organized to lend money to farmers and banks in the Middle West and to take second mortgages on farms already mortgaged to the Federal Joint Stock Land Banks.

The Government alleges that the men under indictment misused the funds of the companies by putting them into Mid-Western banks in which they were interested: that the companies did not loan the money to any local banks for the benefit of farmers, and in only a few instances took any second mortgages on farms already mortgaged to the land banks.

Securities in the companies were sold to many prominent residents of Massachusetts and New England, including President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, who is said to have purchased $70,000 worth of securities of the Farm Company of Massachusetts.

Other purchasers were said to include Frank C. Paine, Irving H. Niles, D. Brewster Eddy and Roger Ernst, as well as several Boston brokerage houses.

None of the persons indicted is in Boston.

John Huston in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5 (AP).—Guy Huston and John E. Huston, brothers named in a Federal Grand Jury indictment in Boston today, are Chicago bankers and brokers. John Huston is in Chicago now but his brother is in the East.

According to John Huston, John L. Boyles and Harold A. Smith, two other Chicago men named in the indictment for using the mails to defraud, were connected with the Hustons' in 1925. Walter E. Cravens of Kansas City, and Oran F. Schee and Vernon U. Sigler of Des Moines, are joint stock land bankers.

Cravens Under Sentence.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 5 (AP).—Walter Cravens, indicted with six others in Boston today on mail fraud conspiracy charges, is under sentence to the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan., on charges growing out of the failure of the Kansas City Joint Stock Land Bank, of which he was President.

The Government charged Cravens with diverting funds of the Land Bank to a Missouri power project by manipulation through two other companies he headed, one the Missouri-Kansas Farm Company, the sale of securities of which was involved in the Boston indictments today.

BOY FATALLY SHOT IN MIMIC WAR GAME

Louis V. Sterling of New York Victim of Jammed Cartridge Near Lake Placid.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Louis Victor Sterling Jr., the twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Victor Sterling of 956 Fifth Avenue, New York City, was accidentally shot yesterday by a playmate during a boys' club sham battle on the Bear Mountain road about six miles from the Lake Placid Club.

A bullet from a .22-calibre rifle, held by Dexter W. Hewitt Jr. of Ardsley-on-Hudson and which repeated tests had apparently shown to be empty, struck Sterling under the right eye and pierced the brain. He died in the Lake Placid General Hospital at 8 o'clock P. M.

Both boys had been shooting at a target under close supervision. Both had followed the directions of the instructor in unloading their rifles before joining other members of the party. The entire party then united in a mimic war game, in which dummy or wooden guns were used by all but Sterling and Hewitt. Both had followed instructions and were seen to snap the triggers toward the ground, as instructed, four times. Sterling had reported to the leader that both he and Hewitt had emptied their magazines. Apparently the last cartridge in one gun jammed and failed to eject. When the game was resumed, several other snaps were made before the jammed cartridge exploded.

AMERICAN SHIP ATTACHED.

Albatross, Which Carried Nautical Students, Held in Hamburg.

HAMBURG, Sept. 5 (AP).—The American nautical ship Albatross, which sailed from Boston on July 13 on a Summer cruise with a party of American boys as students, was ordered attached yesterday by a Hamburg court as the result of bills for food and supplies for the ship not having been paid.

The Albatross anchored in Hamburg harbor several weeks ago pending a settlement of its financial difficulties. Most of the students aboard received money from home and left on their own initiative. Only a day or so ago, however, twenty-one of them were still in Hamburg, stranded and without funds.

The American consulate said that a few of the boys would have to wait for release of the Albatross before they could return home. This is expected to take place in about ten days.

TEACHER ENDS LIFE WITH PISTOL IN AUTO

Body Is Found in Car Near Home in North Branch, N. J.—Mother Lays Act to Melancholia.

Special to The New York Times.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Sept. 5.—Miss Enola Skillman of North Branch, five miles west of here, who was to have started teaching school at Bedminster this morning, committed suicide late yesterday afternoon by shooting herself through the head with a bullet from a 25 calibre German automatic pistol. She is the second New Jersey school teacher to commit suicide with a week. Last Wednesday Miss Hulda Schulz, 22 years old, principal of the school at Ringoes, N. J., took her own life by drinking poison.

Miss Skillman was found sitting in her Buick coupe at the side of the North Branch-Pluckemin Road, about half a mile from the main highway and a half mile from her home. A letter, addressed to mother, was found on the seat of the car. Mrs. Fannie Skillman, the mother, after reading the letter said that she was satisfied that her daughter had taken her life while suffering from melancholia.

The pistol was clasped in the young woman's right hand. The bullet had entered her head in the right temple and taken a downward course to come out of the neck back of the left ear. It was found in the upholstery of the car.

Miss Skillman, who was 20 years old, was graduated from Somerville High School in 1926, and from the Newark Normal School last Spring. The Bedminster School was to have been her first place at a teacher.

COMING TO SIGN CUBAN LOAN

Treasury Secretary Will Ratify $50,000,000 Deal Here.

HAVANA, Sept. 5 (AP).—Guiterres de Calis, Secretary of the Cuban Treasury Department, will leave Havana on Sept. 15 for New York where he will sign the reecnt $50,000,000 loan agreement negotiated for Cuba with the Chase National Bank of that city.

Señor de Cells said that he would then take an extended vacation in the United States and Canada but emphatically denied reports that he would resign his portfolio.

The $50,000,000 loan to Cuba made by a syndicate headed by the Chase National Bank was announced here several months ago and will be devoted to the road building program of the Cuban Government and other public works. The extensive projects are being financed o na pay-as-you-go basis at a substantial saving to the Government.

While a total of $50,000,000 is made available, payment is made by the bank in instalments as sections of the work are completed.

When payments are made the bank receives securities of the Cuban Government, which may in the future be offered for public subscription. No public offering has yet been made.

The Chase group has been active in previous financing of the Cuban Government.

Brazil Coffee Convention Ends.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SAO PAULO, Brizal, Sept. 5.—The convention this week of the coffee States was conspicuously brief. It closed after a short series of sessions at which were considered interior technical improvements and an interstate plan for storage and for financing the sale of coffee crops.

New things for town and country at the shops of Peck & Peck

COMES the Autumn and the debut of the brilliant new things of Peck & Peck. Suits and ensembles in smart new fabrics and swagger patterns—things apt and pat for hill and dale and right as a trivet for the trails of town. And scarves and sweaters, hats and hose, absolutely original, free from stilted and stagey gew-gaws and all gloriously, gloriously new.

This three-piece knitted jersey suit achieves a new triumph in simplicity—and in smartness. Jumper is horizontally striped in silk and wool, and the skirt pleats make their charming appearance in clusters. $35. Hat of imported felt, $15.

Doubly charming is the pullover of this swanky two piece silk and wool knitted suit. For it tucks snugly in the skirt or is worn just as smartly outside. $33. Silk and wool sweater to match, $12. Felt hat with band of grosgrained ribbon, $10.

BLINDFOLDED . . . .
in a scientific test...Mrs. Phinnan-Haddie picks a perfect gift at OVINGTON'S

MRS. Philander Phinnan-Haddie in her interviews with the press was very modest and inclined to make light of the whole affair.

"Really," said Mrs. Finney, "Really, it was nothing. I have always known the lovely gifts of Ovington's. At each of my five weddings the china and crystal, the lamps and silver, the mirrors and furniture showered upon me seemed to increase in beauty and charm."

"Of course, it was very confusing to be twisted and turned so many times but the friendly shove of the Test Committee helped me mightily. I am happy that this great honor has come to the 4th Ward and I am ready to submit to this test at any time to prove that Ovington's holds the most glorious collection of gifts in all the world."

How the Test was made!

The test was made before witnesses and with only two rehearsals. And only twice before had Mrs. Finney been blindfolded. Once at the age of twelve, while playing post-office with the postman and again at a fire at Meadowbrook, when they had to blindfold her to lead her to safety.

ARREST GUN SELLER AT PHILADELPHIA

Police Hold Goldberg on His Story of Handling Weapons and Bullet-Proof Vests.

LINKED TO GANG KILLINGS

Prosecutor Says Store Supplied Criminals — City and Federal Dry Forces Press Raids.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—Max "Boo Boo" Hoff, denounced last week by District Attorney John Monaghan as "king" of the Philadelphia bootleggers, was accused by the same official today as the purchaser of bullet-proof vests and machine guns for notorious gangsters.

Tonight the police arrested on a warrant Edward S. Goldberg, proprietor of a military sales store, who admitted to the District Attorney and his aides that he had sold bullet-proof vests, Vickers and Thompson sub-machine guns and sawed-off shot guns and that his Market Street shop was a veritable arsenal. Mr. Monaghan announced that Goldberg, who said he kept no list of his machine gun customers, would be held in $100,000 bail for the Grand Jury on a perjury charge.

Replies by Goldberg during an examination by the jury earlier in the day, Mr. Monaghan said, indicated that it was as easy for a person to go into the store and buy a $150 machine gun as it was to purchase a pair of khaki leggings. He was said to have asserted that on March 10, 1927, he had in his possession 450 Vickers machine guns, the retail price of which was $150.

County detectives seized the store records today, but found no trace of any of these guns.

"Jack" Lynch, alleged proprietor of the Fox Grille, which was raided by Federal agents yesterday, was arrested on a charge of conspiracy and aggravated assault and battery on an officer of the law.

Three Clean-Up Forces at Work.

These were the high lights of a day in which city police, county detectives and Federal prohibition agents vied with one another to "put the lid down" on vice and crime in Philadelphia, in compliance with the orders of Mayor Mackey and District Attorney Monaghan.

Tonight the raids continued, stills and mash were confiscated and occasionally an arrest was made. But in the view of some officials "undercover" business was still being done by some establishments.

The District Attorney's new accusation against Hoff, the manager of prize fighters, came after Mr. Monaghan, Assistant District Attorney Lemuel B. Schofield and Chief of County Detectives Patrick E. McKewen had been closeted with Goldberg.

Goldberg's examination has some connection with the case of "Frankie" Bailey and "Petey" Ford, gangsters who were arrested in connection with their beating of two young women in a local hotel and who were sentenced to serve long terms in the Eastern State Penitentiary.

On the persons of Bailey and Ford when arrested were found receipts for bullet-proof vests and machine guns. Checking up on these, city detectives interviewed Goldberg, according to Mr. Monaghan, and were told:

A day or two after the present Grand Jury began its investigations Ford and Bailey were taken from prison to the jury room.

From the records of Goldberg's store, it was discovered that he had obtained seven bullet-proof vests from the American Armor Corporation of 33 West Thirty-fourth Street, New York, on the ground that he was filling an order for a Philadelphia bank.

"Didn't Know" His Customers.

Mr. Monaghan said Goldberg admitted under questioning that he never had dealings with any local banking institution for that purpose. In reply to questions about the identity of his customers, Goldberg is said to have replied that he "didn't know who bought the stuff and it was none of his business so long as he got the money for it."

At one time, it was revealed, the Auto-Ordnance Corporation of 302 Broadway, New York, manufacturers of the Thompson sub-machine guns, wrote to Goldberg asking for a list of persons to whom he had made sales.

Goldberg did not reply, Mr. Monaghan said, but on receiving a second request responded that he did not know the purchasers.

While the prosecutor and his aides were delving into the gang warfare angle of the investigation, an indication that the other phase, alleged police bribery, was not being overlooked was seen in the fact that two inspectors, John Stuckert and John J. Carlin, and one captain, William G. Wuest, were summoned to appear before the Grand Jury. In a previous interview with Mr. Monaghan, Captain Wuest had estimated that there were one hundred speakeasies and liquor establishments and fifty disorderly houses in his district.

The name of Max Hassel, known as the "millionaire newsboy beer baron" of Reading, Pa., was mentioned in connection with the Philadelphia bootlegger inquiry, and the District Attorney said a subpoena would be issued for him to appear before the Grand Jury. It was reported from Reading that Hassel was missing from his accustomed haunts.

ATHENS, Sept. 5 (AP).—Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, who like so many other residents of the capital has been suffering from Dengue fever, was greatly improved tonight. His temperature was almost normal. Physicians have been astonished by his powers of resistance, despite his age of 64 years.

A dispatch from Washington last night quoted Mrs. Willebrandt as saying that the only correspondence she had had with Mayor Walker "is of an official nature and that she does not feel at liberty to make it public."

It was intimated in the Mayor's office in the City Hall that the letter, together with Mayor Walker's reply, probably would be released for publication today.

REQUEST MORE RAIDS BY MRS. WILLEBRANDT

As the result of the recent publicity received by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt in connection with night club raids in this city, her office has been swamped with anonymous, initialed and signed complaints against speak-easies throughout the city, Norman J. Morrison, special assistant representing Mrs. Willebrandt here, announced yesterday.

Mr. Morrison, in making the announcement, said that he wished to thank those who had expressed confidence in the work of the Assistant Attorney General in charge of prohibition enforcement by sending in such complaints, and added that all information was "receiving attention."

One typical letter told of a "respectable woman" who went into a speak-easy with a friend because the friend wanted to drink. The place was supposed to be a "respectable resort," and the writer of the letter was deeply shocked and mortified when she received insulting treatment there.

"Would like to sign my name," the letter concluded, "only I don't want to have any trouble, but what I am writing you is the truth, so help me God. So please, Mrs. Willebrandt, see if you cannot have that place raided and closed down for the good of other folks that might get the same treatment. I have confidence in you, that is why I wrote you direct."

The majority of the letters, Mr. Morrison said, are from wives and mothers who feel that their sons and husbands might be saved from drunkards' graves if Mrs. Willebrandt would raid the places where they spend all their time.

Mr. Morrison said that most of the complaints were turned over to the Prohibition Department.

3 Killed in London Streets Each Day

WEST POINT TO MARK LAFAYETTE-MARNE DAY

Today, which is the 171st anniversary of the birth of Lafayette, is also the anniversary of the Battle of the Marne. National Lafayette-Marne Day exercises are to be held at West Point at 3:30 this afternoon, with a number of prominent persons participating.

Victor J. Dowling, presiding Justice of the Supreme Court, Appelate Division, First Department, and James W. Wadsworth Jr., former United States Senator, will be the principal speakers at the exercises. Maurice Leon is the Chairman.

Major Gen. William Rutven Smith, Superintendent of the United States Military Academy, will welcome the guests of honor who will be headed by Count de Sartiges, Chargé d'Affaires of France at Washington, and accompanied by representatives of the French Army and Navy.

Today will be the fourteenth consecutive observance of Lafayette-Marne Day, which was initiated in 1915, and the tenth anniversary of the exercises in 1918 when Theodore Roosevelt was the principal speaker. Herbert Hoover was the speaker in 1920 and Governor Smith has issued proclamations recalling the reasons for observance of the day.

In a message sent yesterday to the committee in charge of the exercises, Premier Poincaré of France said:

"The simultaneous celebration of the anniversaries of the birth of Lafayette and the victory of the Marne constitute an eloquent manifestation of the sentiments of amity which unite the United States and France, and to which the visit to France of the members of the Lafayette Escadrille has just attested anew. I am happy to associate myself once more with a ceremony destined to maintain with noble fidelity the cult of imperishable remembrances common to our two countries."

Dante's Tomb Reported Violated.

ROME, Sept. 5 (AP).—Corriere di Napoli prints a story today from Ravenna to the effect that the tomb of the poet Dante Allighieri has been violated and the poet's ashes stolen. Authorities acting on this clue have opened the tomb in an endeavor to prove the truth or falsity of the story.

HIGH ARMY MEN AT CAMP.

Ely and Hammond Among Observers of Peekskill Manoeuvres.

Special to The New York Times.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Four prominent United States Army officers, including Major Generals Hanson Ely and Creed Hammond, went along as observers today with the high officers of the Division Staff and State Staff of the New York National Guard in working out a defense and a counter-attack problem in State camp in Peekskill.

Major Gen. William N. Haskell, commander of the guard, and about thirty guard officers participated with some units of State troops, in directing the operations of a phantom division. The visiting observers, in camp for only one day, besides Major Gens. Ely of Governors Is.and and Hammond of Washington, were Colonel Reynolds Burt and Colonel Berkeley Enochs. They were guests of Colonel Adolphe Huguet, senior army instructor, and other officers permanently assigned to the camp.

The officers of the guard took field positions and were placed at about the same posts they would be if leading a division.

The 102d Medical Regiment, led by Colonel L. A. Salisbury, loaned some troops for the operations. The 102d Engineers Regiment, led by Colonel Frederick Humphreys; the 101st Signal Battalion, under Major A. C. Otto, and the Twenty-seventh Special Troops, led by Major JJohn C. Mansfield, took routine training during the day in camp.

HERKNESS GEMS DISAPPEAR

Meadowbrook Woman Reports Loss of Jewels at Saratoga Springs.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—Mrs. J. Smylie Herkness of Meadowbrook, wife of a Philadelphia club man, lost or was robbed of jewels valued at $10,000 at the races at Saratoga Springs on Saturday, she has notified relatives here. Mrs. Herkness did not list the gems or explain the facts of their disappearance.

Gilbert Herkness of the firm of Sidney Herkness and Company, which is acting for her, said tonight that a reward, the amount of which he did not know, was being offered by Coplis & Harding, insurance adjusters of New York City, for the return of the jewels. Mrs. Herkness has not yet returned to her home here.

Have you enough outlets for comfort?
...can you make toast at your table?

It doesn't make any difference whether you're building a new house or remodeling an old one—wiring should be one of the fundamentals that take your first thought. Consider each room as it will be when you live in it. Take your dining room, as an example.

There should be outlets for your toaster, your percolator, your chafing-dish. There should be an outlet for your vacuum cleaner or your electric fan. There should be a switch at the door. These small things make your home truly comfortable—and they add so little to its cost.

The General Electric Wiring System (the completely planned wiring arrangement) gives you enough outlets to use electricity to the limit of its helpfulness. And all its materials, inside your walls and out, are made for lasting service by General Electric.

Weaver Puzzles New York After Burke Is Hit Hard—30,000 at the Stadium.

By RICHARDS VIDMER.

The Yanks gained nothing but experience at the Stadium yesterday. The main point, however, is that they didn't lost anything at all. That is, they didn't lose anything but a ball game, and as they also won one they maintained their two-game lead over their persistent pursuers, the Athletics.

They remained incognito in the first game with the Senators, refusing to budge from behind their alias of "The Hitless Wonders," and they lost another 3—1 decision to sad Sam Jones. We say another, because that was the exact score by which the same Mr. Jones beat them in Washington last week.

They took off their whiskers for the second contest and looked more like the rampageous run and fun makers that they are, raising so much havoc with the pitching of Bob Burke that Manager Harris tried to laugh it off by sending Mr. Bullets Weaver to the box.

Crowd Roars With Glee.

The crowd of 30,000 roared with glee when they saw the mastodon from the mountains appear on the field, but they discovered before long that Bullets was no joke after all. He practically put a stop to the Yankee hitting reform just as it got well in motion, and the final score was 8 to 3, which was the approximate count when Burke deserted the field.

Bullets didn't look like a pitcher—in fact, he more nearly resembled the Washington Monument, rampant. He proved to be a better act than Altrock and Schacht, and certainly he got more laughs. He was so tall that he ducked when an airplane buzzed over the field, and when Catcher Kenna went out to whisper instructions in his ear the pair looked like a touching tableau of father and son.

He doesn't pitch exactly; he just steps off the box and hands the ball across the plate, but with all his height he couldn't undo the damage that the Yanks had done to Burke.

They hammered him for four hits in the first inning and three in the second. Then, after a brief rest, they pounded out three more in the fourth. All of which produced a total of six runs, and as Freddy Heimach held the Senators helpless from the start, the Yanks didn't mind if they were limited to two hits by Mr. Weaver in the last four frames.

Each Accounts for Run.

One of those hits preceded an error and a sacrifice, though, and the other was followed by three bases on balls, so each accounted for a run.

Tallies weren't so plentiful in the first game, however. Neither were hits, for that matter. The Yanks made only six safe blows off Jones during the entire game, and that wasn't nearly enough.

They took a one-run lead in the fifth inning when a single by Robertson, a sacrifice and another hit by Bengough broke a scoreless tie which had prevailed up to that moment. Pipgras was pitching very conservatively and to all outward appearances that one run loomed large and commanding. Looks were deceiving.

Pipgras's pitching was conservative only until the seventh, when it was less than no pitching at all. Cronin singled, Jones walked, Robertson booted West's bunt and then Rice and Goslin smacked out successive singles. The result was three runs and those three runs turned apparent triumph into defeat.

Good Pitching Wasted.

They also sent Pipgras wandering off into the shadows and Cy Moore wandering in from the bull pen. Cy stopped that outburst neatly and Myles Thomas kept the Senators from scoring in the last two innings, but the Yanks never could get started against Jones, so all their good pitching, which arrived too late, was wasted.

The first game marked the return of Tony Lazzeri to the line-up, but only as a pinch hitter. Huggins says he doesn't expect Tony to play second base again this season. His bat may help the cause some, however.

The Yanks ought to put a burglar alarm on second base. Goslin stole the bag without either Koenig or Durocher making a move to do anything about it. Maybe they were in conference, but not with each other.

With one on in the fourth, Ruth hurled his bat farther than he hit the ball. Farther, but not higher.

The nearest thing to a Yankee rally in the first contest was a single, an error and two pinch hitters.

Koenig's fielding was a little frail when he had only one man to get, but when double plays loomed before him he was as steady as the calendar. He was mixed up in four of them in the two games. Seven double plays were made in the second game, four by Washington.

Goslin had a dandy time kicking dust in the face of Lou Gehrig, his rival for American League batting honors. The Goose made four safe blows in eight times at bat and Gehrig made only one in four official tries.

Zachary probably will be hurled at his old teammates this afternoon.

The box scores:

TIGERS OVERWHELM WHITE SOX, 10 TO 2

Pound Five Chicago Hurlers and Take Their Final Game of Season at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5 (AP).—Detroit batsmen hit about everything tossed at them today, crushing the White Sox 10 to 2 in their final game here this season.

Five pitchers, Walsh, Adkins, Blankensip, Cox and Dugan, worked for the White Sox, but every member of the Tiger got at least one hit except Gehringer. Harry Heilmann got three hits in four attempts, while Stone got two triples.

Stoner and Carroll of Detroit limited Chicago to eight hits, only one of which was for extra bases.

GIANTS GET 22 HITS AND ROUT PHILS, 14-3

Ott Leads Onslaught With Two Homers as Benton Rolls Up 23d Victory of Year.

O'DOUL ALSO BATS HEAVILY

By JAMES R. HARRISON.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—Hitting early and often as soon as the polls opened at Baker Bowl this afternoon, the Giants won their final game of the season with the Phillies by the overwhelming plurality of 14 to 3.

Before the fourth inning was finished every Giant except Benton had rapped Claude Willoughby for at least one hit and the seventh was still going on when every Giant except Lindstrom and Benton had two hits to his credit.

During it all, Larry Benton stood out there on the mound and just yawned through his twenty-third victory of the season. After the Phillies hit him for two runs in the first inning they didn't score until Klein hit a home run with none on in the eighth. Larry allowed only seven hits. That's the kind of game it was.

The twenty-two base knocks by the Giants, seven for extra bases and most of them hard smashes, brought their total to seventy-seven safe hits in their five games here.

Ott Collects Two Homers.

Melvin Ott came out of the deluge on top, for the little shaver delivered his fifteenth and sixteenth home runs of the year, both with O'Doul on base. That makes him tied with Bill Terry as the home run king of the Giants.

But Ottey was just one of eight Giant sluggers. Lefty O'Doul was the producer of two doubles and two singles and Andy Reese hammered a double and three singles. Ott and Jackson fattened their averages with three hits. Ott drove in four runs and Welsh three.

The contest might be construed as a gesture of vengeance over the feat of the Phillies yesterday in stealing their game in the ninth inning, for McGraw showed his disdain of the Phils by inserting substitutes here and there during the contest.

J. P. Price, a young right-handed, hitting and throwing outfielder from the Greenville club of the Sally League, took Welsh's place in centre field in the seventh; Russell Wrightstone appeared on first in place of Terry in the last inning, with Andy Cohen at Lindstrom's third-base post and Jack Cummings behind the bat instead of Hogan.

Hits Ring From Giant Bats.

Base hits bounded all over the premises in the first inning and there was no let-up except a brief recess in the second. A pass to Welsh, a single by O'Doul, Lindstrom's double and Terry's single put over two runs at the start.

Philadelphia tied it right away on doubles by Sothern and Klein and a single by Fred Leach.

Welsh's double, a one-baser by O'Doul and a passed ball charged to Catcher Davis gave the Giants a run in the third and the game was sewed up in the fourth when singles by Jackson, Hogan, Reese and Welsh were climaxed by a home run by Ott that hit the top of the high wall in right field, scoring one man ahead.

Ned Porter, the University of Florida boy who has been hanging around with the Giants off and on for two years, has joined the McGraw group again. This time he came up from Florida, where he has been nursing a lame back.

The slim crowd let out a wild yell when the scoreboard announced the defeat of the Yankees.

Reese Starring on Cohen's Job.

Andy Reese, said to have the broadest Southern accent in the league, at least, is playing such a snappy fielding and hitting game it may be a long time before Andy Cohen gets his regular job back, if ever.

Leslie Mann is preparing an article on the technique of baseball to be used in conjunction with his moving picture education program among the American Legion boys.

Benton pitched just three balls to the Phillies in the sixth and then sat down for another rest.

LEAFS TRIM ROYALS, 5-3.

TORONTO, Sept. 5 (AP).—Toronto defeated Montreal, 5 to 3, here today in the closing game of the season's series with the Royals. By their victory the Leafs got an even break in the four games.

Herb Thormahlen, southpaw, and Clarence Fisher, Toronto right-hander, waged a pitching duel for seven innings, but Fisher proved the better and after the third inning held the Royals to three scattered hits. The Leafs collected twelve off Thormahlen and bunched them.

Alexander, Shinners, Bedore and Cote were the main sluggers for the locals. Rabbitt tripled in the seventh and stole home with what proved to be the winning tally.

ALDRIDGE IN DEBUT WINS FOR NEWARK

KINGDON'S HOMER SCORES 4

Wallop With Bases Filled Decides Game—Malone Stars in the Field.

Kingdon's home run with the bases loaded and brilliant fielding by Lew Malone behind the pitching of Vic Aldridge, former New York Giant, helped Newark defeat Jersey City in the final game of the series at the Bears' Stadium in Newark yesterday by a score of 9 to 3.

Aldridge in his début made a fine impression, holding Jersey City at bay without much trouble. Kingdon's long smash came in the seventh with Fournier, Malone and Skiff on base.

Malone contributed a sparkling catch when he made a backhand spear of Nalbock's hard smash behind second in the eighth frame. He also made a spectacular one-hand stop and threw out Smith in the fourth inning.

Fator Pilots Victorian, 1 to 7, to Easy Triumph in the Manhattan at Belmont

VICTORIAN BREEZES HOME FIRST AT 1-7

Outclasses Field in Manhattan Handicap, Going Mile in Fast Time of 1:37 3-5.

PRINCESS TINA IS NEXT

Is Two Lengths Behind Whitney Colt at Belmont, With Penalo 3d —Curate Wins Impressively.

By BRYAN FIELD.

The shortest odds of the Eastern season, 1 to 7, were quoted on Harry Payne Whitney's Victorian in the Manhattan Handicap yesterday at Belmont Park, and the colt won so easily he might just as well have been Man o' War at 1 to 100.

Three others started, but after the first hundred yards Victorian never noticed them and he used the mile race as the first part of a workout of a mile and a half for the Lawrence Realization, to be run on Saturday.

At the end of the mile of the Manhattan, which was worth $3,800 to the winner, Victorian had two lengths on the Audley Farm's Princess Tina, which was all out to get that close, while Victorian was out of a pull only in the last sixteenth.

The short end of the purse went to Larry Waterbury's Penalo, which was a head behind Princess Tina and also driving hard, while I. B. Humphrey's Light Carbine brought up the rear, five lengths further back.

The showing of Victorian was impressive. He finished the mile in 1:37 3-5, about as fast a mile as has been run at Belmont since Spring, and had passed the six-furlong mark in 1:10 3-5, which is within a fifth of a second of the track record for that distance.

Goes Mile and a Half in 2:35 3-5.

Moreover, while the track was fast it was not particularly keen. Just before the finish Laverne Fator called on the colt and he went rushing past the finish line and around the turn to be clocked at the mile and a quarter in 2:05 3-5, and the mile and three furlongs in 2:19 3-5. About here he was eased, but galloped out the mile and a half in 2:35 3-5.

The race completed a pair of doubles, as Honker had earlier won the Kew Gardens purse for Whitney, and Fator was up on Abe Hallow's Single Star, winner of the Woodbury, a claiming event that started the program.

It was known early in the afternoon that Victorian would be at an exceptionally short price, as three of the horses counted on to give the sternest competition were scratched. These were J. P. Smith's Sun Forward, George D. Widener's Gerard and the Arden Farms' Sun Edwin. This left Victorian under 118 pounds, which was nine more than carried by Princess Tina, and Penalo with 106 and Light Carbine with 105.

The start was good, with Penalo showing in front for an instant until Victorian hit his stride. Then, so far as first place was concerned, the race was over.

He was out to work a mile and a half for the Realization and en route knocked over a purse that was hung on the mile post. Princess Tina fell in behind Victorian before the first furlong was run with Penalo third and Light Carbine last.

Penalo Saves Ground in Stretch.

This was the order all the way around with Victorian galloping and the other three driving to keep to his pace. Penalo saved much ground on the stretch turn and looked as if he would catch Princess Tina but that one lasted to get the place at 3 to 1.

When Penalo and Princess Tina were waging their battle for the place Fator took several glances over his shoulder and made everything safe by calling on Victorian to show something. It was about time for the big fellow to run in a mile and a half workout and the move left the others standing still. Fator brought Victorian back around the oval and he was waved to the finish stand so that stewards and judges could get a look at the horse. The time he had passed the stand he was traveling so fast all one could see was his dust.

There was a good two-year-old race on the card in which Joseph E. Widener's Curate, which had started only twice before, won impressively.

Curate was the 3 to 2 favorite in a field of nine largely as a result of the sensational workouts he has been turning in recently. He also showed a good effort in his last out at Saratoga when he ran through the mud to win. Yesterday he broke on top and was so far ahead in the first quarter that he was able to cross over in front of most of the field without danger of interference.

Curate Wins By Three Lengths.

He won nicely in hand by three lengths from Chicatie from the Fair Stable, which nosed out J. E. Madden's Healy for the place. Harry Payne Whitney's Zoom, heavily backed at 8 to 5, was out of the money.

The first Whitney triumph was a driving victory, as Robertson had to keep Honker going to stave off the challenge of Mrs. Katherine E. Hitt's Sublevado, which ran a much improved race over his recent effort to be within a length of the winner. Honker paid 6 to 1 and was on top from start to finish, the Carlton Stable's Double Pay, 13 to 10 favorite, being third, a length behind Sublevado.

Fator's first victory was popular as Single Star was the 2 to 1 favorite in a big field. He won by five lengths after leading all the way.

4 HORSES IN SPILL ON GRAND CIRCUIT

BARON HALL IS VICTOR

Winnipeg Captures $5,000 Silver Flash 2:10 Pace in Straight Heats—Hazelton Triumphs.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 5 (AP).—A spectacular accident marred the second heat of the Fox Stake for two-year-old pacers at the Grand Circuit meeting at the State Fair Grounds today. Volowin, the favorite, which had won the first heat, tripped and went down entering the upper turn.

Tony Worthy, driven by Palin; Mary Ann, driven by Beatty, and Direct K. Braden, with Fleming in the sulky, all went down in a heap. Mat Ray, driving Volwin, suffered cuts and body injuries, while Palin received a bad cut across the face and sprained his wrist.

Judges distanced Volowin, holding that the accident was not avoidable. Baron Hall won the $11,841 event, which gave his owner, E. J. Baker, $5,920 as his share of the stake.

The Jack Trimble Silver Flash Gas Stake of $5,000 in the 2:10 pace was won in straight heats by Winnipeg. The 2:08 trot proved straight-heat victories for Hazleton, while the 2:16 pace went to Tilda Gray after Labrador won the first heat.

DILLON REVIEW WINS POTTSVILLE 2:20 TROT

Cindy Napoleon and Flo Patch Also Triumph as Willis Grattan Loses in Upset.

Special to The New York Times.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 5.—Surprises in betting circles marked the third day's classes of the Central Circuit light harness meeting today at the Schuylkill County Fair. The 2:20 trot, with eleven starters, had Dillon Review, owned and driven by Harry B. Corbin of Hanover, winning after losing the second heat by a head to Charles C. C. Coolcantches's entry, Maxey Gamo. All the finishes were of the blanket type.

Cindy Napoleon, recently purchased by Samuel E. Unger of Shoemakersville, won the 2:19 pace, each heat being fought from wire to wire. Cherry Volo took the third heat.

The Corbin nominee, Flo Patch, annexed the 2:13 pace in straight heats, with Virginia Neptune the contender. The defeat of Willis Grattan, the hitherto invincible Canadian horse, hit the form players hard.

Hitchcock's Four Again Wins Test Match, Score Is 8 to 5

WHITE FOUR SCORES FOR HITCHCOCK, 8-5

Guest Rides at No. 1 for Blues in Test Match of Six Periods.

HARRIMAN STAGES A RALLY

His Work in Fifth Session Gives Tentative American Team the Upper Hand.

By ROBERT F. KELLEY.

Special to The New York Times.

WESTBURY, L. I., Sept. 5.—The unvarying line-up of Whites scored another victory over the Blues today on Cochran Field at the Meadow Brook Club in the continuation of the series of test matches designed to pick the United States polo team for the international cup series with Argentina.

The contest was shortened to six periods to save the international mounts as well as wear and tear on the field, which was cut up considerably before four chukkers had been played.

The final score was 8 to 5, with the Whites taking the lead at 3 to 1 in the first chukker and then losing it in the fourth, an uncommon occurrence in the current test series.

Whites Gain Lead Again.

A sudden brace, however, by W. Averell Harriman at No. 1 for the Whites gave the tentative American fourth the upper hand again in the fifth period and the Blues were held scoreless for the remainder of the match. Harriman scored twice in the fifth and added two more goals in the sixth to maintain the long string of White successes over the rival Blues.

The Whites again rode out with Harriman, Thomas Hitchcock Jr., Malcolm Stevenson and J. Chever Cowdin in that order, while the main shift of the day in the opposition line-up moved young Winston Guest from back to number one. Robert E. Strawbridge Jr., an inactive candidate this season, filled in at back, with Captain C. T. I. Roark, the Irish star, and J. Watson Webb forming the middle, and strongest, half of the Blues. They were a thirty-three goal team in that formation with the Whites aggregating thirty-five.

The shifting of Guest from back to No. 1 had its expected result. The 22-year-old Yale graduate, playing forward for the first time this season after several gratifying exhibitions at back, could not find himself in the new rôle.

Thrown against Cowdin he proved no match for the older player in several clashes for the ball. He was quite out of things most of the time and had only one good period, the fourth, in which he scored from a mêlée for his only goal of the game.

Then Hits His Stride.

In this period he was on the ball and in the play more often than in any other chukker, contributing several runs and getting his eye on the ball. Generally he was missing too frequently, a fault common to most of the players in the spotty polo of the day.

Harriman, whose position on the tentative American four was challenged by Guest today, started slowly and could not get going in the first four periods. He concluded the game, however, with a spirited and aggressive exhibition, scoring twice in the fifth period after Captain Hitchcock had set the ball up for him and adding two goals unaided in the sixth.

His last goal capped a sparkling four-stroke run down the centre of the field, in which he stroked briskly and accurately while riding off Bobby Strawbridge on the near side of his mount all the way down.

Hitchcock and Stevenson, the international veterans, played steadfast polo, though neither approached his best. The Blues' strength was provided by Captain Roark and Webb, the overseas player hitting skillfully and featuring the play in the second and third periods, with the left-hander always on his game. Between them they scored three of the Blues' goals and Roark set the ball up for Strawbridge's goal.

Harriman, with his four goals in the last two periods, led the scoring for the victors, Hitchcock earning two goals and Stevenson and Cowdin one apiece.

Whites Get Fast Start.

The Whites started with their usual vigor, Stevenson and Hitchcock combining to score the first goal in five plays after the throw-in by Captain J. Wesley White. Stevenson was on the scoring end of the rush. Hitchcock, playing his piebald gelding Tobiana, then turned an attack in midfield, set the ball up for himself, and followed on to score the second goal.

Again Hitchcock, with two long drives from the east boards, swept through the Blues' territory and scored on an offside backhander while Harriman cleared Strawbridge out of the way. With the tally 3 to 0 against them the Blues braced and Roark scored on a shot under Cowdin's mount.

Fouls on both sides slowed up the game as the Blues outscored the Whites in the second, third and fourth periods. In the second period Hitchcock centred the ball with a lofting drive from the east boards and Cowdin turned it into the Blues' goal with a nearside backhand stab under his mount's neck.

Captain Roark then cut down the Whites' advantage, setting up the ball for a Strawbridge goal, and then scoring himself at the end of a matchless run of four strokes in which he beat off Cowdin and Harriman in succession.

The Whites went scoreless in the third and fourth periods, Webb tying the count early in the third chukker and Guest putting the Blues ahead in the fourth with a goal from scrimmage. The Whites continued to attack strongly, but their drives were missing the goal by narrow margins.

Blues Then Fall Behind.

The Blues were outclassed thereafter as Harriman hit his stride. Following a knock-in by Captain Roark in the fifth period, Hitchcock set the ball up for Harriman who scored. A free hit by Hitchcock from sixty yards was momentarily saved by Guest and Harriman dashed into the breach to make good. The Whites, now leading by 6 to 5, remained in complete control during the sixth period as Harriman scored two more goals, and Cowdin, Hitchcock and Stevenson in turn saved in the mouth of their goal.

The American team will be officially announced before the next practice game, according to James C. Cooley of the United States Polo Association and according to today's results the present White team will carry America's colors against Argentina.

The line-up:

Whites (8).	Blues (5).
1—Harriman.	1—Guest.
2—Hitchcock.	2—Roark.
3—Stevenson.	3—Webb.
Back—Cowdin.	Back—Strawbridge.

SCORE BY PERIODS.

Blues	1	2	1	1	0	—5

Goals—Whites: Harriman 4, Hitchcock 2, Stevenson 1, Cowdin 1. Blues: Guest 1, Roark 2, Webb 1, Strawbridge 1.

Referees—Capt. J. Wesley White and Lewis Laccy. Time of periods—Six of 7½ minutes.

BEST SETTER AWARD TO SHAWSHEEN BUDDY

Post Road Dover Put First Among Pointers in the Hartford Dog Show.

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 5.—Ch. Shawsheen Buddy was judged best setter here today as the dog show in connection with the Connecticut State Fair opened. The winner is a white and orange dog, splendidly marked, with a good head and nice feet and legs. He defeated Shawsheen Mixture, which scored in the last Madison Square Garden show, but the judges did not hesitate in selecting Buddy for the honors today.

It was notable that a son of the champion was shown today and that he carried off the honors in the limit class. He is Shawsheen Buddy II and showed to good advantage.

Post Road Dover was named best pointer in the show. The victor is owned by Oscar H. Drovin and was sent into the ring in fine condition. He was very alert and impressed all with his fine conformation and head. Post Road Dover also was winners dogs.

A fawn shepherd with a black saddle, Alva of Cosalta, was judged winners bitch and best shepherd, defeating Peter von Moritzberg, a handsome black and tan with a fine head. In the opinion of those around the ring, the bitch was far superior to the male.

The Red Bank kennels of Florence B. Ilch swept the main honors in the collie division. Their Laund Lucky of Bell Haven was winners dog and their Bell Haven Blue Barrietta was winners bitch. The latter is a blue merle, but despite her fine qualities she was beaten by the dog for best of breed.

Cha Ming Confucius won best of breed among the Pekingese, after having taken winners dogs. He was set down in wonderful coat and his showing impressed a critical crowd around the rails. He is a grey sable and has a nice head. To take first honors he defeated a kennel mate, Cha Ming Princess Confucius, which was selected as winners bitch.

Syndicate was judged best whippet in show. He defeated Milk of Magnesia, an all-white whippet from the same kennels, for the final award. The whippet class was not as large as some of the others, but the dog has become very popular in this district and the showing today drew many enthusiasts of the breed.

LIGHT SUBJECT WINS FROM GOLDEN REEF

Long's Two-Year-Old Dog Goes Quarter Mile in 0:29 1-5 at Dongan Hills.

G. A. Long's Light Subject beat Johnny Farrell's Golden Reef in the second event last night at the Dongan Hills greyhound track. Billy Moore's Brindle B. finished third. The winner, a two-year-old dog, negotiated the quarter-mile course in 0:29 1-5.

CANADIAN HUNTERS WIN AT ROCHESTER

Sir Clifford Sifton's Trio Easily Takes Team Event—Gimbel's Horses Are Second.

PANSY NANCY IN TRIUMPH

By HENRY H. ILSLEY.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Sept. 5.—One of the most brilliant and splendidly contested events of the seventeenth annual Rochester Exposition Horse Show was that for teams of three hunters or jumpers in one ownership, which featured the third day of the exhibition this afternoon.

Eight teams, riders in hunt livery, completed, jumping one after the other over the regular course, presenting a colorful picture. It was an international competition and the interest was sustained until the announcement was made that Canada had captured first honors.

The blue went to Sir Clifford Sifton's big and well-matched team of hunters, the bay gelding, the Wizard, and the chestnut geldings, Brian Boru and Moonlight. They were ridden by Sir Clifford's sons, Victor and Clifford, and Jack Hambleton. Their performances were far ahead of any other contestant, only four points being scored against the whole team.

Gimbel's Team Second.

Second money went to the first team of Bernard F. Gimbel of Port Chester, N. Y., whose noted chestnut hunters, Captain Doane, Welcome and Outward Bound were ridden by Miss Carol Gimbel, Minot B. Howard and Michael J. Devanney. Third was won by Mrs. William H. Howard's team of Peter the Great, Bachelor's Rest and Little Timber, Minot Howard riding with Miss Hope Gimbel and Mike Devanney.

Sir Clifford Sifton scored a little earlier in the class for hunters and jumpers ridden by ladies, taking the blue with Brian Boru, second going to Miss Bobbie Acker's gray gelding, Easy Money, and third to Murray P. Fleming's bay gelding, Sharavogue.

A comparatively small gallery was in attendance when the only class of the morning was judged, for the reason that it was an added affair, not scheduled on the program. It was a repetition of the touch-and-out stake of Tuesday, the management putting it on because the fences were not at the proper height in the original event. The extra money for the stake was added and the same conditions prevailed, the winner to go into the championship final on Saturday.

The rich Tough-and-Out Stake was further complicated in the afternoon when Sir Clifton Sifton's bay mare Cameron won the third of the events that will culminate Saturday in the championship of that event. The Fox Chapel Farm won on Monday and Miss Bobbie Acker scored yesterday, and there is no doubt that the final competition will be one of the high lights of the show.

There was a big field and the Walken Farm of Mount Kisco, N. Y., scored a notable victory wth its big bay mare Pansy Nancy. Young Walter Schiffer put the mare over for a faultless performance, starting a series of brilliant triumphs. Horace T. Hunter of Toronto was second with his big black gelding Rajah.

Kentucky Red Scores.

The Walken Farm continued its fine series of victories when Mrs. James A. Hewlett rode its veteran chestnut gelding, Kentucky Red, in the class for saddle horses over 15.2 hands. It was one of the hottest saddle events of the week and Kentucky Red, the champion at Brooklyn and Stamford, scored at the expense of the Pennypack Valley Farm's mare Jean Acker, ridden by Frank Connors. Both were shown to the limit by their riders and the competition between them brought forth continuous applause.

The third blue in a row for the Mount Kisco Stable was gathered in when Kenneth Schiffer rode the pony Fernbrook Sally in fine form to win the class for saddle ponies not exceeding 13.2 hands.

STRIBLING IN ACTION WITH SQUIRES TONIGHT

Heavyweight Contenders to Box in Main 10-Round Event at Madison Square Garden.

Boxing at Madison Square Garden will be resumed tonight, after a Summer during which Promoter Tex Rickard confined himself to the Gene Tunney-Tom Heeney heavyweight championship bout outdoors. The feature contest will be between Johnny Squires, who comes 11,000 miles from South Africa to try his hand in the heavyweight eliminations, and Young Stribling of Georgia, who also aspires to become a successor to Tunney.

Stribling has had 231 bouts, in which he scored 103 knockouts. He has fought 31 bouts so far this year, of which he won 26 by knockouts.

Matchmaker Jess McMahon succeeded yesterday in booking Jake Warren and Paul Swiderski for the semi-final, which like the feature is scheduled for ten rounds. This switch was necessitated by an injury sustained by Napoleon Jack Dorval to his right hand. Swiderski's most recent achievement was a victory over Tiger Payne, billed as Australian champion, on a foul at Ebbets Field a week ago yesterday.

The four-round bouts on the card are as follows: George Hoffman vs. Jack Dessimoz, Man Mountain Erickson vs. Charley Wepner, Marco Polo vs. Marvin Schecter, Gene Baker vs. Johnny Kreiger and Bunker Hill vs. Al Walker.

Four ten-round bouts are listed tonight for the Baby Parade Amphitheatre at Asbury Park to conclude the day's festivities that mark Baby Parade Day. The feature bout will be between Red Chapman and Benny Cross. Howard Artt and Tommy Abobo, Leo Kole and Tip Gorman and Mickey Walters and Pancho Dencio are paired in the other three ten-rounders. The show will be for the benefit of the Asbury Park Patrolmen's Benevolent Association.

JESS M'MAHON QUITS GARDEN BOXING POST

Matchmaker Since 1925 Expected to Become Manager of Starlight Park.

Jess McMahon, one of the best known figures in boxing, announced last night that he had relinquished his post as matchmaker for Madison Square Garden. McMahon had been connected with the Garden as Tex Rickard's aide since the arena was moved from Madison Square to Eighth Avenue and Forty-ninth Street in 1925.

McMahon has been identified with boxing in many capacities and has been regarded as highly successful in his rôle at the Garden.

It was reported that McMahon would become manager of Starlight Park, and the names of Leo P. Flynn, former manager of Jack Dempsey, and Jimmy Johnston were mentioned as his possible successors at the Garden.

NINES TO MEET FOR TITLE.

Oakland and Worcester Boys to Start Legion Series Tomorrow.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5 (AP).—Two baseball teams from the two coasts of the nation will meet for the boys' worlds' championship when Oakland, Cal., and Worcester, Mass., meet Friday in the first of a three-game series at Comiskey Park. The two clubs are the survivors of 8,764 teams with a roster of 12,000 boys under sixteen years of age that started play in the American Legion sand lot tournament in May.

The Atlantic Seaboard team is entering the final round with an impressive record of having won nine championships this season and losing only one game. Even more impressive is the record of the Oakland Juniors, who have not lost in their campaign to the final round. In sixteen games played the Californians scored 167 runs while holding their opponents to four.

Graham Kentucky Coach.

IOWA CITY, Iowa, Sept. 5 (AP).—Donald M. Graham of Waterloo, who won three letters in football at the University of Iowa, has been appointed football coach at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, according to word received today.

Troeh Breaks 46 Targets to Capture Doubles Title at Westy Hogan Traps

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 5.—Frank M. Troeh of Portland, Ore., won the Westy Hogan doubles championship today, feature event of the opening program of the eighteenth annual Westy Hogan trapshooting tournament at the club's lodge on Absecon Boulevard.

Troeh had a score of 46 out of a possible 50. Charles H. Newcomb of Philadelphia was second with a score of 45 and Steve M. Crotthers of Chestnut Hill, Pa., was third with a tally of 43.

J. A. McElwain of Schenectady, N. Y., was high gun in the singles event, a shoot of 100 targets from the 16-yard mark. He tied with David T. Leahy of New York City for first prize with a score of 99, but first prize was awarded to McElwain, with Leahy second. Troeh finished third with 98 and G. S. McCarthy of Newfield was fourth with 97.

E. H. Storr of Harrisburg and F. S. Tomlin of Glassboro tied for high-gun honors among the professional nimrods, with 97 each. C. E. Tompkins of Newark was third with 95.

ITALY'S TEAM WINS LAST SOCCER GAME

BUSINI SCORES THE GOAL

The national Italian soccer team brought its tour of this country to a close last night when it defeated the New York Galicia team of the International League at the Polo Grounds by a score of 1 goal to 0. In their total of ten games played, the tourists won six and lost four.

Many prominent Italian residents of New York representing local Italian societies were present to say farewell to the team and officials, who left soon after the game to go aboard the Mauretania, to take them back to Italy. The crowd was estimated at 2,000.

Galicia kicked off and was first to become dangerous, when a shot from Bremmer forced Degani, the Italian's goal keeper, to use his hands to save the ball from going into his net, but the only goal of the game came after fifteen minutes of play, when the Italians flashed some clever forward playing.

Scores on the Rebound.

Prosperi had the first shot at goal, but the ball hit the cross bar and Busini caught the rebound and booted the ball into the Galicia net.

Play continued fast, with the Italians having the most of the ball and only for Forsyth, the Galicia goalie, they would have added to their score.

Prosperi missed the goal with a terrific shot by a foot. Forsyth again saved brilliantly off Prosperi, stopping the ball on the goal line, Galicia forced a corner, but Degani brought off a magnificent save by grabbing the ball in the air as it came off Wall's head.

Play went into Galicia territory, where the Italians forced a corner which availed them nothing. A foul against Jose went for naught as Frisoni booted the ball over the bar.

Forsyth came into the time light again when he saved a rocket shot from Prosperi, the Italian centre. Continuing to be the aggressors, the tourists forced their second corner kick, but it was cleared by Schneider. Ardizzoni gave Forsyth a terrific shot to stop. It came so fast that he dropped the ball, but finally cleared it.

Italians Test Defense.

The Italians showed clever team work, but the Galicia half back broke up many well advanced raids.

Five minutes from the restart the Italians scored, but Prosperi was called offside and the goal disallowed. In the first fifteen minutes of play the pace was furious, with Galicia doing most of the pressing.

Wall narrowly missed scoring when his final shot struck the upright and rebounded across the goal line. Degani, the Italian goalkeeper, pounced on the ball and averted a goal being scored.

A foul against the Italians gave Galicia a chance to even the score. Evans took the free kick, but Degani saved brilliantly.

A few minutes later the Italians scored but again offside robbed them of the point. The players began to fight and Referee Creighton had his hands full to keep them apart.

The line-up:

PAULINO CALLS ON RICKARD.

Basque Fighter Makes His Plans for Heavyweight Elimination Bouts.

Paulino, the Basque woodchopper, who returned to this country on Tuesday, paid a visit to Promoter Tex Rickard's offices at Madison Square Garden yesterday with his cabinet, ostensibly to arrange for bouts in the forthcoming heavyweight elimination series.

Al Mayer, his chief manager, declared after the interview that nothing definite had been done, but that Paulino would figure prominently in the heavyweight class before the Winter was over.

ROBERTI IS WINNER OVER KING SOLOMON

Italian Heavyweight Gets Verdict in 10 Rounds Before 10,000 at Ebbets Field.

LOSER IS BADLY BEATEN

Cheered for His Gameness as He Leaves Ring—Mercurio Defeated by Townsend.

Roberto Roberti, Italian heavyweight, hurled every punch in his repertory at King Solomon of Panama in the feature bout at Ebbets Field under Promoter Humbert Fugazy's direction last night but was unable to produce a knockout, and the badly hurt Solomon, with his left eye closed, lasted the ten rounds.

Roberto earned every round except one, which may be called even, but most of the 10,000-odd fans were dissatisfied apparently with his showing and booed the Italian roundly at the finish and cheered Solomon as he left the ring.

Time after time it seemed that Roberto could not help but finish Solomon, who landed only a few punches and most of the time was content to protect himself. In the third Roberto dropped Solomon.

Referee Warns Solomon.

In the sixth round Solomon launched a body attack, the upshot of which was that he was warned by Referee Kid McPartland. Roberto displeased the fans by making grimaces, complaining of the low blows.

Solomon began to hang on at this point and kept his head down as he clung to the big Italian.

In the eighth Roberto cut Solomon's left eye with a vicious right and the blood flowed freely. The eye began to close, and between rounds Dr. Joseph E. Baldwin examined the eye. He let the fight go on.

The ninth and tenth rounds saw Roberto trying futilely to finish the Panamanian, but his best efforts were lost. Roberto weighed 225¾ and Solomon 191½.

Tassi Knocks Out Williams.

Nando Tassi, Italian light-heavyweight, knocked out Lee Williams of Harlem in the fourth round of the semi-final which went on after the main bout. The time was 2 minutes and 48 seconds.

Previously in the same round Williams went down for a count of nine from a right to the body. He came up, however, with a swinging attack which he kept up until Tassi connected with a hard right to the jaw that ended the bout. The weights were Tassi 181, Williams 176½.

Phil Mercurio of New Rochelle lost a hard fought battle to Jack Townsend of Harlem in the first ten round bout. Mercurio showed a degree of gameness seldom seen in anything but major events when he went down for a count of nine in the ninth round. He arose and was down again. The bell saved him at the count of four. The weights were Townsend 194, Mercurio 187½.

Grillo Knocks Out Cavanaugh.

In the first scheduled six-rounder Amado Grillo of Italy stopped Frankie Cavanaugh of Buffalo in the first round. The time was 1 minute and 42 seconds. Grillo knocked out his rival with several terrific blows to the body. The weights were Cavanaugh 166¾ pounds, Grillo 174.

The opening four was stopped by the referee in 2 minutes and 13 seconds of the second round when it was evident that Jerry Ambrose was hopelessly outclassed by Larry Hogan. Hogan and Ambrose each weighed 157½.

BERMUDA YACHTS DUE HERE THIS MORNING

Will Race Against Interclubs on Long Island Sound in Series Next Week.

The members of the Bermuda yachting team and the one-designs in which they will race against the Interclubs on Long Island Sound next week will arrive in New York this morning on the Bermuda of the Furness Bermuda Line. It will be the third annual race. The Interclubs won in 1926 and 1927.

The proposed schedule calls for four races starting a week from today. The Sound representatives will be chosen by a selection committee after Saturday's regatta at the Indian Harbor Yacht Club.

The boats will be taken off the Bermuda after she docks and will be towed to Larchmont Harbor. They are the Atlantis, Starling, Sea Witch and Flirt, all of which have seen service in international racing.

The crews, members of the Royal Bermuda Yacht Club, are E. H. and K. F. Trimingham and H. D. Butterfield of the Atlantis B. W. Walker, J. Pearman and E. R. Williams of the Starling, A. and O. Darrell, B. J. H. Peniston and H. S. Ingham of the Flirt, and Lloyd Jones, Bert Darrell, Harvey Trimingham and Dr. E. E. Walker of the Sea Witch.

The Bermuda one-designs, reputed to be better in light weather than the Interclubs, will get an opportunity of a thorough test should the Sound be calm during the coming races. The teams have experienced a good breeze on the occasion of the two races.

The Selection Committee consists of Clifford D. Mallory, J. B. Shethar and E. G. Anderson. Although the boats have not been named as yet, several skippers are reasonably certain of being among the four representatives, due to their showings in the racing this Summer.

The first of the four races will be held by the Larchmont Yacht Club next Thursday at 2:30 o'clock. The Manhasset Bay Yacht Club will handle the next day's event, with the skippers and crews attending luncheon aboard Commodore Floyd L. Carlisle's auxiliary schooner Michabo before the race.

Two races will conclude the series on the following day, when the American Yacht Club of Rye, N. Y., will conduct the events. The starting and finish line will be established off Scotch Caps. One race will be held in the morning and the other in the afternoon.

Football Officials Clarify 13 Rules, 5 on Shift

OFFICIALS CLARIFY 13 FOOTBALL RULES

Five of the Interpretations Deal With the Shift and Its Legal Operation.

DEFINE RESTRAINING LINE

Executives Also Tell How Much Freedom End Man Has on Certain Plays.

In order to clarify the rules, the American Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee, at a secret meeting in Montclair, N. J., on Aug. 24 and 25, discussed the interpretation of a few of the rules on which there were differences of opinions and provided official rulings on them in order to simplify the work of the football officials this Fall. It is significant that five of the thirteen interpretations deal with the "shift."

The members of that committee are E. K. Hall, Chairman, member-at-large; W. S. Langford, Secretary, member-at-large; T. A. D. Jones, New England States; W. W. Roper, Middle Atlantic States; H. J. Stegeman, Southeastern States; A. A. Stagg, Middle Western States; M. F. Ahearn, Missouri Valley States; D. X. Bible, Southwestern States; H. W. Hughes, Mountain States, and G. M. Varnell, Pacific Coast States.

"It has been the custom in recent years," said the statement released for publication today by Chairman Hall, "for football officials and coaches to hold meetings in different parts of the country in the Fall for the purpose of 'freshening up' on the rules and of discussing interpretations and applications of the rules deemed complicated.

"It has occasionally happened that different interpretations of a rule have been adopted in different districts; just as two judges may differ in the interpretation or application of a given statutory law. The result is that difficulty inevitably arises in intersectional games if there is a difference of opinion as to the proper interpretation of a given rule.

"In order to avoid such conflicts between districts, the Rules Committee at its February meeting decided to hold a meeting just before the opening of the season of 1928 in order to provide official rulings on questions concerning which there might fairly be differences of opinion.

"The 1928 rules book was issued in June, and each member of the Rules Committee has undertaken during the Summer to collect from the coaches and officials in his district all questions concerning which there might be some reasonable doubt.

"At a meeting of the committee held in Montclair, N. J., on Aug. 24 and 25, these questions were all considered in detail. Most of the questions raised points that are clearly answered by a careful reading of the rules and nothing could be added by an official ruling. The balance of the questions and a definite answer to each question are printed herewith and may be treated as having the same force and effect as an approved ruling in the rules book."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

RULE VIII, SECTION 1.
RULE XX, SECTION 1.
APPROVED RULING 13.

Question—Is the restraining line for the kicking side on a kick-off the 40-yard line or a line through the actual point from which the ball is kicked? On a free kick after a fair catch is the restraining line through the point of the catch or through the point from which the ball is kicked?

Answer—On a kick-off the restraining line for the kicking side is the 40-yard line (unless there has been a penalty), as this is the most forward point from which the ball may be kicked. Under Rule XX, Section 1, the ball must be kicked at least as far as the 50-yard line (unless touched by an opponent), before it is in play, or any of the kicking side may recover it. On a free kick after a fair catch the restraining line for the kicking side is a line through the point of the catch.

RULE IX, SECTION 5.

Question—If an end of Team A moves out along the line of scrimmage one or more steps must he come to a ful stop of "approximately one second's duration" before the ball is put in play?

Answer—No, but he must be stationary at the moment the ball is put in play. If there is doubt as to his being in motion at the moment the ball is put in play the penalty must be inflicted.

RULE IX, SECTIONS 5 AND 6.

Question—After Team A has shifted and has come to a stop for one second an end changes his position on the line and stops for less than a second before a wing-back pivots and comes in on the tackle. Is this play legal?

Answer—The play is legal provided the end has stopped before the wing-back pivots and provided the wing-back is moving either directly or clearly in an oblique direction toward his own end line at the moment when the ball is put in play. If the end and back are in motion simultaneously and the ball is put in play before both have come to an absolute stop for a period of approximately one second, the 15-yard penalty must be inflicted, for the two men in motion simultaneously constitute a shift. If the end was stationary when the wing-back started in motion and then the wing-back is in motion forward at the moment when the ball is put in play the 5-yard penalty must be inflicted as provided for in Section 5. (The same rulings would apply if no shift preceded). In case of doubt in either case the proper penalty should be enforced.

RULE IX, SECTION 6.

Question—This section states that following all shift or huddle plays all players of the side in possession of the ball must come to an absolute stop and remain stationary in their new positions, &c. Are we to interpret this to mean that only the players who participated in a shift or a huddle must remain stationary and that a player who did not shift or huddle may start in motion backward (as provided for in Rule IX, Section 5), before the lapse of one second?

Answer—After a team shifts or huddles all (eleven) players of the side in possession of the ball must come to an absolute stop and remain stationary in their positions without movement of the feet or swaying of the body for a period of approximately one second before the ball is put in play or before the one man in motion (as provided for in Rule IX, Section 5), may start.

RULE IX, SECTION 6.

Question—Following a huddle, the line of forwards of Team A takes a position parallel to and back of the line of scrimmage, from which position they advance or drop to their charging positions. Does this constitute a shift?

Answer—Yes, all players must come to an absolute stop and remain stationary in their positions for a period of approximately one second. In case of doubt the penalty must be enforced.

RULE IX, SECTION 6.

Question—After Team A shifted (or huddled) and took its position for the scrimmage a tackle of Team A charged into the neutral zone before a period of approximately one second had elapsed and the ball was put in play. Does this foul draw a 5-yard penalty under Rule IX, Section 2, or a 15-yard penalty under Rule IX, Section 6?

Answer—The penalty is 15 yards, as provided for under Rule IX, Section 6, for the reason that all players of Team A did not remain stationary in their positions for a period of approximately one second after the shift (or huddle).

RULE XIV, SECTION 3.

Question—After Team A huddles and takes its position a second huddle is made for the purpose either of changing the signal or forming one or more players who did not get the signal in the first huddle. Is this permissible, provided not more than fifteen seconds were consumed in either huddle and provided not more than thirty seconds were consumed in putting the ball in play after it was ready for play?

Answer—This is permissible, for the rule states the maximum duration of a huddle is fifteen seconds and a maximum delay of thirty seconds in putting the ball in play.

RULE XVII, SECTION 1.

Question—Team A puts the ball in play by a scrimmage on Team B's one-yard line, quarterback receives the ball from the snapper-back and throws it through the air laterally backward to a half-back a distance of approximately two yards or more. The Team A half-back does not catch the ball; it strikes his body and rolls forward into the end zone where a player of Team A falls upon it and it is declared dead in his possession. How should this play be ruled? How should it be ruled if on the same play a player of Team B had recovered the ball?

Answer—If Team A recovers the ball in the end zone it is a touchdown. If Team B recovers the ball in the end zone or if the ball goes out of bounds in the end zone it is a touchback.

If in the above described play the half-back of Team A had batted the ball across the goal line the penalty of loss of the ball to the opponents at the spot where the foul occurred, as provided for in Rule XV, Section 7, should be inflicted. The exceptions covered in the Note under Rule XV, Section 7, do not permit a player of the team making a protected backward pass to bat the ball toward the opponents' goal. This permission is given only to prevent an opponent from securing the ball and it is manifest that this would not be A's motive in batting a ball passed backward by a member of his own team.

RULE XVII, SECTION 1.

Question—With the ball on its own five-yard line Team A makes a protected backward pass which a player of Team B bats across A's goal line, where a player of Team A recovers it. What is the proper ruling on this play and is the ruling the same as though the ball had continued across the goal line as the result of the pass alone, without the additional impetus which the player of Team B gave to the ball by batting it?

Answer—In either case it is a safety if recovered by Team A, for the original impetus which took the ball across the goal line was furnished by Team A in making the backward pass. In either case if the ball had gone out of bounds in the end zone it would have been a safety; if Team B had recovered the ball in the end zone, it would have been a touchdown.

RULE XVII, SECTION 6.

Question—How long does the eligible player who has gone out of bounds during the play remain ineligible?

Answer—He becomes eligible again only when the ball is touched by a player of the team which did not make the pass, as provided for in Section 9 of Rule XVII.

RULE XVII, SECTION 6.

Question—If, on a forward pass from the field of play, an eligible player of Team A runs over the end line, turns and catches the ball in the end zone, is he eligible and is the pass completed?

Answer—The pass is not completed; the eligible player became ineligible when he went out of bounds.

RULE XX, SECTION 1, AND RULE XIII, SECTION 8.

Question—If on a free kick other than a kick-off, the ball goes out of bounds before going ten yards or being touched by an eligible player, is the kicking team given another trial or is it an out-of-bounds ball belonging to the team which did not kick it?

Answer—The ball must be kicked again. On any free kick the ball is not in play unless it is kicked to or across the line which restrained the team which did not kick it, or is touched by a member of this team.

RULE XXIII, SECTION 3.

Question—On a third down a player of Team A carrying the ball advances it beyond the point to be gained for a first down. After the ball is declared dead a violation of Rule XXI, Section 5, is committed by a player of Team A one yard in advance of the ball. What is the down and distance to be gained?

Answer—It is the third down and fourteen yards to gain after the distance penalty of fifteen yards. This case and similar ones are covered by Rule XXIII, Section 3. Even though the foul occurred after the ball was declared dead, the foul grew out of and is considered a part of the play.

Army-Stanford Game Is Set For Yankee Stadium Dec. 1

The Yankee Stadium will be the scene of the Army-Stanford football game on Dec. 1, it was revealed yesterday. Previous to the announcement it was known that Army would play the coast eleven in this city, but just where was not made known until yesterday. The game will be the last of the season for the Army eleven, and will serve to take the place of the game with the Naval Academy team.

ILLINOIS GETS PLACE ON ARMY 1929 LIST

NAVY NOT ON THE SCHEDULE

Not Considered for 1930 Either, Says General Smith—Stanford Game on Coast, Notre Dame Nov. 30.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 5 (AP).—Confirming assertions that the Army-Navy athletic break shows no indication of being patched up, Major Gen. William R. Smith, Commandant of the United States Military Academy, today announced the Army's completed football schedule for 1929 with the Navy missing from the list.

The schedule is featured by the addition of Illinois, which will be met here or at New York on Nov. 9, and a trip to the Pacific Coast for the first time to play Stanford on Dec. 28. The Navy not only is absent next year, but, General Smith indicated, is not being considered in making up the slate for 1930, for which "key games" already have been arranged.

The 1929 schedule of ten games compares favorably in strength and scope with that for this Fall. In the major list, Illinois replaces Nebraska and will be met under the terms of two-year agreement calling for the Cadets to play in Urbana, or possibly Chicago, in 1930.

The 1929 game with Notre Dame is moved back from its usual early November date to Nov. 30, as the climax of the Army's regular schedule. The Cadets will leave the Point for games with Harvard and Yale.

The Army's trip to Stanford will mark the second time either service eleven has gone beyond the Rockies. The Navy journeyed West in 1924 to play the New Year's Day game with the University of Washington at Pasadena.

General Smith, who was a Cadet when football first was introduced at West Point, said today:

"Football schedules for this year and the two ensuing years are more strenuous in their demands than West Point teams have ever faced. While we will go out to win every game, no extra privileges will be allowed our players. The Military Academy's sole objective is to train young men to be officers in the Army. While athletic training is important, it will always be subordinated to academic and military work and our high standard will not be lowered in any degree."

The 1929 schedule:

Oct. 5, Gettysburg at West Point; 12, Davidson College (North Carolina) at West Point; 19, Harvard at Cambridge; 26, Yale at New Haven.

Nov. 2, South Dakota at West Point; 9, Illinois at West Point or New York; 16, Dickinson at West Point; 23, Ohio Wesleyan at West Point; 30, Notre Dame at New York.

Dec. 28, Stanford at Palo Alto.

TITLE RACES TOMORROW.

Professional and Amateur Bike Stars on N. Y. Velodrome Card.

Three championship cycling races will be held at the New York Velodrome tomorrow night, with competition between professional riders featuring two of the events and amateur riding the third.

The professional titular grinds which will be conducted are the one-third mile professional sprint race and the forty-mile motor-paced race. The amateurs will battle in a two-mile event.

The fight for the professional sprint championship is the closest in years, Tony Beckman, who leads with 32 points, having three points more than Avanti Martinetti and Freddie Spencer, who are tied for second. Georgetti leads the motor-paced riders, while William Unkert is showing the way to the amateurs.

Second 3,000 Cricket Runs Made; Lancashire Wins Title

FOLKESTONE, England, Sept. 5 (AP).—Frank Woolley, Kent professional cricketer, playing with his county team against the Marylebone club here today, completed his 3,000 runs. Woolley is the second player to pass that total this season, as Pat Hendren, Middlesex, accomplished it yesterday.

Lancashire has retained the county championship of England, the season having finished as far as county teams are concerned. Earlier in the season it looked as if Kent might gain the laurels, but the southern county could not keep up the pace and two defeats at the hands of the champion team ended its chances.

KUPCHIK DEFEATED IN 1ST ROUND PLAY

MATCH ENDS IN 30 MOVES

BRADLEY BEACH, N. J., Sept. 5.—Israel Horowitz of the Manhattan Chess Club, former New York University chess captain, had the distinction of vanquishing Abraham Kupchik, Manhattan C. C., champion and one time State titleholder, in the opening round of the second annual championship tournament of the National Chess Federation at the Hotel La Reine today.

It was the first of the four matches to be finished and lasted only thirty moves. Kupchik, with the black pieces, selected the Sicilian defense, fianchettoing his king's bishop.

Horowitz went in for an attack on the king's side, while his opponent endeavored to break up the pawns on the opposite wing. When the critical moment arrived, Kupchik found that the position of his king was indefensible and he resigned.

Samuel D. Factor of Chicago also adopted the Sicilian defense and won after forty-seven moves from Oscar Tenner of New York. Tenner, with two knights, was unable to cope with the two powerful bishops of his opponent.

Turover and Lotkowski Draw.

An eventful Ruy Lopez, played by I. S. Turover of Washington against S. M. Lotkowski of Camden, resulted in a draw after fifty-one moves.

L. J. Isaacs of Chicago arrived late and was paired with Edward Lasker of New York, who opened with a Ruy Lopez. The latter planned a direct assault upon the black king and sacrificed a knight in the process. Isaacs was forced to give up a piece in turn, but was then one pawn minus. The game was adjourned after thirty-five moves.

Three Share Prizes.

In the first rapid transit tournament the three prizes were equally shared by A. Kupchik, S. D. Factor and H. Helms, each of whom scored 4—2. N. T. Whitaker, Olympic representative of the United States at The Hague, won brilliantly from Kupchik, but was defeated by Victor D. Spark of Bradley Beach.

KING'S 146 TAKES PRESIDENT'S MATCH

CARLSON FINISHES SECOND

CAMP PERRY, Ohio, Sept. 5 (AP).—Early bulletins tonight gave Sergeant H. R. King, United States Marine Corps, Kemmerer, Wyo., as the winner of the President's Match today with a score of 146 out of a possible 150, topping the list of 1,257 competitors.

King will receive the highest honors of the National Rifle Association match winners, an autographed letter from President Coolidge and also the gold medal.

For second place Sergeant A. W. Carlson, United States Marine Corps, Mellen, Wis., also had 146, but was outranked by Sergeant King on his string at the 1,000-yard range. David McDougal, Washington, D. C., the seventeen-year-old son of Colonel Douglas McDougal of the United States Marine Corps, landed third place with 144.

Two Tie McDougal.

McDougal's score was tied by Lieutenant R. Y. Pressnell, United States Marine Corps, and also by Captain A. Angus, United States Marine Corps, but he placed more shots in the inner circle of the bullseye. McDougal is the national small bore junior champion.

The winner of the Crowell Match was announced as Ensign C. H. Duerfeldt, United States Navy, Cleveland, with a possible score of 75 with 681 competitors on the 1,000-yard range. Lieutenant R. T. Pressnell, United States Marine Corps, Spokane, Wash., was second with 75, and Chief Gunner's Mate A. Y. Walton, United States Coast Guards, Boston, was third with 74.

A new world's record was established by Lawrence Wilkens, the 16-year-old schoolboy of Norwood, Ohio, today, when he made a possible score of 400 points, while shooting in the short range team match on the small bore range.

Wilkens had a string of forty consecutive bullseyes on the 50 and 100-yard ranges. This is the same course which is used in firing the international small-bore team match to be held next Sunday, when the American riflemen will compete with the international teams.

Previous Record by Miller.

L. J. Miller made the previous world's record at Seagirt, N. J., when in 1924 he scored 399 with one point down on his 50-yard target.

Wilkens crowded McDougal in the race for the national championship in the small bore individual match held last Saturday, when McDougal had 297 and Wilkens had 296 out of a possible 300. Wilkens is trying to place on the international small bore team which will try for the Dewar trophy.

In competition with five teams of six men each the Ohio civilian team shot its way to the top by piling up a score of 2,372 out of a possible 2,400. For second place the Pennsylvania civilian team had 2,331. The District of Columbia was third with 2,325, District of Columbia civilian team fourth with 2,311 and the Illinois civilian team fifth with 2,295.

Fredericks Is Victor.

A. F. Fredericks, a civilian of Kings Mills, Ohio, was announced today as the winner of the National Rifle Association rapid-fire championship, finished late yesterday. Fredericks scored 97 out of a possible 100.

In the Scott match, with 538 entries, Lieutenant R. H. Bredgeman, Twelfth United States Cavalry, Fort Meade, S. D., was first with a possible score of 75.

The District of Columbia National Guard small-bore rifle team won the interclub long-range match, with a total score of 674 out of a possible 800. The four members of the winning team scored: Lieutenant Hugh Everett, 178; Lieutenant Edward A. McMahon, 168; Captain Clarence Shields, 165; Captain J. C. Jensen, 163.

H. C. Wright, civilian, Fresno, Cal., took the individual small-bore long range match, with a score of 178 out of a possible 200.

SCHOOL GAMES OCT. 13.

Four Westchester Elevens Open the League Season on That Date.

Four of the eight elevens in the Westchester Interscholastic Athletic Association will open their league seasons on Oct. 13, when Mount Vernon, the 1927 champion, meets Mamaroneck and New Rochelle, runner-up last Fall, clashes with Roosevelt High of Yonkers. The schedule, announced yesterday, provides for league games each Saturday until Nov. 24. Yonkers High, Gorton High of Yonkers, White Plains and Port Chester are the other members of the association.

The schedule follows:

Oct. 13, Mount Vernon at Mamaroneck, New Rochelle at Roosevelt; 20, Yonkers at White Plains, Mount Vernon at Gorton, Roosevelt at Mamaroneck; 27, New Rochelle at Yonkers, White Plains at Port Chester, Mamaroneck at Gorton, Roosevelt at Mount Vernon.

JUNIOR GOLF TOURNEY ON.

Edwards and Weadock Tied in Qualifying Round at Greenwich.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Sept. 5.—The annual junior golf championship tournament of the Greenwich Country Club opened today over the club course, with thirteen entered. The tournament will be eighteen holes of medal play.

Duncan Edwards Jr. and B. F. Weadock Jr. were tied in the qualifying round, each turning in a score of 90. The match will be played off tomorrow morning. Match play also will take place tomorrow and the finals will be played on Friday.

With the College Football Teams

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY.

Special to The New York Times.

FARMINGDALE, L. I., Sept. 5.—Individual rather than group instruction occupied the attention of the New York University football coaches in the training camp here today.

First the backs came in for considerable instruction and then the linemen. The morning workout consisted of rudiments in the huddle, with the afternoon session beginning the first formation of the year.

FORDHAM.

A desire to equip his team with plenty of capable ends was evidenced by Major Frank Cavanaugh, Fordham coach, in yesterday's practice, when he devoted almost the entire afternoon to a talk to his wing candidates.

The backs and forwards, with Coaches Joy, Morey and Kozlowsky in charge, went through stiff workouts.

Walsh, veteran end; Wisnieuski, Callahan, McCosker and Politis were among the wingmen who heard Cavanaugh's instructions.

MANHATTAN.

Special to The New York Times.

OAKDALE, L. I., Sept. 5.—The Manhattan squad received a setback today when Captain Vin Draddy of New Rochelle, N. Y., broke his nose in a scrimmage between the varsity and freshmen.

After the short period of running, Coach Schwarzer continued the scrimmage work with several clashes between the freshmen and varsity. Both varsity and freshmen were divided into four teams.

CITY COLLEGE.

Special to The New York Times.

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., Sept. 5.—With twenty varsity men in attendance, City College inaugurated its first practice here today. Head Coach Parker confined the activities of his men to a light practice drill after the long trip here.

ST. JOHN'S.

The St. John's candidates were put through their second practice session of the season by Head Coach Ray Lynch at Carey Field yesterday afternoon. There was a short calisthenic drill and then handling the ball, throwing and catching forward passes and punting.

The team was strengthened by the appearance of Sam Cooper, one of the regular halfbacks.

RUTGERS.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 5.—Coach Harry J. Rockafeller lost no time in getting Rutgers into action, for on the second day of practice today he sent his charges through a long scrimmage. Three more letter men, Digney, Shedden and Greenberg, reported.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Special to The New York Times.

CAPE MAY, N. J., Sept. 5.—Pennsylvania brought out its hidden ball play in the second day at the new camp. Backfield Coach Bert Bell assembled his ball-carriers today and put them through the early stages of the "hidden" attack. With Fullback Al Wascolonis, the star handler of the plays, missing this Fall, it is necessary to look around for a man to take his place in the backfield.

ARMY.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Army's practice was of lengthy duration today, as the entire squad was enabled to report earlier than usual. Head Coach Jones worked his men for two hours, and during the practice made several experimental shifts in the line, notably at centre.

Person, a substitute ball-passer of last season, is back in the hospital, this time with an infection which the coaches believe will keep him idle for some time.

NAVY.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 5.—The Naval Academy had its first scrimmage of the season this afternoon, lining up against Tom Hamilton's plebes.

Davis, Conrad, Kirn and Schirgi formed the backfield of the plebes, while Gannon, plebe quarter of last year, called the signals for the varsity.

DARTMOUTH.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 5.—More than 70 candidates reported to Head Coach Jess Hawley this morning for the second day of Dartmouth's football drill. Coach Pat Kaney of the Dartmouth gym team put the entire squad through a special series of exercises he has devised for limbering up sore muscles.

PENN STATE.

Special to The New York Times.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Sept. 5.—Penn State's practice reached the team stage today when four elevens took the field for signal running and charging. Six more candidates reported today: Delp, regular end for the last two seasons, and Hunter, a lineman; David, Reynolds, Summerell and Saracinsky, backs.

WASHINGTON-JEFFERSON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 5.—Washington and Jefferson's squad started preliminary training here today with thirty-two players in togs, and although the work was of the lightest kind one casualty resulted, Jap Douds, stellar sophomore tackle, colliding with a team-mate in a signal mixup and suffering a cut over an eye which required three stitches to close.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSON'S MILL, W. Va., Sept. 5.—The West Virginia squad devoted practically all of its time to passing and punting practice this morning. In an effort to find a punter to succeed Albert Glenn, Coach Rodgers worked with Stumpp, Bartrug, Taylor and Garrett.

RHODE ISLAND.

Special to The New York Times.

KINGSTON, R. I., Sept. 5.—Twenty-five candidates, including several letter men and members of last year's freshmen squad, turned out for the first practice at Rhode Island State College today. The men had a morning and afternoon drill on running down under passes and punts.

Examine our Scotch Mists* minutely, and then try to think of better top-coat value!

Look at the style—it reflects every smart modern idea, without being tricky.

Look at the workmanship—it's our own all through, and we're much more finicky about it than any one else could be.

Look at the fabric—a wide variety of new seasonal patterns in mixtures, overchecks, herringbones and plaids; solid colors too. Sturdy Scotch cheviot, wetproofed our own way.

And—after you put the coat on—look at the fit. It's the sort that others will look at with envy.

Might think we like our Fall Scotch Mists*! We do—but we only charge $60 and $65 for 'em.

Miss Sarah Palfrey Gains Girls' Net Semi-Final

SEMI-FINAL GAINED BY SARAH PALFREY

First Seeded Player in Girls' National Singles Subdues Miss Rice, 6-2, 6-3.

MIANNE PALFREY DEFEATED

Carries Miss Parsons to 3 Sets—Mrs. Mallory, Mrs. Wightman Win in Middle States Play.

Special to The New York Times.

CHESTNUT HILL, Pa., Sept. 5.—Miss Sarah Palfrey, youthful Brookline star, led the procession of favorites into the semi-final brackets of the girls' national singles championship at the Philadelphia Cricket Club this afternoon.

While she won her quarter-final match with ease from Miss Virginia Rice of Boston, 6—2, 6—3, her sister Mianne created a near-upset in her struggle with Miss Evelyn Parsons of California, who is seeded second to Sarah. Miss Parsons finally won by 6—1, 1—6, 9—7.

Miss Marie Fenesterer of Englewood, N. J., took the first set from Miss Virginia Hilleary of Philadelphia, 6—4, but Miss Hilleary captured the next two, 6—2, 6—1. Miss Mary Greef of Kansas City routed Miss Olive Wade, Toronto, 6—3, 6—1, and meets Sarah Palfrey tomorrow.

Mrs. George W. Wightman, Boston star, seeded second in the women's Middle States singles being run in conjunction with the girls' national, eliminated Mrs. Ruth Levinson of this city without losing a game. Mrs. Wightman is in the quarter-final bracket without having dropped a single game so far and meets Miss Dorothy Andrus, eighth in the seeded list, tomorrow.

Mrs. Molla Mallory, defending champion, gained the quarter-finals by beating Miss Charlotte Miller, New York, 6—2, 6—0. Miss Anne Townsend of Merion was the first to get into the semi-finals, defeating Miss Dorothy Jarvis of Pittsburgh in three sets and then subduing Miss Florence Le Boutillier of New York, 6—1, 6—2.

The summaries:

STAR YACHT RACE ON COAST POSTPONED

Winds Too Light for Final Test of Series—Tempe III, Champion, Is Disqualified.

NEWPORT HARBOR, Cal., Sept. 5 (AP).—The final and deciding race of the five-day international star boat championship series, scheduled to have been held today, was postponed until tomorrow because of lack of wind.

This action was taken by the Race Committee after the seventeen craft in the race had lain becalmed for two hours and fifteen minutes after the start was made over a triangular course. What little wind there was died down after the sloops had passed the first marker.

As the time limit drew near, the Race Committee decided that the craft were getting nowhere and took action.

The committee backed up the protest of P. E. Edrington, skipper of the Sparkler II of the New Orleans Gulf fleet, that the championship defender fouled his craft during the early stages of yesterday's race. The 15 points awarded to the Tempe III when Waldon Hubbard Jr. skippered the craft across the finish line in third place in yesterday's race were withdrawn, leaving her only 36 points, 19 behind the leader.

The West's hopes of keeping the championship for another year rested upon a continuance of the light winds which have prevailed the last two days and the Windward, San Diego Bay fleet champion, which Joe Jessop sailed to a clean-cut victory in yesterday's race to take the leadership of the field of seventeen craft with 55 points.

Mrs. Taintor Wins Golf Match.

Special to The New York Times.

DARIEN, Conn., Sept. 5.—Mrs. H. S. Taintor and Mrs. D. Challoner were the winners today at the Wee Burn Country Club in the women's medal play handicap events for eighteen and nine holes, their respective scores being 86 and 87. Mrs. Taintor's card was 101—15—86, and Mrs. Challoner's 97—10—87.

Sports of the Times

By JOHN KIERAN.

EVEN with their recent slump, the Giants are the only contenders in the National League with an outside chance to overhaul the Cardinals. The Cubs, Reds and Pirates have lost too many games. The losing column is the baseball barometer at this time of the year.

The Cubs have lost six more games than the Cardinals. The Reds have lost seven more and the Pirates eight. All the Cardinals have to do now is to see that the Giants don't sneak up on them when they aren't looking.

The trouble with the Yankees for the last month has been weak hitting. Looking forward to next year, Yankee rooters are wondering how Lary and Reese, the expensive Coast stars, will help much in that respect. They have been dallying around the .270 mark in the Pacific Coast League, leading to a suspicion that they wouldn't do much against big league pitching except fan themselves cool.

Tony Lazzeri is seeing a new doctor this week. He has tried four already, and his shoulder is still out of gear. Each doctor had his own idea of what was the matter with Tony's arm, but Tony has reduced it to the simplest terms: "The trouble is I can't throw."

Moving the Managers.

There are the usual rumors of managerial changes. The fans can take them or leave them, and, at the moment, it's much safer to leave them. They do not affect the local area, anyway. The Giants, Yankees and Robins have their managers in line for next year, and their names are J. J. McGraw, Miller Huggins and Wilbert Robinson.

There's a story that Donie Bush may bob up as the manager of the Detroit Tigers next year. Maybe so, but Barney Dreyfuss stuck to Bush when the Pirates were clattering around the bottom of the National League early in the season, and there's no reason why he should toss the chunky manager overboard after the kind of playing the Pirates put on exhibition in the last two months.

The Pirates had more than their share of accidents, but what hurt them most was the unaccountable slump of Glenn Wright at shortstop. The loss of one star out of the infield can break up a real good team. Witness the Yankees and Tony Lazzeri.

The Pittsburgh yarn, however, includes the report that Donie Bush will resign of his own accord because of the abuse he had to take from the Pirate fans when the team was losing in the early season. Bush should consult Miller Huggins on the subject of sticking along in the face of abuse and eventually winning out. Hug took a four-year course in that subject and graduated with honors.

Conflicting Reports.

The story that Bush is to manage the Tigers next year conflicts with the report that Bucky Harris will shift from the Senators to the Automobile City to take over Moriarty's job. In the meanwhile, Moriarty knows nothing about it, and Owner Navin of the Tigers hasn't said a word. Perhaps they aren't in on the secret.

It's no secret, however, that Bucky Harris has had an off-year both as a player and a manager. Injuries affected his own playing, and he made a few trades that didn't turn out so well. However, if they fired a manager every time he guessed wrong on a trade, a number of prominent directors would be missing from the dugouts of both big leagues.

It's the opinion of at least one observer that Bucky has been a good manager, but Clark Griffith pays him his salary, and it's a large and handsome salary. Whether or not Griff is getting his money's worth of managing and playing is entirely a matter for the owner to decide.

If by any chance Moriarty should lose out as a manager, he would be welcomed back as an umpire by President Barnard of the American League. That is, if he wanted to come back. The umpiring in the American League has been discussed quite frequently this season. One or two people complained about it.

The Lame Duck.

It's almost pitiful to see "Goose" Goslin trying to throw with that injured arm of his. In one or two games this season he tried to throw left-handed, but he gave that up. He could get fair distance, but his direction was a matter of chance.

But Goslin will be a threat as long as his arm is strong enough to swing a bat at the plate. All the sympathy extended to him this year has come from persons who are not big league pitchers by trade.

When Riggs Stephenson's arm went bad on him a few years ago he tried to switch to left-handed throwing, but he couldn't make a go of it. No full-grown big league player has put over that trick yet.

There are a few big league players who throw fairly well with either hand, but not one of these ambidextrous chaps has been forced to a real test by injury as yet. It's the "one-armed" throwers who get all the bad breaks.

When Babe Ruth was asked to explain his explanation of the Hoover incident, he said: "It means that I will do anything for Mr. Hoover except vote for him."

If the weather is any way propitious, a record for baseball attendance will be set Sunday at the Yankee Stadium when the Mackmen tackle the Yankees in a double-header.

Two months ago any one who predicted that the Cardinals would be rushing to the tape with a bigger lead than the Yankees would have been clapped into an insane asylum by his grieving relatives.

THREE TEAMS TIED IN FATHER-SON GOLF

McKEAGS SCORE 87-13-74

Tom Myers and Tom Myers Jr., With 98-24-74, Complete Triple Tie—Play-Off on Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. ALBANS, L. I., Sept. 5.—Three of the twelve teams in the Long Island father and son championship here today tied for first place, necessitating a play-off for the title Saturday morning. Frank Hoyt of Engineers, national senior champion last year, and his son, Edmund, thirty-five years old and here on a visit from China, accounted for the best gross with a 42—42—84, but with a ten handicap and a net score of 74 were forced to be content with a tie.

Thomas Myers of Hillcrest collaborated with his son, Tom Jr., who is twenty, for a 98—24—74, while the other team with a 74 was Walter H. McKeag of Marine and Field, and Walter McKeag, sixteen, a student at New Utrecht High. They had 87—12—74.

The field was exceptionally small because of conflicting dates and illness. Tom Morris and Tom Jr., of St. Albans, who won the title last year, were not competing, and Billy Myers, Long Island junior champion, was out with an arm injury.

Over the first nine the Hoyts had the best of the going, for in the alternating method of play followed in this tournament their combined efforts brought a 42, par being 36. The only bad hole was the third, where they had a six. On the second hole he was responsible for the par 3, playing a fine shot from a trap and putting the ball dead to the cup. His father tapped in the putt.

Coming in they also had 42, although finishing poorly with two 6s.

The McKeags improved on their incoming nine after taking 46 to the turn. They were home in 41, playing the first four holes of the second nine in par. The team of Myers and son ran into trouble on both halves with a 50 going out and a 48 back, Tom Jr. having several topped drives.

The play served as a preliminary to the Long Island junior championship here tomorrow. Twenty-seven are entered to compete for the title.

The cards, with par:

DARLING CLINCHES YACHTING HONORS

Wins Three Races in Row and Makes Sure of Larchmont Y. C. Midget Title.

TWO ARE TIED FOR SECOND

Kuehnle and Keeshan Will Have Chance to Decide Place in Last Test Today.

Special to The New York Times.

LARCHMONT, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Displaying expert technique at the tiller, Maus Darling won all three races in Larchmont Harbor today and clinched the midget yachting championship of the Larchmont Yacht Club. The breeze backed down late in the afternoon and caused the postponement of the fourth race.

The final race will be held tomorrow morning prior to the contests for the junior title of the club, but in no way can young Darling be deposed from first place. Only second and third places can be affected.

The breeze was northeast when Darling scored his first victory just before noon, far outstripping his three rivals on the triangular course of one mile. It was southeast for the second and third races, causing Gardner Childs, who is conducting the series, to establish a windward and leeward course.

Darling was not pressed to win, gaining his first victory by almost twelve minutes, his second by four and the third by three. Jack Keeshan trailed him in the first and Fred Kuehnle, who graduated into the ranks of the midgets by capturing the novice championship yesterday, was second in the two others.

Kuehnle and Keeshan are tied for second place in the point score, with Bob Carrick last.

FIRST RACE. START, 11:00.

Skipper and Yacht.	Finish.
Maus Darling, Bull Head	11:48:15
Jack Keeshan, Bull Frog	12:00:00
Robert W. Carrick, Bull Finch	12:01:36
Fred Kuehnle, Bull Pup	Disqualified

SECOND RACE. START, 12:10.

Maus Darling, Bull Pup	12:40:10
Fred Kuehnle, Bull Finch	12:53:43
Robert W. Carrick, Bull Frog	12:54:48
Jack Keeshan, Bull Head	12:57:10

THIRD RACE. START, 2:30.

Maus Darling, Bull Finch	3:29:20
Fred Kuehnle, Bull Frog	3:32:01
Jack Keeshan, Bull Pup	3:57:08
Robert W. Carrick, Bull Head	4:10:00

Point scores: Darling, 12½; Kuehnle, 6; Keeshan, 6; Carrick, 5.

MISS WILLS PLAYS HENNESSEY TODAY

BRUGNON TO PLAY VAN RYN

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5 (AP).—Having failed to win from a male tennis player in her last match at Forest Hills, Miss Helen Wills, queen of racquet wielders, will try again at Germantown tomorrow to conquer a man. This time her opponent will be John Hennessey.

A few days ago Miss Wills defeated Fritz Mercur, fifteenth in the national ranking, and some one made the observation that Fritz did not try. This aroused her ire and she asked for a return match and was beaten.

Miss Wills is to meet Hennessey during the first day's play of the international matches between the visiting French players and Americans entered in the nationals. It will be an exhibition match.

The Germantown Cricket Club, the scene of the Davis Cup matches in recent years before the famous trophy was carried away to France, is ready for the French-American test of skill. There will be two singles and one doubles match on each of the three days of play. The French players have been here practicing for several days and were out again today keeping in condition for the matches which will serve as training for the national championships at Forest Hills next week.

After the Wills-Hennessey match Pierre Landry and Christian Boussus will oppose Wilbur Coen and John Doeg in the doubles.

MRS. MITCHELL SCORES.

Shoots Ekwanok Course From Men's Tees in 92 Strokes.

Special to The New York Times.

MANCHESTER, Vt., Sept. 5.—Mrs. J. J. Mitchell of the Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia, played the Ekwanok course from the men's tees today in a total of ninety-two strokes. With her handicap of seventeen strokes she won five up on bogey in the first invitation tournament of the Green Mountain Girls, an association of women golfers recently formed at Manchester. There were two prize winners in each of the four divisions, as follows:

First division, Mrs. Mitchell, Merion, 17, 5 up; Mrs. William Wurtemburg, Dorset Field, 29, 2 up.

Second division, Mrs. E. C. Smith, Green Meadow, 31, even; Miss Mary Beckwith, Ekwanok, 31, 2 down.

Third division, Mrs. L. S. Pierce, Rutland, 50, 7 up; Mrs. S. C. Dorsey, Rutland, 52, 7 up.

Kidd and McElligott Qualify.

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 5 (AP).—Willie Kidd and Eddie McElligott, both of Minneapolis, will represent the Northwest section in the national professional golf championship at Baltimore next month. They won the right in the qualifying play yesterday in which twelve players participated. Kidd led the field with 147 strokes and McElligott had 151.

NELSON, WITH 78, WINS AT WESTCHESTER GOLF

Takes Low Gross in One-Day Play, While Brezovsky Captures First Net Prize.

Special to The New York Times.

SCARSDALE, N. Y., Sept. 5.—W. H. Nelson of Gedney Farms captured the low gross honors in the one-day tournament of the Westchester County Golf Association over the links of the Scarsdale Golf Club here today. Nelson had a 40, 38—78.

The first net prize went to L. J. Brezovsky, Tamarack, who had 90, 21—69, the second award going to Carlo Paterno of Westchester Biltmore who had 82, 11—71.

Nelson led the field of one hundred players, playing the first nine first, and after he had piled up a 7 as a start he shot the next eight holes in 31 strokes, then adding a 40 for his 78.

His card was:

120 IN ARCOLA GOLF TODAY.

McDonald to Defend Cup in 11th Annual Invitation.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Sept. 5.—A field of 120 golfers has entered the Arcola Country Club's eleventh annual invitation tournament for the Arcola Cup. An eighteen-hole qualifying round will be played tomorrow.

Stephen Berrien and Edward Arnott of Upper Montclair, winners in 1924 and 1926, respectively, will compete, as will Joseph N. McDonald of White Beeches, who captured the trophy last year.

VON ELM WITH 272 WINS GOLD MASHIE

By WILLIAM D. RICHARDSON.

slipping down into a bunker between himself and the elevated green.

The probability was that he would do well to get even a 5, but he did even better than that, pitching out to five feet and holing a none too easy putt for a 4. Thus he lost only one stroke to par.

But later on, when putts that hit the cup failed to drop for birdies on the next two holes and when he got no better than a par on the short sixth hole, George was confronted with what appeared to be an impossible task.

The 35 out and even 4s to where he was made it necessary for him to get birdies on the last three holes to equal the record, and while one birdie might be counted on on the seventh, which is a par 4 hole, but one on which they were driving nearly up to the green, the others would not be so easy to acquire.

His jig appeared to be up when he failed to pitch up close to the cup on the seventh hole, but down went a six-yard putt for the first of the all-essential birdies there. Could he get the other two? His drive to the long seventeenth was far ahead of the drives of all the others in the foursome, Sweetser, Marston and Tailer, but he had a close lie to play from, the green was a long way off and the opening guarded by a bunker cut in from the left.

Using a spoon, Von Elm had the distance judged all right, but his direction was faulty and the ball went into the cut-in bunker. It was lying up against the forward wall, and, since the pin was cut quite close to the edge of the green nearest him, he had a difficult shot to lay the ball anywhere near the hole.

Needs a Birdie 3.

The shot that he played was the best he could expect under the circumstances, the ball running perhaps ten feet past the hole, but he sank the next one for a birdie 4. Now all he had to do to equal the record was to get a birdie 3 on the last hole.

His drive was perfectly placed in relation to the opening of the green; his next was hole-high to the pin, twenty feet away. With one putt to equal the record, George used only one, the ball just having enough legs to tumble into the cup for a birdie 3.

In order to show the utter helplessness of the other players to cope with Von Elm it is merely necessary to state that in the entire seventy-two holes he was only over par figures four times. Strangely enough, three out of the four times was on the same hole, the 191-yard No. 3, which is a copy of the famous Redan hole at North Berwick. It is one of the finest one shotters to be found anywhere and each time that he took more than par he had to use a spoon to get on against the wind blowing off the ocean. Twice he missed it and the other time he three-putted it.

The only other hole on which he was ever over par was the first hole. Playing to that one the first time around this morning, George, after a good drive, pitched short, barely on the front edge and then took three putts, his approach putt stopping four feet short of the hole and leaving him a tricky side-hiller, which he failed to run down.

Young Watts Gunn, who was in second place at the end of fifty-four holes, decided to quit last night and with Roland Mackenzie departed for Boston to get ready for Brae Burn.

TELEVISION DEVICES TO BE SHOWN HERE

Improved Apparatus Will Be Displayed at the Radio Show on Sept. 16.

BRAZILIAN FETE TOMORROW

WJZ to Broadcast Program Commemorating Anniversary of the Nation's Independence.

Improved television apparatus as developed in the laboratories of the General Electric Company at Schenectady by Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson will be shown at the Radio Show, opening at Madison Square Garden Sept. 16. Dr. Alexanderson's new apparatus marks an important step in television, transmitting pictures twelve inches square, according to an announcement made in New York yesterday by Dr. Alexanderson. This advance is made possible through the utilization of the Moore crater lamp, a neon tube of greater brilliancy than heretofore used.

Dr. Alexanderson was careful to say that television was still in the experimental stage and that much research must be made before it can be perfected to a point where it will be commercially practicable. Speaking of television broadcasts from Schenectady, he said they were being carried on to stimulate amateur interest in television and that reports from points as far distant as Los Angeles indicated that good results were being obtained.

The improved television projector employs a forty-eight-line scanning disk, which throws the picture on the screen and operates on the band from 5,000 to 20,000 cycles. Dr. Alexanderson explained that the more lines in the scanning disk made for greater detail in the picture thrown upon the screen; but that in experimental work it has been found that the forty-eight-line disk was sufficient to give good results. The increase in screening disk lineage also makes it necessary to use a wider band. Thus while the twenty-four-line disk operates within a band of 5,000 cycles a disk containing twice as many lines cannot operate effectively on a band less than 20,000 cycles in width.

The greatest success in television reception, according to Dr. Alexanderson, has been obtained from the experiments conducted over short waves. But there is a distinct advantage in this field due to the familiar "skip distance" effect and fading. As the television waves are more sensitive than the ordinary radio wave, this phenomena has presented a problem which research engineers and amateurs are now trying to eliminate. In seeking this solution, WGY, the General Electric Company's transmitter at Schenectady, is sending out four television broadcasts weekly.

Adolph Linden, owner of an independent chain of five radio stations on the Pacific Coast said yesterday that a startling development in radio program presentation may be expected within the next six months. Mr. Linden is negotiating with E. A. Coates of Radio Production, Inc., for a series of programs which are now being developed. These programs will comprise sound-film effects and may be reproduced in radio stations or motion picture houses.

The 106th anniversary of Brazil's independence is scheduled to be celebrated tomorrow night beginning at 7 o'clock, Daylight Saving Time, over WJZ's network. Among the stations in the chain will be KDKA and one of the Westinghouse short-wave transmitters. The latter will be linked to the network in an attempt to have the program heard in the South American republic. The celebration, to be held in the WJZ studio, has been arranged by Señor Sebastiao Sampaio, the Brazilian Consul-General in New York. He will deliver a short talk in Portuguese for the benefit of Brazilians who may be listening in and Brazilian musicians will participate.

Mrs. F. Louis Slade, Chairman of the Women's National Committee for Herbert Hoover, is scheduled to speak this afternoon during the Women's Hour, which is broadcast on Thursdays at 3:05 o'clock over WOR, on "The Qualities of Hoover."

The Victor Talking Machine Company introduced to dealers a new line of orthophonic victrolas and combined radio-phonograph machines yesterday at a luncheon at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

An announcement disclosing the identity of this year's Radio Queen, who will reign during the radio show in Madison Square Garden the week of Sept. 17, will be made today at 11:30 A. M., at the Hotel Astor, according to the show representative.

BOARD COMPLETES FINAL RADIO SET-UP

New Reallocation Plan Is to Receive Approval at Its Session Today.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—The final set-up of the new reallocation plan of the Federal Radio Commission was completed today and there is every indication it will receive final approval tomorrow. At the commission's offices today the possibility was indicated of a delay to Nov. 10 or 15 in the putting into effect the new plan, instead of Oct. 1, as originally announced by the commission in its order No. 40.

While final decision has not been made on delaying the effective date, it is generally believed the commission will postpone it in response to the great number of communications being received from broadcasters.

Station managers are asserting it is next to impossible to have their crystals reground and make the necessary changes in their physical equipment and contracts between now and Oct. 1.

Judge Ira E. Robinson, Chairman of the commission, has been called home because of a sudden illness in his family, but his absence is not expected to delay the reallocation program. He indicated before he left that he wanted the commission to go ahead regardless of his absence.

Among the stations in Zone 1, which it was indicated today, will have cleared channels is WABC. Other stations which will receive cleared channels include WEAF, WJZ and WOR.

Suggestion was made to the commission today by one of its members in connection with the power allocation, that a total of 1,250,000 watts should be allowed the entire country, which would give each zone 250,000 watts.

As applied to the New York zone, this would mean that at least three stations could be allowed 50,000 watts each. The commission, however, has not yet acted on this suggestion.

Under the commission's proposed plan, the eight cleared channels to be allowed each zone will only be cleared during the night hours. During daytime, it is quite possible a number of stations may be on the so-called cleared channels and operating simultaneously with the particular station to which that channel is allocated for night time use.

"The new reallocation plan provides a greatly improved basis for radio reception," Commissioner Caldwell said tonight in a message which he sent to the radio men of Indiana at their convention in Indianapolis.

"By so arranging the channels, on seventy-odd out of our ninety wave lengths," he said, "there will be the very best of receiving conditions this Winter—especially for the farmers and distant listeners.

"It is these millions of remote listeners who live seventy-five miles and more from any broadcasting station who will be the chief beneficiaries of the new arrangement, particularly in their future ability to hear clearly the smaller stations in their own neighborhoods and States.

"At least 60,000,000 people are involved in this improved service and these remote populations on the farms and ranches, in the mountains, along the coasts, and in towns, villages and at crossroads—make up the very folk to whom radio means most as a source of news, inspiration and entertainment.

"And, later, as increased power is used on the cleared channels assigned to various sections, there will be no home anywhere within the nation which will not enjoy a diversity of broadcast programs of satisfactory intensity."

CLEARS KNOX IN AUTO CRASH

Woman Testifies He Swerved Into Car to Avoid Two Children.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Philander C. Knox Jr., son of the late Secretary of State P. C. Knox, today won his acquittal in Police Court on a charge of reckless driving without taking the witness stand in his own defense.

Testimony of a Government witness, Mrs. Mildred Lee, who declared she saw Mr. Knox swerve his car into collision with another automobile to avoid hitting two children, was held to warrant Mr. Knox's acquittal and was stressed by T. Morris Wampler, defense attorney, in a twenty-minute address to Judge Hitt.

The attorney praised Mr. Knox's driving ability, declaring he should "have a medal pinned on his breast and be given a certificate for careful driving by the Government."

Mr. Knox was arrested on Aug. 30, when his car was in collision here with a machine driven by William Patterson.

FAILS IN HIS EFFORT TO FIND LOST 'TWIN'

"Brother" Who Believed Girl Sister for 16 Years Wants Her to Stay With Family.

SAYS SHE WAS NOT SNUBBED

No trace has yet been found of Mrs. Jessica Hart Trogan, the Freeport (L. I.) young woman who mysteriously disappeared two weeks ago when she learned that the young man with whom she had lived for almost sixteen years and supposed was her twin brother was reunited with his real family.

William Hart, the Brooklyn gasoline salesman and supposed "twin," said yesterday that he had exhausted all his efforts in the search for the young woman.

"Although she left a note stating that she was going to Geneva, N. Y., I am sure she isn't there," he said. "She didn't know any one in that vicinity."

According to Hart, the reason for her departure was because of the shock of his returning home. If she would let him know where she was, he said, he would see that his family took care of her. He denied the reports that when the young woman returned to Philadelphia with him to meet his own family she was snubbed. He insisted that his three sisters had tried to make the girl feel at home.

It developed during his talk that Mrs. Trogan had taken a Chrysler automobile that was owned jointly by them when she departed. He said, however, that she could have the machine as long as she wanted it.

Until three weeks ago, the "twins" lived a peaceful existence in Freeport. Hart worked in a gasoline station in Brooklyn, while the young woman helped with the housework in the family where both boarded.

Hart and the young woman believed they were the twin son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Hart of Camden, N. J., both of whom died during 1918. The "parents" died without revealing to the young man and woman that they were not twins, according to Hart. In fact, he said yesterday, the Harts never told them they were adopted.

Nearly a month ago Hart wrote a friend of his childhood in Camden seeking new employment. The leter was forwarded to Hart's sister, Mrs. Sue Potter, in Philadelphia. She wired the young man in Brooklyn ,asking him to call her on the telephone. He did and a reunion followed with Hart bringing alone the girl who he supposed was his twin sister.

Hart said Mrs. Trogan was overcome when she learned that he was not her "twin brother." He declared, however, that his family tried to have the girl stay with them, but she refused. Her disappearance followed her return to Freeport. Hart explained yesterday that his supposed twin sister married an aviator in 1923, but he was killed in in an accident a year later.

3 TRAPPED IN FIRE, BURNED IN HARLEM

Negro Woman, Baby and San Domingan Die in Tenement as Others Climb to Safety.

ANOTHER KILLED IN FALL

Youth Restrained From Jumping Slips Later in Eagerness to Seize Firemen's Ladder.

One man, a mother and her five-months'-old daughter were burned to death and another fell to his death yesterday in a fire which started shortly after 9 A. M. in the ground floor hallway of the tenement house at 1,968 Seventh Avenue, near 118th Street. An investigation into the origin of the fire, believed to have been incendiary, is under way.

John A. Fitzgerald of 79 East 126th Street was seated in his taxicab almost in front of the building when he saw smoke in the doorway. He ran to the nearest fire box and pulled the alarm. As he was running back to the building he met Patrolman McLoughlin of the West 123d Street Station.

The men entered the building, fought through blinding smoke and gained the upper floors, where they shouted to the tenants, most of them negroes, to flee for the fire escape in the rear. There were ten families living on the five floors of the building, an old-style structure with wooden stairways.

By the time fire apparatus arrived under Battalion Chief Clark, the flames had filled the hallway to the roof and spread throughout the entire building. Policemen went to the rear of the building where they assisted tenants down the fire escape.

Woman Climbs to Safety.

Many were trapped, however, in the front rooms of the upper floors. Before the apparatus arrived Mrs. Mathias Emres, 23 years old, who said she was a Hindu, and her husband, Bernardo, appeared at a window on the top floor. Emres was screaming but his wife was calm. She climbed to the window sill and crept five feet along an ornamental stone ledge to a window in the adjoining building at 1,970 Seventh Avenue.

At a third floor window, Walter Miller, 24 years old, a negro, was preparing to jump when the sirens on the fire engines were heard a few blocks away on Seventh Avenue. The crowd, which had already been attracted to the fire, shouted to Miller to wait. He obeyed, but a few minutes later clutched too soon at a ladder put up to him, and fell to the sidewalk. He was taken to Harlem Hospital with a fractured skull and died later.

Through smoke and flames bursting from the lower windows, firemen took Emres and several others safely down ladders to the street. Battalion Chief George sent in a second alarm, which brought additional apparatus and Deputy Chiefs Clark and "Smoky Joe" Martin. Upon reports that the origin of the fire seemed to have been in a baby carriage under the stairs on the ground floor, Deputy Chief Martin ordered an investigation.

Fail to Revive Victim.

Not until the fire was somewhat under control were the bodies of Mrs. Melise Rutlidge, 22 years old, a negro woman, and her daughter, Barbara, found on the third floor, where, in their frenzy, they had run into the worst of the blaze.

There was still a spark of life in the woman. Her body was laid on the sidewalk and for twenty minutes five ambulance doctors from Harlem Hospital worked over her with a pulmotor in a vain effort to save her life.

The body of Albert Gomez, 24 years old, was found on the top floor. He had arrived from Santo Domingo the day before to visit Angelo Jesurun, a young man who lived in the building.

Assistant Fire Marshal Willis took charge of the investigation to determine the origin of the fire. Damage to the building was estimated at $15,000.

CALLS SON 'EUGENIC BABY.'

Katie Pullman Says Father Agreed Child Was to Be All Hers.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Miss Katie Pullman, a vaudeville performer, calls the son born to her on Aug. 28 at the German Evangelical Deaconess Hospital here a eugenic baby.

She at first declared she would never reveal the identity of the father. When told that William Diner of Cincinnati had been named, she acknowledged the truth of the report, but said he had not been advised of the birth of the child.

"There was no reason to tell him," she explained today, "for it was agreed that the child was to be entirely mine; mine to support and to train as I saw fit.

"Censure!" she exclaimed in reply to a question. "I don't see why there should be any.

"My great ambition for the baby is to make a real athlete out of him. I'm to train him all by myself."

'FRONT PAGE' UNDER INQUIRY

District Attorney's Office Investigates After Complaints.

Assistant District Attorney Wallace saw "The Front Page" at the Times Square Theatre Tuesday night as the result of four complaints against the moral character of the play received by District Attorney Banton.

Mr. Banton announced yesterday that the complaints had been received and said that Mr. Wallace had been assigned to look into the play. He would not reveal the names of those who had made the complaints, but said he was assured that they were bona fide and warranted investigation of the play by his office. Just what the offense alleged against the play by those making the complaints was not made clear.

It was said at the District Attorney's office that no comment would be made and nothing given out as to the official judgment on the play until final decision had been made.

Mr. Hammerstein's ornate drama-cathedral is now being given over to the presentation of a musical comedy made more interesting and entertaining than the average by the novelty of the moving scenery it so generously employs and by the specialties done by some of the better known in its roster of performers. It is, however, a show whose book is not among the innovations, despite the circumstance that that book is credited to such experienced workmen of the musical comedy theatre as Otto Harbach, Oscar Hammerstein 2d and Henry Myers.

The scenic novelty of "Good Boy" is, like many another, an invention so simple that the most startling thing about it is that it has not been done before. Reports have been abroad that the travelling settings are derived from German originals, but these rumors have been indignantly squelched as unworthy of the 100 per cent. American musical comedy entrepreneurs. The program assigns the glory to John Wenger; credit Mr. Wenger then with having brought something new to the song-and-dance arenas.

His effects are mostly set pieces and cut-outs placed upon treadmills moving in the opposite direction from other treadmills upon which the characters walk. The upshot of the matter is that more treadmills were seen in action last night than have been employed since Klaw & Erlanger last revived "Ben-Hur." Nor were they used entirely for scenery. In Busby Berkeley's ingenious doll dance number in the second act they carried dancing girls and helped to make that hoofing specialty one of the high spots of the undertaking.

Such latitude in the matter of stage décor as this feature permits naturally makes for a large number of scenes. "Good Boy" lists thirty-one, and the climax appeared to have been reached at the première in the first act finale, when one side of the hotel room swung around to become a balcony from which the lovers were vouchsafed a glimpse of Central Park and the panorama of the city.

Many of the earlier scenes are even a bit expressionistic in their attempt to present snatches of the bedlam that is New York as it seems to the country bumpkin, newly arrived from Butlersville, Ark. Motion pictures, animated cartoons and an off-stage din to simulate the street noises of the metropolis make much of the first part a pleasantly vertiginous interlude.

But even moving scenery begins to pall in time, and then the spectator becomes acutely conscious that he is witnessing just another version of the story of the farmer boy who, after the usual vicissitudes, makes good in the city. In this one he does it by creating a doll, a motif which may replace the playgrounds-in-the-sky theme of at least one of last season's more earnest musical pieces.

Fortunately there are several amusing persons involved and they have a way of bobbing up whenever the plot threatens to rear too much of its head. The most telling comedy is in the hands of Charles Butterworth, whose dry, colorless voice and wan, agonized manner makes practically every line assigned to him funny.

Eddie Buzzell, carrying the burden of being chief protagonist, is more often amusing than not, but his glib city-feller school of wisecracks seems at times a little out of the picture. The decorative Barbara Newberry dances well and moves attractively through the proceedings. Helen Kane, an alumna of Paul Ash's training school at the Paramount Theatre, goes in for the bub-bubbety-bub-bub-bub style of singing in a fashion that delights her admirers. and Borrah Minevitch, long the leader of a band of boy harmonica players who have infested several previous musical shows, now emerges with a part and gets away in good shape. He has, of course, brought his boys along, and the first nighters were loath to allow them to vacate the stage.

There are sufficiently snappy tunes, although both tunes and lyrics, the work of Kalmar and Ruby, are not the most important part of the proceedings. The majority of those in Mr. Hammerstein's congregation regarded "Good Boy" as a good show and the evidence at hand last night seemed to warrant such a verdict.

Rayon Style Shows to Go on Road.

In line with its announced plans for an educational campaign, the Rayon Institute announces it will start two style shows on the road next week, one for cities in the East and the other for those in the West. The Eastern group, under Ann Puryear Wright, will hold its first style show Monday at the store of Porteus, Mitchell & Braun, Portland, Me. Miss Elizabeth Nutting will head the other group, which will make its first appearance at the Marshall Field & Co. store in Chicago Sept. 12.

Southern California Slightly Shaken

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 5 (AP).—An earthquake, so light in this city it hardly was noticeable, was felt in Southern California from San Luis Obispo to San Diego about 6:40 A. M. today. The tremor lasted about fifteen seconds and was barely strong enough to swing electric lights suspended from ceilings.

THE PLAY

By J. BROOKS ATKINSON.

Behind the Altar of Hymen.

HEAVY TRAFFIC, a comedy in three acts, by Arthur Richman. Staged by Bertram Harrison, produced by Charles Frohman, Inc. At the Empire Theatre.

Dodd	Herbert Belmore
Susan Perry	Jean Dixon
Tommy Fairchild	Leo G. Carroll
Rosalie West	Mary Boland
Wilbur Richardson	Robert Strange
Malcolm West	Reginald Mason
Isabel Mancini	Kay Strozzi
Philip Mancini	Edward Crandall
Ralph Corbin	A. E. Matthews

It is the fate of such smart comedies as Arthur Richman's "Heavy Traffic," which was played at the Empire last evening, that they must be epigrammatic; and it is the fate of most conscious epigrams that they go slightly awry. Writing of a faithless wife who wants to eat her cake and have it, too, Mr. Richman assumes a cleverness of wit and situation that is not always borne out by his play. The piquant Mary Boland plays the leading part with the short, deep strokes of farcical dissembling which have made her a leading actress of such rôles; the accomplished A. E. Matthews and the gentlemanly Reginald Mason act in opposite parts. Even so, to this observer, "Heavy Traffic" seldom spins as buoyantly as such comedies should.

For years Rosalie West's infidelities have been notorious. Her patient and slightly stupid husband might not have begrudged her the current one with Philip Mancini, the brilliant young pianist, if he had not fallen in love with Mancini's sister. Being in love he wants a divorce, but Rosalie is unwilling to give up the luxury of being a rich man's wife. How Rosalie manages by great luck to avoid the trap her husband has set for her and how, out of sheer exuberance, she then has the bad taste to make fatal advances to her husband's alluring detective, conclude the comedy enjoyably. It is belated enjoyment at best. There has been rather too much heavy going in the earlier scenes.

For Miss Boland, and for her admirers, the opportunity is no mean one. As the double-dealing matron she makes her flagrant perfidities inordinately amusing as she fences her way among the three men who have claims upon her, quieting here, arousing there, and carrying on in general with a heady assurance in her skill. Miss Boland plays with an impetuosity that makes such parts snap with farcical vitality. After ten minutes of her wanton assaults upon an innocent young pianist one is surprised to find an undamaged stick of furniture in the room.

Men have less endurance than the tables and chairs; she wrecks men right and left. She is a tempest; she is a moral catastrophe. In the last scene the playwright hints that she has found her match in the suave, expert detective. But that would be hard to believe if Mr. Matthews were not playing the part. Veteran of a thousand designing harridans, courtly, gracious, yet frightfully experienced, Mr. Matthews puts confidence in the heart of every righteous playgoer as the final curtain descends. Although his good manners appear to be yielding, we have all seen him come through twenty equally perilous situations in the last few years, without even a trace of powder reporting the impress of firm, white arms around his neck.

If the dialogue of "Heavy Traffic" were more unerringly written, if the wit were more crackling, the jaunty assumption of sophistication by the other players might seem less distressing. For in modish comedies it is difficult to remember that the actors have not conjured up their own lines.

"Ups-A-Daisy" on Oct. 1.

"Ups-A-Daisy," a musical comedy sponsored by Lewis E. Gensler, who has composed the scores for various musical attractions, is scheduled to open at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre on Oct. 1. Among the principal players will be William Kent, Luella Gear, Marie Saxon, Roy Royston, Bobbie Perkins and Buster West. The book is the work of Clifford Grey and Robert A. Simon and Mr. Gensler is responsible for the music. "Ups-A-Daisy" will begin a fortnight's engagement in Philadelphia on Sept. 17.

NEW VOLUME BY KIPLING.

"A Book of Words," Containing Speeches, on Sale Tomorrow.

"A Book of Words," by Rudyard Kipling, the latest volume from the author's pen, containing the first collection of his speeches and addresses, will go on sale tomorrow, according to an announcement yesterday from Doubleday, Doran & Co., the publishers.

Among the addresses included in the volume is the famous "Independence," Kipling's rhetorical speech before St. Andrew's College, Scotland, which, it is said, is comparable to Barrie's "Courage," given under similar circumstances. The book also contains a collection of Kipling's views on modern materialism, art, international relations, dreams and other subjects.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The new George Jessel play, "The War Song," will open here on Sept. 24 instead of the 17th. The show is at present in Philadelphia.

Sophie Tucker is aboard the Aquitania, due tomorrow.

John Wray, Katherine Wilson and Pat O'Brien will play leading roles in "Tin Pan Alley," which opens out of town, Oct. 22. It will come to New York about Nov. 12. Hugh Stanislaus Stange is the author.

"The Great Melting Pot," by Jean Young, will open in Mamaroneck Sept. 17, and is announced to come to Broadway the following week.

Beginning Sept. 17 the Keith-Albee 81st St. Theatre will revert to its policy of full week programs, with two performances daily.

A new link will be added to the chain of try-out theatres tonight when the Keith-Albee Castle Theatre at Long Beach, will offer "This is Marriage" as its first legitimate production.

"Good News" will round out a solid year at Chanin's 46th St. Theatre today. It will remain there until the first of the year.

Rehearsals of "Young Love," by Samson Raphaelson, author of "The Jazz Singer," will begin next Monday. Dorothy Gish and her husband, James Rennie, will be in the cast.

Jane Cowl will arrive tonight from the Coast, where she ended her tour in "The Road to Rome" last Saturday.

Charles Trowbridge has joined the cast of "Women," in which John Halliday will appear in the chief role.

"Pleasure Man," instead of "Stage Life" will be the name of the new Mae West play, opening at the Biltmore about Oct. 1. It will be produced by Carl Reed, who also announces that he will present Miss West in another play of her own authorship following the run of "Diamond Lil." It will be called "Men."

"Girl Trouble," by Barry Conners, with Allan Dinehart and Georgette Cohan in the cast, has been put into rehearsal by Richard Herndon.

Lucy Monroe, daughter of Anna Laughlin, original prima donna of "The Wizard of Oz," has been engaged for "Hello, Yourself," opening in Philadelphia in a few weeks.

DETROIT CIVIC THEATRE GIVES ITS FIRST PLAY

New Movement Is Directed by Jessie Bonstelle and Operated With Public Funds.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Sept. 5.—The Detroit Civic Theatre, formerly the Bonstelle Playhouse, held its formal opening tonight.

Several large cities have studied the plan, with the idea of establishing their own civic theatres with resident companies. Hope is expressed that this movement may lead to the establishing of a national theatre in Washington, which will bear the same relation to the country as a whole as the Moscow Art Theatres and the Comédie Française do in their respective countries.

Governor Green of Michigan and Mayor Lodge of Detroit were present. Miss Bonstelle, who is the director of the theatre as well as its founder, presented "The Queen's Husband," by Robert Sherwood, as the opening play for the Fall and Winter season.

The establishment of the Detroit Civic Theatre is the realization of a lifelong dream of Jessie Bonstelle and the achievement of over 30,000 citizens of Detroit, who contributed last Spring to a $200,000 endowment campaign. This theatre maintains a professional resident company.

Its educational work includes several free performances each year of a play chosen by the schools and given for school children, and also several free outdoor performances, given in conjunction with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, of a classical play. It maintains a school of music, dancing, dramatic art and production. It also plans to work with the foreign groups in presenting their native art to the public.

The box office profits of the Detroit Civic Theatre go back into the sustaining fund of the theatre.

THREATEN TO CLOSE ALL CHICAGO MOVIE HOUSES

Operators and Stage Hands Present Ultimatum for Settlement of Musicians' Demands.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 5.—A threat made tonight by the heads of the motion picture operators' and stage hands' unions to call their men out of all Chicago moving picture houses unless the exhibitors made some immediate progress toward peace with the striking musicians, led late tonight to an agreement to hold an early morning conference in an effort to avoid a general shut down here tomorrow.

The musicians so far are out in only 300 odd of the smaller outlying houses, the so-called de luxe houses, both in and out of the Loop, not being affected. The threats of the operators and stage hands if carried into action would bring all the cinema theatres in the city into the strike.

Thomas Maloy, business agent for the operators, and George Browne, head of the stage hands organization, delivered their ultimatums early this evening to Jack Miller, President of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association. They did so when a meeting of exhibitors and musicians out of which it was hoped peace would come, broke up almost before it started because Miller had not arrived.

Morris Gest Returns.

Morris Gest, theatrical producer, returned yesterday from his trip to Europe. He said he was in much better health than when he went away from New York. Mr. Gest said that he had seen very little worth while on the stage in Vienna, Berlin, Paris or London. He will announce his plans for the tour of the Shakespearean players from the Stratford-on-Avon Theatre and the movies he is going to produce with Max Rheinhardt and Lillian Gish as the star from his office today.

Jules Bledsoe Quits Hospital.

Jules Bledsoe, the negro singer appearing in "Show Boat," was discharged yesterday from Post-Graduate Hospital, where he was operated upon recently for appendicitis, and will rejoin the show next week. In the meantime his rôle is being played by Daniel Haynes.

Playland to Remain Open.

Special to The New York Times.

RYE, N. Y., Sept. 5.—The county's amusement park, Playland, at Rye Beach, will keep open for the rest of the month, officials of the park announced today.

Read the Tributes:—
"Spirited and good-humored entertainment. The first Fox Feature to have Movietone dialogue which for Clearness and Naturalness surpasses any other method."—John Hutchins in The Post.
"Imagine a film concerned with airplane activities that contains so much fun that it kept the audience in gales of laughter. It is a jolly, wholesome and refreshingly human picture."—Mordaunt Hall in The Times.
"One of the most interesting and convincing photoplays since 'Street Angel.' It strikes a new note in Aerial Picture Making and should have the healthy run it deserves."—Betty Colfax in The Graphic.
"Excellent entertainment abounding with laughs, tears, thrills and romance. Thoroughly absorbing production whose dialogue is the best the talking screen has had to date."—Irene Thirer in Daily News.
"An exciting and fast moving melodrama of aviation in which Movietone is all that we may expect and more."—Quinn Martin in The World.
"The Air Circus,' Fox's first essay in the injection of dialogue into a feature film, is a creditable endeavor. Movietone dialogue heightens the drama of the story."—George Gerhard in Evening World.

BORAH ON THE TREATY.

Without waiting for Secretary KELLOGG'S return, Senator BORAH hastens to give the multilateral treaty renouncing war his blessing. He hails it as the most important contribution to the cause of pesce ever known. It falls in, he says, exactly with his own ideas, often expressed, about the outlawry of war. A critical examination of his speeches on this subject would show, we believe, that the method followed by the treaty is not the one which he has long advocated. His argument has been that the first thing to do is to recast international law so as to make war of every kind a crime. Until that is done, Senator BORAH has contended, Hague Tribunals and international courts of justice are of no consequence whatever. But it is not necessary to go back to all that. Senator BORAH was understood to have been consulted in advance by the Secretary of State, and to have given his promise, which he now so handsomely redeems, to support the Kellogg treaty.

One difficulty remains. Will the Senate agree with the Chairman of its Foreign Relations Committee and ratify the treaty? Senator BORAH believes that it will, though not, of course, without close scrutiny and ample discussion. A point of interpretation will at once arise. Do the qualifications and reservations embodied in the diplomatic notes of Secretary KELLOGG and the other Foreign Ministers control the application of the treaty, or will it be necessary to add them to the document itself at the time of its ratification? Senator BORAH admits that this question will be seriously debated by the Senate, which may resolve to call upon the State Department for its official view. What this is can hardly be doubted. In the correspondence with the English and French Governments it was made as clear as possible that the treaty was signed on the distinct understanding that the reservations mentioned in the exchange of notes were to be regarded as qualifying each signature. If this were not made plain, it is certain that the Senate would be inclined to make trouble.

THE WISCONSIN PRIMARY.

Senator LA FOLLETTE'S easy renomination was a matter of course, and the whole Progressive State ticket was successful except his man for Governor, whose election he said was "more important" than his own. On the one thing that the La Follette-Blaine machine set most store by and used every effort to bring about, it was beaten. It remains a mystery why it selected as its candidate for Governor Representative BECK, not well known in the State, and tried to force him on an unwilling party. State Treasurer LEVITAN, whose department is a model of efficiency and economical administration and who is widely popular, was not acceptable to the oligarchy.

The Conservative Republicans found in Mr. WALTER KOHLER, a great manufacturer risen from the ranks, a nominee who brought back memories of the one business Administration that Wisconsin has had in a quarter of a century of professional political executives—EMANUEL PHILIPPS. Mr. KOHLER proposed constructive legislation, tax revision, an executive budget. His program included measures of "social justice." His popular strength had been notably shown by his election as a delegate at large to the Kansas City Convention, though he appeared late and as a substitute. He had no machine and had to depend upon volunteers. The La Follette-Blaine organization had all the patronage except that controlled by the Governor and had nine of eleven Representatives in Congress.

Its two Senators were on the stump, aided by their recent idol for President, Mr. NORRIS. It even made a house-to-house canvass. Governor ZIMMERMAN, a Progressive deserter who came into office through a combination of Stalwarts and Progressives, ran "a poor third." In the last days of the campaign he was injudicious enough to join in the "mud-slinging," engaged in still more heartily by the Progressive opponents of Mr. KOHLER, who was probably helped rather than hurt thereby. Many words and tears were shed by the Progressive orators over "the waterpower monopoly." What have the guardians of the people's interests in Wisconsin been doing if such a monster exists?

No national implications can be read into the result of the contest, which turned on State issues. The election of Mr. KOHLER must have been favored by many Progressives. It seems to mean a protest against "the Madison ring," a desire for more business and less politics in State affairs, resentment of a dictated nomination. Or it may mean simply resentment at Mr. ZIMMERMAN'S Administration and a preference for Mr. KOHLER over the curious choice of the Progressive machine. At any rate, a Conservative Republican has won a nomination at last. We don't know what Mr. LA FOLLETTE will do or how he is going to keep his name off the ticket with Mr. KOHLER, though the defeat of Mr. BECK, "a home-spun man of the common people," as a Madison patriot describes him, is, if we remember a choice bit of the Senator's rhetoric, a "grave danger "that this great experiment of de-"mocracy may fail."

According to the political writer of The Milwaukee Journal, KOHLER'S election is "an epochal event." These are common. Less common as yet is the fact that both ZIMMERMAN and KOHLER used airplanes in their canvass. Mr. KOHLER flew most, fastest and farthest; and the "epochal event" was the favorite in the betting.

"BROKERS' LOANS" AGAIN.

Tuesday's statement by the Stock Exchange, of total borrowings by its members at the end of August, was chiefly remarkable as indicating the diversity of sources on which the stock market has been drawing for credit. Latterly, the main interest in regard to "brokers' loans" has been the increasing tendency of large depositors in banks to lend their own funds in the market, instead of leaving them for the bank to lend. This practice produced the curious result that, whereas "brokers' loans" by New York banks for their own account, as reported by the Federal Reserve last week, had decreased $373,800,000 since the climax of stock speculation last June and $252,900,000 as compared with a year ago, loans by the same banks "for account of others" (mostly depositing clients) had increased in the same two periods $152,300,000 and $981,700,000, respectively.

This showing led to the action of the Associated Banks in July whereby the charge for placing such loans for the individual benefit of depositors was largely increased, and at the same time the interest rate allowed on accounts still left as deposits was raised. The new arrangements did not go into effect until this present week, so that their actual effect on the total brokers' loan account is still unknown. But Tuesday's compilation diverted interest from that particular problem, because the figures showed that in August an immense increase had occurred in borrowings not included at all in the bank returns.

The aggregate of "brokers' loans" effected through New York banks, whether for their own account or for account of out-of-town institutions or for account of their own depositors and "others," had decreased something over $24,000,000 last month. But the Stock Exchange's total of borrowings by brokers had actually increased $214,000,000. No discrepancy of any such magnitude had ever been shown before. The Stock Exchange figures are always much larger than those compiled by the Federal Reserve, for the reason that brokers' borrowings from foreign banks, from institutions not in the Federal Reserve, and to an extent from private bankers would not appear in the Reserve Bank's statements. But an increase of $214,000,000 from those sources of credit alone is exceptional.

From one point of view, this might be said merely to reflect the general principle that an unusually high bid for money will attract funds from every quarter, and that the money market which bids above all other markets will draw from those other markets also. During this Summer the money rate on Wall Street has not only been the highest quoted there since 1920, but has far overtopped the present season's bid on any foreign money market, possibly excepting Berlin. There have been evidences that money was being sent from London to lend in New York; it has been said that even French balances in New York, previously invested in short-term United States or municipal bonds, have been turned into the Stock Exchange call-money market. What other sources will account for the huge increase of August it is difficult to say. In any case, the demand is abnormally great.

Precisely what effect this borrowing should have on the general credit situation is a question which involves very different considerations. The high New York money market speaks for itself; it certainly does not appear less significant, in view of the large increase in the credit fund shown to have been available in August. Perhaps one of the most striking considerations is the fact that, whereas total brokers' loans as reported monthly by the Stock Exchange are still substantially less than at their maximum of May, the decrease has been wholly in loans on time. Loans of that type have been reduced $222,000,000, whereas loans on call, repayment of which may be required at any moment, have actually increased $23,000,000 over the very high figure of three months ago and now surpass all previous records.

ON THE BOONE TRAIL.

Mr. HOOVER will be venturing into his party's political wilderness when he goes for the purposes of campaign oratory to a point in the Appalachians where his voice can be heard both in North Carolina and in Tennessee. That wilderness is filled with perils for him. It is full of Democrats, many of whom—though temporarily inert—will rise and go on the hunt for Republicans as soon as they see the Presidential candidate actually in those woods. DANIEL BOONE crossed that trail to Kentucky, escaping the physical dangers that lay between; and WARREN G. HARDING, in 1920, spoke at Chattanooga and carried Tennessee. Perhaps it is with these two great adventuring precedents in mind that Mr. HOOVER has made his decision. We are told that he runs his own campaign and makes his own plans. Unquestionably his advisers were of two minds about the sortie into BOONE'S woods. Probably most of them were opposed. So if Mr. HOOVER finds that his hunting trip results in stirring up the animals, and waking sleeping dogs that will devour his party hopes of Southern majorities, he will have only himself to blame.

The general impression had been that Republican strategy was well content with the whispering campaign against Governor SMITH in the South, with the defection of Senator SIMMONS in North Carolina and the gloom of some Virginia and Kentucky leaders over Democratic prospects in those States. Many political writers—after conferences at Washington headquarters—had agreed that Democratic family poison was preferred to a Republican siege of the Southern household for purposes lethal to Governor SMITH. Now Mr. HOOVER is to use the Southern Appalachians for his battery pit in October. Time will tell whether he is wise. One present effect is that Democrats in Kentucky, Virginia and Alabama, which have often been claimed by Republican spokesmen and which Senator MOSES put on his comic war map, will be immensely pleased. For by his choice of the North Carolina-Tennessee base Mr. HOOVER has revealed where his real Southern hope lies, and Democratic aggressiveness in the remainder of the South will henceforth be on the rise.

THE NEW SCHOOL YEAR.

If registration for the public schools, now under way, shows the same annual increase of approximately 20,000 which it has maintained during the last five years there will be something like 1,045,000 pupils on the rolls of elementary, high and special schools at the beginning of the new school year. The average attendance for 1928-9 will be about 100,000 less if the precedent of last year is maintained. For the support of this school army of close to a million the Board of Education has adopted a budget of nearly $129,000,000, exclusive of $33,000,000 appropriated for new construction. Critics of the board's bookkeeping insist that in reckoning the total cost of the school system there should be included $27,000,000 disbursed through other city departments in the form of interest on construction bonds, teachers' pensions, and light and water service. The city's total outlay on the education of its children would thus be approaching the $200,000,000 mark.

The part-time problem has not yet been solved. Last September the number of part-time pupils was 66,381. For the new year the board announces the opening of eleven schools with 16,658 seats, which will probably fall short by a few thousands of taking care of the increased enrolment. The situation is somewhat better than the figures would suggest, to the extent that, relatively, part time is more prevalent in the high schools. The hardship of an irregular school day falls more heavily on the older children. In the elementary schools a year ago one pupil in forty-five was on part time. In the high schools it was one pupil in seven. It is also in the high schools that attendance has grown most rapidly. The annual increase in enrolment for the entire school system would be less than 2 per cent., but the high school pupils last year showed an increase of 7 per cent. over the preceding year. The indication is that a greater number of elementary school pupils enter high school. Twice a year, in January and June, the schools send out 60,000 graduates.

The present registration is expected to show the same trend in geographical redistribution that has been under way for a decade. Last year Manhattan had a loss of more than 12,000 pupils, whereas Brooklyn and the Bronx gained 10,000 apiece and Queens added no less than 13,000. Of the eleven new school buildings only one is in Manhattan, in the far-north Dyckman section. A number of districts have lost population to the extent of permitting the abandonment of schools. Though local Manhattan pride may suffer, the city as a whole should be grateful for the boon of modern accommodations in the newer and less congested districts. The city's million children of today, receiving instruction from an army of 33,000 teachers, and financed by almost a $200,000,000 budget, enjoy the great advantage of incomparably better physical surroundings than a generation ago.

RECLAIMING THE SAHARA.

A recent dispatch stated that the French Government has under consideration a plan to inundate the Sahara and make it blossom like the rose. This might seem a scheme as fantastic as turning the Gulf Stream from its course. But its backers, including an experienced American engineer, firmly believe that the creation of an inland sea in Northern Africa would not only water those arid regions but would change the climate. The dry winds sweeping from the South would pick up moisture as they crossed the new sea; then, heading into the series of mountain ranges near the north coast, their moisture would be precipitated and would renew the supply of water in the sea from mountain streams flowing down to it. It is an ambitious project, to change not only the geography but the climate of a country.

To the south and east of Biskra lie the Tunisian "chotts," the salty dregs of what were once lakes. A thick crust of salt in places covers their bitter waters or their sediment of mud. The chotts are almost continuously connected by "oueds," dry water courses which were once the beds of torrents. If the chotts were joined by canal to the Mediterranean, their banks would be flooded, in some cases a distance of ten kilometers further than the present littoral. Some of them are entirely below sea level, and the central part of the region to be flooded is from 65 to 100 feet below it. The waters of the Mediterranean would rush down these dry water courses, filling the old lake beds. Where it might be necessary, in order to connect and protect the water system, canals would be dug and dikes or dams built. When the work was complete the great inland sea would cover some 30,000 square miles and connect with the Gulf of Gabes along the Mediterranean shore.

The soil in this region is rich, needing only the blessing of water to make it productive. After the creation of the inland sea it would produce wheat, oats, barley and cotton. There would be no more burning siroccos from the south, and herds of cattle and flocks of sheep could flourish all the year round. There would be an abundant supply of fresh water, with power for electricity. Trees would be planted on the mountain slopes to prevent floods. New ports would be established on the coast, and new lines of steamers would be needed to take care of the traffic with Europe. The desert would become the granary of Europe. A description of the millennium seems scarcely less glowing; but in view of what has actually been accomplished in our own Western dry lands it does not seem too much to hope that man may finally conquer the aridity of the Sahara.

STRIKES IN THE THEATRE.

Every second assistant dramatic reviewer who ever played checkers with the stage hands while he should have been formulating an opinion on the song and dance act of FLANNIGAN and SCHWARTZ for early edition knows that stage hands are not excessively overworked. Neither do the musicians in theatres and movie palaces suffer from too long hours or labor that is beyond their strength. Yet stage hands and musicians are given to complaining and striking. In private they may be satisfied, but officially they are sorely put upon. Their respective unions are remarkably strong and active, and when their periods of grievance overcome them, they are usually able to bring theatre managers and owners around to their point of view. In both unions a minimum number of men must be employed for certain types of entertainment or the curtain will not go up. This rule often compels a manager to employ more stage hands or musicians than seem necessary to him. He has to pay wages to a few extra hands in order to get those who are needed.

In the case of the Boston stage hands who are now asking for increased wages and "other betterments," it is the latter which are of chief importance to both parties. In all probability, the managers will have to yield, and a play with one set which is left standing for eight performances will be more than adequately manned by a force of stage hands. The outcome of the Chicago strike of musicians seems more doubtful. The trouble arose over the refusal of owners to employ the minimum number demanded by the union. The larger houses, which put on spectacles with their movies, use a full orchestra, but the smaller movies, employing about 700 musicians and comprising 85 per cent. of all Chicago's movie theatres, are content with a piano and a drum and one other instrument. The owners of these small houses declare that they cannot afford to employ the number of musicians required by the union. Perhaps the union feels sure that these owners will not be able to afford the new equipment for producing "sound" movies. But mechanically reproduced music is too popular for them to be safe in that assumption.

The three new methods of making pictures with sound are far from perfect, but their novelty is a point in their favor now, and their rapid improvement is certain. When music is photographed at the same time as the picture, synchronization is accurate, and the quality of the tone will be more agreeable in time. It seems an unpromising time for musicians to walk out, unless they are merely forestalling a departure by request.

POST-MORTEM JUDGMENTS.

The poise and reticence of the Earl of OXFORD, whom most will prefer to remember under the name of Mr. ASQUITH, were during the last years of the war and for some time afterward held up for admiration. Under strong provocation he kept silent. The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune he bore with Roman dignity and fortitude. In nothing that he publicly said was personal resentment expressed. His writings about the beginnings and conduct of the war, including the time when a political intrigue brought to an end his career as Prime Minister, betrayed no rancor and revealed no secrets. Mr. ASQUITH appeared to be the very model of a strong man ignoring or despising the slights and injuries put upon him by men of smaller calibre. But now comes the publication after his death of extracts from his diaries and letters which show that, after all, he was but human, and wrote freely about men and incidents in the manner of one sitting severely in judgment, though in this case the verdict was not to be made public until after he had left the scene.

Naturally, a goodly portion of Mr. ASQUITH'S private acid fell upon LLOYD GEORGE. Some of the characterizations he made of that gentleman seem rather cruel, but close to the fact. After you have ceased to sit in the same Cabinet with a man, especially after he has ousted you from the Premiership, you can look him over without any illusions or glamour. What Mr. ASQUITH wrote of WINSTON CHURCHILL is more kindly but cuts nearly as deep. The story which he tells of Lord FISHER, demanding that all German prisoners be shot in retaliation for the Zeppelin raids, is in line with that rough and ready Admiral's proposal to King EDWARD to go out and smash the German fleet without declaring war.

It cannot be said that books like the Asquith "Memories and Reflections" add a new terror to death, but they do constitute a reminder and a warning to living statesmen. If somebody is keeping a diary, unpleasant truths are bound to come to light some day. In Mr. ASQUITH'S diary there appears to have been no entry so hugely indiscreet and egotistical as those which fill nearly all the pages of the private records kept by the late General WILSON, the careless publication of which shocked so many people and almost destroyed the reputation of the General himself. But the Asquith biting comments on men and things will undoubtedly flutter many dovecotes, especially in England.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Flowers of Friendship.

The tragic death of M. BOKANOWSKI brought sorrow to many Americans as well as to his own countrymen. Even in the hurried hours of his brief stay in America a year ago he won friends. His mastery of practical details in so many fields of industry, commerce and finance caused wonderment. But those who heard his parting speech at the luncheon of the France-America Society will remember the peroration in which the poet for the moment pushed aside the financier.

He had spoken in a conversational manner about our commercial relations with France and of the impression America had made upon him, and then drew forth a single sheet of paper on which he had written in English his parting words. They are here reproduced from that sheet as he left it in the hands of one who sat near him:

The rarest and most beautiful flowers are those that require the greatest care and the best gardeners. Very hopelessly darkened would be the future of mankind, very deprived of one of its greatest charms would be the sky of human thought, were the flowers of Franco-American friendship to lose their delightfully shining colors—and I am very glad indeed to pay today a heartfelt tribute to the good gardeners that you are of the flowers of our friendship.

The Seeing Eye in Foreign Climes.

A letter in Monday's TIMES set forth an ingenious explanation of the unhappy sights reported by two clergymen just returned from non-prohibition Canada and Scandinavia. It is suggested that a clergyman on vacation abroad moves about a great deal in the crowd. At home he is busy with his duties in his library and church and sees much less of the streets.

The theory is plausible, but fails to take account of contradictory observations. Opponents of prohibition have been known to return from Europe and report that they have seen more drunken men on Broadway in half an hour than they have seen in the course of a week in Glasgow or Copenhagen, two cities not particularly celebrated for sobriety. The rule holds for other things than prohibition. Where the heart is strongly engaged travelers are apt to discover the most astonishing things under foreign skies and also on the natal soil.

They are never content to see something not quite in consonance with general belief. It is always something totally opposed. Travelers seldom report that people in Moscow are really more cheerful than we suspect. They report seeing more happy faces in Moscow in an hour than on Fifth Avenue in a week. Explorers are never pleased to say that life on the Amazon or around Cape Barrow is fairly tolerable; they insist that life is really much more comfortable in the jungle than it is at Glen Cove, L. I.

The Wilds of New York.

Had it been Harlem instead of Mount Vernon where an opossum was captured, no police would have been called in. The Bronx Zoo would never have received a new occupant. The succulent marsupial would have been popped upon a cook-stove before his grin had faded, and, garnished with yams, would have gone gratefully down the throats of as many of Harlem's citizens as could have got an invitation to the feast.

It is still a bit early for B'rer Possum to have attained that savor which makes his flesh one of the gastronomical delicacies of the world; he always tastes better after the frost comes and he has feasted for a while on persimmons. But any true resident of Harlem, far from the hickory groves of the South, would have scorned to wait so long. And as Br'er 'Possum disappeared down dusky throats, nostalgia would have arisen in many hearts long separated from the cotton and the cane.

The white folk of Mount Vernon, and the Caucasian—and therefore ignorant—policemen who dealt with the fugitive looked upon him as something "resembling a squirrel, a rat and a raccoon." If this opossum looked at all like a rat it was only with respect to his tail. And no opossum ever born looks a bit like a squirrel. His face, it is true, somewhat suggests his ringed and furry cousin, but the difference between their dispositions is that between a house cat and a tiger. Nor has the 'coon edible value.

Sauerkraut's New Salesman.

Men have almost done battle over sauerkraut. Its defenders have praised it as food fit for the gods. Its opponents have damned it as unfit even for beasts. During the late war the anti-sauerkrautists had the best of the argument owing to the intimate association of this particular brand of cabbage with the Central Empires. The inroads that it had made into American households of non-Teutonic origin did not count. The great kraut invasion was rolled back and this nation made safe for boiled cabbage.

Now comes the report that sauerkraut is again entering the American home. This might be regarded as propaganda of the Steuben Society were it not that the report comes from Washington by way of Montreal. Incredible numbers of cabbage heads have been doused in seas of "fixings" and packed in countless hogsheads so that every man, woman and child may have his or her kraut quota.

Why the new development? The answer is to be found in that magical word "vitamins," which, when properly attached to any article of food, seems to make it a best seller. A mouthful of sauerkraut is supposed to equal in vitaminity a cartload of carrot tops, a wheelbarrow full of bean roots, and the flowers of a dozen lettuce plants. This may commend it to the vitamin seekers, but it is a safe prophecy that those who before vitamins were discovered made sour faces when eating sauerkraut will continue to do so today.

A Tribute to "Merry" Merrill.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Maxel M. Merrill succeeded in bringing commercial aviation to its higher aspects, and there is no more emblematic gesture than to name an airport after him which will symbolize the progress of commercial aviation.

Recently Barren Island, New York City's municipal airport, was named Floyd Bennett Field, the same as another airport located in Uniontown, Pa. Why not make the correction now by renaming the Barren Island airport Merrill Field?

PEOPLE VERSUS [illegible]

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I recently had occasion to employ a chauffeur and a typist, and the number of applicants was amazing. Interviewing these people was a depressing task. Many of them were not far from starving. I found able-bodied men and women with fair health and intelligence eager for work but unable to earn enough for proper food and shelter.

It is appalling that such conditions should exist in our civilization or that they should be tolerated. One needs only this kind of experience to have it brought home forcibly just how much remains to be done in terms of bread and butter to remedy the disgrace of poverty and unemployment to sober and industrious people.

With such an experience fresh in the mind it is interesting to turn to the Presidential campaign. We now have the men and issues before us. What are the salient features that emerge?

As for the men, Hoover is the technician, Smith the humanitarian. As for the parties, the Republicans are reactionary, the Democrats progressive. And as for the issues, they are whatever the candidates make them by their personalities. To Mr. Hoover they are problems in economics; to Governor Smith they are problems in promoting the well-being of the people.

This difference is illustrated by their attitude toward unemployment. Hoover would eliminate unemployment for the good of business, Smith would eliminate it for the good of men and women. In the words of his acceptance speech, the purpose of government is "people" and not "material things."

This country is not on the verge of poverty and revolution; quite the contrary. We are in a healthy condition, probably as good as has ever been known to civilization, but facts and figures must be faced. It seems that the time has come in our industrial development to face the fact that "national prosperity" does not mean moral welfare. That is, the country may have flourishing business conditions without having social welfare among the masses. We have learned that unemployment will not take care of itself during business prosperity—it needs as much care as any other economic problem.

What this means in terms of the present campaign can easily be seen if one compares the unemployment situation in industrial centres with the agricultural situation. Here are two groups that need attention. Those directly affected by farm problems are perhaps a third of those made miserable by maladjustment in the cities. Simply by weight of numbers it would seem that the industrial unemployment problem should get some direct treatment. But it will not get this treatment as long as the problem is considered of secondary importance to business prosperity.

I am convinced from my personal knowledge of the Governor that with Smith as President the words "government for the people" will be something more than campaign talk.

The Tombs Out of Date.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Returning from Cleveland I find a news statement and an editorial with reference to the statement reported from Cleveland that the Tombs Prison is one of the four worst jails in the United States. This statement is ascribed to Congressman Boylan of New York, a member of the Congressional Committee for the Investigation of the Care and Treatment of the United States Prisoners.

That committee, on Tuesday last, visited the county jail in Cleveland. I was present with Mr. Boylan when a newspaper reporter was asking questions about jails. The statement quoted was made not by Mr. Boylan, but by myself. The Tombs Prison is one of the worst prisons in the United States because it was built more than half a century ago, and its size and accommodations have not been increased to meet the tremendous increase in the population. As a consequence, the Tombs Prison is always overcrowded, and it does not permit the proper classification and discipline of the prisoners. The prison is undermanned and the guards are overworked and underpaid. The recent murder of two officers of the Tombs Prison was largely due to that fact.

The Commissioner of Corrections and the present efficient Warden of the Tombs Prison are doing everything in their power to administer the Tombs in the best possible manner, and the unfortunate conditions which exist are not due to any failure on their part.

I personally know that Mr. Boylan is in hearty sympathy with their efforts for the improvement of the prison system of Greater New York. HASTINGS H. HART,

Comment on Our Cleanliness.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read an article in THE TIMES this morning that conditions were cleaner at Coney Island and Brighton Beach this Summer. What about Manhattan Beach?

I went there Aug. 26 and 29 to get slight relief from the heat, but was unable to go into the ocean because of the floating garbage.

New Yorkers must be deprived of intelligence, cleanliness and all personal decency to put up with such conditions.

I was told by a friend, who rents a bathing house by the season that there is scarcely a day that objectionable articles are not found floating in toward the shore.

Who with any sense of decency and regard for his health wants to enter a cesspool? Why is this condition allowed to go on year after year? Is there any way of remedying this state of affairs? BOSTONIAN.

CIRCE.

You hear her weeping all night long
Because her loving must be wrong.

Weeping because her golden hair
Weaves for men a tangled snare;

Weeping because her laughing eyes
Mask too well her quiet lies.

When she should be in childlike rest
You hear her beating on her breast;

You hear her praying over and over,
"Why can't I love just one lover?"

"Just one lover with eyes of blue,"
You hear her praying all night through.

Praying and weeping all night through,
Because there's nothing she can do

But rise in the morning as before
And lure men to her bitter shore.

Head in her pillow you hear her weep
When all the swine are dull in sleep.

Loans to Brokers Not Important Factor in Credit Stringency.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

That the tremendous growth in "loans to brokers for account of others" during the past year has not been an important factor in bringing about the existing credit stringency may appear a surprising statement in view of the contrary opinions that have been expressed by bankers as well as by financial publications. While this economic fact does not vitiate other potential dangers inherent in excessive loans of this character, it is worth demonstrating in order to clear up a certain amount of confusion which seems to exist.

When the member banks as a whole increase their holdings of securities, they create credit, expand deposits and increase their aggregate reserve requirements. When they increase their loans to brokers the effect is the same.

On the other hand, when their deposits as a whole withdraw deposits and buy securities, bank credit tends to contract. Bank investments and/or loans on securities go down, deposits go down, reserve requirements go down and credit soon becomes easier.

Exactly the same thing will happen if depositors as a whole lend money to brokers, taking over loans to brokers from banks. Bank loans to brokers, bank deposits and reserve requirements, other things being equal, will go down.

It is a far cry from this economic fact to the contention that bank credit has been expanded largely because of the participation of corporations and individuals in the call money market as lenders. Obviously, no such thing has happened. The shifting of loans around between banks, individuals and corporations may disturb rates and create a limited amount of stringency during heavy readjustments. The possibility that further stringency would be created if "others" were to call loans heavily has the psychological effect of raising interest rates. But the assertion or inference that the increase of $1,000,000,000 in loans for the account of others has expanded Federal Reserve member bank credit to a like amount, thereby creating credit stringency, is contrary to fact.

What then has happened?

During the past year deposits aggregating about $1,000,000,000 have been withdrawn from banks and lent to brokers. As stated above, if these funds had replaced loans to brokers made by banks, bank loans and bank deposits would have been reduced by this amount, other things being equal, and bank reserve requirements would have actually gone down in their proper ratio. But they did not replace bank loans. They increased loans to brokers.

What then happened to the money?

It went back into the banks as deposits. The brokers used it to pay off the investors who were getting out of the market, to increase the floating supply of securities brought out of safe deposit boxes, or to carry undigested new offerings.

Therefore, this billion-dollar increase in brokers' loans caused by the billion-dollar increase in loans for account of others has not increased bank loans, bank deposits or bank credit except to the presumably small extent that "others" may have borrowed from banks in order to lend to brokers.

Still, member bank borrowings are up $600,000,000 and the money stringency is real. This is due primarily to (1) a loss of $400,000,000 in Federal Reserve Bank total reserves due to gold shipments stimulated by cheap money and by foreign loans, (2) a reduction of $250,000,000 in Federal Reserve Bank investments, (3) an increase of $500,000,000 in "all other loans and discounts" of the reporting member banks, (4) an increase of $500,000,000 in loans by banks outside of New York on securities, a large part of which was evidently to customers and not to brokers, and (5) an increase of a like amount in the investments of reporting member banks. The last two points hardly seem to have attracted the attention which they deserve.

Loans to brokers for account of others constitute a form of "extra-banking credit" which differs from all of the rest of the extra-banking credit created when firms, corporations and individuals buy securities in that they are avowedly short-time loans instead of being presumably long-time investments. It is perhaps difficult to justify them as an economic practice, but it is unsound to ascribe the existing credit stringency to them. O. W. ROOSEVELT.

Politics in Alabama.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I notice that Mr. Julian Harris, your editor correspondent, in your issue of Aug. 26 states that, due to the good work of The Birmingham News, The Birmingham Age-Herald and The Montgomery Advertiser, the State of Alabama was never further from supporting the Republican nominee than at present. Evidently Mr. Harris has not been in Alabama recently.

The Methodist and Baptist Churches, the W. C. T. U. and the Ku Klux element have joined forces and have organized under the name of Anti-Smith Democrats. They are waging a very bitter whispering campaign against Governor Smith, at large meetings, to which no one is admitted who will not sign a pledge to vote against Smith. The strength of this group has got all the loyal Democrats whom I know pretty badly scared. They do not share Mr. Harris's calm confidence.

There is a tremendous body of citizens of this State who oppose Smith who have adopted any new political thought since the days of Wycliff. They believe implicitly everything they are told by their clergy. The latter, except the Episcopalians and a few Presbyterians, are thundering both in the pulpit and in the street, against the Democratic nominee. All the old lies, and some remarkably new ones, about the iniquities of the Catholics are publicly uttered and readily believed. "It is against the Catholic religion to tell the truth." "If Al Smith is elected all Protestant churches will be closed by him within sixty days." "If Al Smith is elected there will be an open saloon on every corner in sixty days." "Don't vote for Al Smith unless you want your twelve-year-old son to be forced to become a Catholic." These are only samples of the many lies that are being spread and believed.

Quite the most remarkable charge leveled at Smith yet is that he blocked a bill to prevent the "unspeakable crime" in New York City. This phrase means but one thing to the ignorant Southerner, and that is the rape of a white woman by a negro. "The Alabama that sent Underwood to the Senate is fighting hard for Governor Smith, but that Alabama is not in the saddle and is not too confident of victory.

HAS TAKEN NO JOB, SAYS JOHN COOLIDGE

President's Son Also Denies Engagement to Daughter of Gov. Trumbull.

3 HOURS HERE, GOES HOME

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Sept. 5 (AP).—John Coolidge, son of the President, tonight put an end to speculation regarding his vocational intentions by emphatically denying that he had accepted a position. He also denied, with equal emphasis, rumors that he was betrothed to Florence Trumbull, daughter of the Governor of Connecticut.

John Coolidge arrived here tonight from New York to visit his grandmother, Mrs. Lemira Goodhue, who is ill at the Dickinson Hospital. He was unaccompanied and no one was at the depot to meet him. It was too late for him to see his grandmother and he was obliged to postpone the meeting until early tomorrow morning.

He went immediately to the home of his parents, where he dined with Mrs. Alice Reckahn, the Coolidge housekeeper. He then went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Hills, neighbors and intimate friends of the Coolidges, where he spent the evening.

He said that he had not definitely decided what line of work he wanted to pursue, "I really don't know just what I would like to do," he said. He intimated however, that he would make a decision very soon.

In denying reports of his engagement to Miss Trumbull, John declined to say whether or not he might become engaged in the near future. He said that he would spend several days in Northampton and then, probably the first of the week, would go to Hartford, Conn., where he would meet Miss Trumbull on her return from Europe.

Expect John Coolidge at New Haven.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 5.—John Coolidge will come here tomorrow with Governor Trumbull of Plainville, it was said tonight at Republican headquarters. It was said he would attend all the sessions of the Republican convention. It is believed here that he will go to work in the electrical equipment factory of Governor Trumbull next week.

Special to The New York Times.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 5 (AP).—John Coolidge is expected to be seen considerably in Bridgeport, for the Trumbull interests with which it is believed here young Coolidge is to be identified, have one large factory in Bridgeport as well as one in Plainville.

Governor John H. Trumbull and his brothers are among the foremost manufacturers of electrical appliances in this part of the country. The Trumbull Electrical Manufacturing Company in Plainville has Governor Trumbull as President and director, and Henry Trumbull as Treasurer and director, and the Connecticut Electric Manufacturing Company in Bridgeport has Alexander H. Trumbull as President and director, and Frank S. Trumbull as Vice President and director.

Spends Three Hours in City.

John Coolidge, son of the President, may become a railroad man. At any rate, he conferred for nearly three hours yesterday with E. G. Buckland, Vice President of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, and then, amid general silence on the conference, left for his home in Northampton, Mass.

Young Coolidge had nothing to say on anything. He himself did not make that clear; it was done for him by a Secret Service operative, Russell C. Wood, who traveled with him from the Presidential Summer home in Wisconsin.

He reached the Grand Central Terminal at 9:20 A. M. on the Wolverine of the New York Central, twenty minutes late.

Before the young man left Brule the President had made it clear that he disliked the publicity which had been accorded his son's quest for a job, now that college days were over. Apparently, with John Coolidge anxious to obey his father, those charged with receiving him at the station were just as anxious to follow out to the letter the President's wishes.

Eludes the Cameramen.

Thus, as passengers began coming up the ramp from the train, all cameramen were grouped to one side. After this had been accomplished, the youth, surrounded by railroad bluecoats, was whisked away on the side of the ramp opposite from the camera post. He was hurried to a waiting elevator leading to the railroad offices.

So eager were his guards that no outsiders should get into the car that a young woman who made the mistake of attempting to enter the elevator found her path blocked effectively and very suddenly. She laughed when told the reason.

Young Coolidge went to the office of Mr. Buckland and thence into the directors' room of the New Haven. He remained there until 1 P. M., with officials referring inquiries as to the subject of the conference to the road's public relations department and that department countering with the statement that it lacked authority to disclose anything about the meeting.

Comment is Refused.

Shortly before 1 o'clock, however, Mr. Wood came out.

"Mr. Coolidge has no statement to make," he said.

"Was the purpose of the conference a job, or did he come here just to wait for a train?"

"It could have been just to wait for a train," said Mr. Wood, with a smile.

He was again asked if the President's son was discussing a job with the railroad company.

"President Coolidge," he said, "has indicated that he does not wish any publicity over his son's future, and I am sure that you all desire to respect the President's wishes."

Directly after Mr. Wood had finished, young Coolidge, wearing a blue serge double-breasted suit, tan shoes and gray felt hat, came out. While the flashlights boomed he strode to an elevator, looking neither to the right nor to the left. He had luncheon with Mr. Buckland, and at 2 o'clock, Daylight Saving Time, boarded a train for home.

At Mr. Buckland's office no statement was forthcoming on the conference. During the talk with Mr. Buckland, the baggage of Mr. Coolidge reposed in the directors' room. It consisted of several bags and a golf kit.

60 Brilliant Tropical Birds Here for Vauclain Collection

Sixty tropical birds of brilliant plumage arrived yesterday on the Lamport and Holt liner Voltaire consigned to Samuel Vauclain, President of the Baldwin Locomotive Works. They are to form the nucleus of a collection which he is starting on his estate outside of Philadelphia and were personally selected by him during a recent visit to South America.

Mr. Vauclain went to Brazil on the Voltaire, and while at Rio de Janeiro invited W. C. Norman, captain of the vessel, and W. W. Woods, the purser, to dine ashore with him. In the restaurant his attention was attracted by the brilliant plumage of a caged cardinal bird. He decided he wanted some for his estate and the captain agreed to bring him a consignment on the next trip. Only a few of the birds died on the trip, Captain Norman said, and otherwise they made the trip without hardship. In addition to cardinals there were cockatoos of various sizes and species. Two of Mr. Vauclain's secretaries met the ornithological cargo at the pier, and after paying duty of 50 cents a bird, loaded the crates into two motor cars for transhipment to Mr. Vauclain's estate.

EUCHARISTIC RITES OPEN IN AUSTRALIA

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Sept. 5 (AP).—Scenes of splendor and fervor unparalleled here marked the opening of the Eucharistic Congress today.

A dense crowd surged around the Cathedral all day. One hundred and twenty Archbishops and Bishops and members of every grade of the Catholic priesthood, with laymen holding Papal knighthoods or decorations, walked in a stately procession from St. Mary's grounds to the main entrance of the cathedral.

An impressive wave of devotion swept the vast assemblage as the scarlet robed figure of Cardinal Bonaventura Cerretti, Papal Legate, passed. Thousands dropped to their knees or bowed their heads to received his blessing.

After the formal opening meetings of various nationalities began. Addresses were given in a variety of languages.

After the opening ceremony Father Sheehy read the papal bull for the congress. It was addressed to Cardinal Cerretti, and remarked that the presence of the Pontiff, through his Legate, at the international eucharistic congresses has not been a custom of such long standing as the importance of these gatherings would suggest.

The bull commented on the value of the congresses as helping to perfect the Christian life and to lead the people to more frequent reception of the sacrament.

The document praised Cardinal Cerretti's record when he held his former office in Sydney, alluded to the troubles which the first Catholic priests encountered in Australia and concluded with this benediction:

"May the most loving Jesus, when He is borne over the waters of your fair harbor as He was borne in the barque of St. Peter over the Sea of Tiberius, bestow His blessing on all men whom He redeemed by His precious blood."

Archbishop Kelly, in his address of welcome, emphasized the strictly religious character of the proceedings. He greeted the Papal Legate and the other Church dignitaries, whom he especially welcomed to Sydney and to the Congress.

A large party of prelates and laymen from Manila arrived today to swell the delegations from many lands, speaking a babel of tongues. Nearly 50,000 persons have come to the congress from overseas and from all parts of Australia, New Zealand and the Pacific.

The American delegation is taking a leading part in the proceedings. One of the most forceful personalities is Archbishop Edward J. Hanna of San Francisco.

He had the honor of preaching a sermon at the dedication of St. Mary's Cathedral on Sunday, and today delivered an eloquent sermon at the pontifical high mass in St. Patrick's. His words were carried by amplifiers to the huge crowd in the street who had been unable to gain admission to the edifice.

Other Americans are in great demand as preachers at the services being held in every Catholic church in the vicinity of the city.

BRITISH CHEMISTS ON TOUR.

Visitors View Waterfront Industry and Famous Skyline.

One hundred British members of the Society of Chemical Industry and their families were guests yesterday, the third day of their annual general meeting now being held here, of their American associates on an all-day water excursion. They were conducted on inspection tours of large industrial plants and enabled to study the waterfront surroundings of the metropolitan district and view the celebrated sky line from seaward for the first time, the party having come here by rail from Canada and intermediate inland cities.

Taking a special boat at the foot of Forty-second Street, the group first stopped at the Edgewater plant of the Corn Products Refining Company, and then, after passing down the bay, the Bayonne refinery of the Standard Oil Company was visited, followed by the near-by plant of Procter & Gamble. At each stop guides were assigned to conduct the visitors and to distribute souvenirs and sample products. General enthusiastic admiration for the manufacturing processes minutely witnessed was expressed.

Luncheon and dinner were both served on board the boat, and on the return trip the party skirted the brilliant shore-line of Coney Island and then had a much appreciated view of New York Harbor while proceeding to the pier.

The society will continue its sessions today with technical discussions and papers in the Chemists' Club, 51 East Forty-second Street. The annual banquet will be held tonight at Hotel Commodore.

ROBERT INGERSOLL, WATCHMAKER, DIES

Originator of Famous $1 Timepiece Succumbs After Long Illness in Denver.

HE WAS 68 YEARS OLD

His Wife a Suicide in This City in 1926—Body to Be Brought Here for Burial.

DENVER, Sept. 5 (AP).—Robert H. Ingersoll, watch manufacturer and originator of the Ingersoll dollar watch, died yesterday at a sanitarium, where he had been a patient since June 17. Announcement of the death was made today.

Mr. Ingersoll, who was 68 years old, has suffered many years from Bright's disease, which resulted in his death. Arrangements were made today for removal of the body to New York City for burial.

The control of Ingersoll's watchmaking establishment, which he established in 1892, passed out of the control of Mr. Ingersoll and his brothers, Charles H. and Arthur N. Ingersoll, less than a year ago, when the Waterbury Clock Comapny purchased the plant.

Robert Hawley Ingersoll was born at Delta, Eaton County, Mich., on Dec. 26, 1859, and received his early education in the public schools. He came to New York in 1879, and prospered in the manufacturing and mail order business. His name became famous when he originated the Ingersoll dollar watch, of which it is said that 70,000,000 have been sold.

In June, 1904, Mr. Ingersoll married Miss Edith Marie Bannister of Green Bay, Wis., who was linked with the shooting of Wallace M. Probasco of this city, and then committed suicide in her apartment at 55 Park Avenue on Dec. 19, 1926. After Mr. Probasco was exonerated in the fatal shooting, Mr. Ingersoll had the hearing before District Attorney Banton reopened in an effort to clear his wife. His failure, however, to give any new evidence later definitely closed the case.

With his brother, Charles H. Ingersoll, Mr. Ingersoll built up a tremendous watch business. In 1921 the company found itself in financial difficulties, which led to bankruptcy proceedings. The company was later taken over by the Waterbury Clock Company and Mr. Ingersoll retired.

ANDRE WEISS DEAD.

Vice President of the Court of Justice at The Hague.

PARIS, Sept. 5 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—The funeral of Andre Weiss, Vice President of the Court of International Justice at The Hague, was held today. The funeral was private. Interment was at Montmorey.

Born in 1858 in Mülhausen, Alsace, the son of a Jewish lawyer, Andre Weiss was Professor of Law at the University of Paris. He served as legal adviser of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and was President of the Institute of International Law. He was also President of the International Academy of Comparative Law at Geneva.

INVENTOR NEAR DEATH.

Devisor of Radium Paint Said to Be Dying From Its Effects.

Dr. Sabin A. von Soschocky, chemist, physician and inventor of the radium paint which is alleged to have caused the malady which probably has doomed five New Jersey women to a slow death, who has been ill at his home, 207 Amherst Street, East Orange, for several weeks, a victim of his own invention, was reported yesterday to be near death. Although a member of Dr. Soschocky's household admitted yesterday that his condition was very grave, physicians attending him refused to discuss the case.

During the hearing recently of seven suits brought against the United States Radium Corporation by former women employes of that company who claimed they were dying slowly from radium poisoning contracted while painting radium dials through continually putting paint brushes between the lips to make a fine point, Dr. von Soschocky stated that the women had a chance to recover and said that at one time he had effected a cure on himself.

HORSE THROWS SCHWEIZER.

Broker Seriously Injured Riding on His Connecticut Estate.

Special to The New York Times.

DARIEN, Conn., Sept. 5.—Raymond J. Schweizer, New York broker, was seriously injured this evening when he was thrown from his horse while riding on his estate at Middlesex Road here. Mr. Schweizer was found unconscious on a bridle path and was taken to the Stamford Hospital. His skull may be fractured. He is a member of the Ox Ridge Hunt Club and is considered a good horseman.

Mr. Schweizer is a member of the firm of Schweizer & Shea, members of the New York Stock Exchange. On Jan. 12 he was suspended from the Exchange for six months following his conviction by the Governing Committee of "conduct or proceeding inconsistent with just and equitable principles of trade."

Assemblyman F. S. Hall.

Special to The New York Times.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Frank Stewart Hall, Assemblyman from the Second Niagara District, died this afternoon while at his home on the River Road between the villages of Lewiston and Youngstown. Mr. Hall had not been well for several months. He was a candidate for renomination after having served in the Assembly for the past seven years.

$23 Received for 100 Neediest Cases.

The Hundred Neediest Cases Fund is in receipt of the following contributions: Charity Chest of the Fur Industry, $10; A Friend, $3; "In Memory of F. V. C. T., "$10." These contributions will be held for the opening of the 1928 campaign.

An Acknowledgment.

THE NEW YORK TIMES acknowledges receipt of a contribution of $1 from Elsie J. Miller for the South Pole Expedition conducted by Commander Richard E. Byrd. The money has been forwarded to the Treasurer.

France to Have New Ministry Controlling National Aviation

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—The French Cabinet Ministers, assembled this afternoon after the funeral of Maurice Bokanowski, decided officially to create a Ministry of Aviation to be separate from the Ministry of Commerce. They postponed naming the holder of this new portfolio until their next meeting on Sept. 14, when they will also nominate M. Bokanowski's successor.

Foreign Minister Briand and War Minister Painlevé were absent from today's meeting. It is confidently predicted in official circles that Premier Poincaré will propose Laurent Eynac, former Under Secretary of State as Air Minister, but who will be the next Minister of Commerce is still open to much conjecture.

'FATHER OF BRONX,' J. L. WELLS, IS DEAD

LONG A REPUBLICAN LEADER

He Was State Treasurer From 1915 to 1920 and Held Other State and City Offices.

James L. Wells, the oldest active real estate broker in the city, who served three terms as State Treasurer and has long been known as "the Father of the Bronx," because of his half century of work in developing that borough, died last evening at the age of 85 at his home, 277 Alexander Avenue, the Bronx. He is survived by a son, James L. Jr., and three grandchildren. Services will be held at 2 P. M. tomorrow in St. Ann's Church, 140th Street and St. Ann's Avenue, the Bronx.

Mr. Wells was born in the old village of West Farms, then in Westchester County but now a part of the Bronx. He was a graduate of the local public schools and of Columbia University. For more than forty years he had been in the real estate business as a broker, auctioneer and appraiser. His last important public work was performed as the official appraiser of the New York land seized in the construction of the Holland Tunnel. He had been President of the New York Real Estate Salesrooms since 1891.

Mr. Wells was one of the founders in 1888 of the Twenty-third Ward Bank and continued as a director when it became the Bronx County Trust Company. In 1890 he helped establish the Dollar Savings Bank. In 1894 he was one of the organizers of the Bronx Board of Trade, later holding its Presidency for six terms.

The early political career of Mr. Wells, in the eighties and nineties, was devoted largely to pioneering efforts for the creation of the present Borough of the Bronx. He was the only Alderman in a territory that is now represented by eight, and he had to overcome many difficulties in obtaining the help needed by his district. The Bronx was still a rural community when Mr. Wells started as a realty broker. Two of his early transactions involved the sales of the Thomas A. Vyse and the William Fox estates.

Mr. Wells was appointed by Governor Roosevelt a member of the Charter Revision Commission in 1900, and he wrote the home rule provisions of the charter. He was made a Commissioner of Taxes by Mayor Strong in 1895, and in 1902 Mayor Low appointed him President of the Department of Taxes. During his administration the city tax rate was the lowest in forty-seven years. Mr. Wells served three terms in the Assembly and a like number in the Board of Aldermen. He was State Treasurer from 1915 to 1920, receiving large majorities and winning many Democratic votes. He always ran for office as a Republican.

"LARRY" MULLIGAN DEAD.

A Former Political Lieutenant of the Sullivans.

The announcement yesterday of the burial in Calvary Cemetery, Brooklyn, of Lawrence Mulligan following his death on Saturday at his home in Philipse Manor, N. Y., reminded many who have lived in the city more than twenty-five years that it was a long time since they had heard of "Larry" Mulligan, picturesque Bowery character and political lieutenant of "Big" and "Little Tim" Sullivan. He was 53 years old. His importance in the news and in politics waned rapidly after the tragic death in 1913 of "Big Tim," who was his step-brother.

"Larry" Mulligan was the type of Irishman that makes friends easily and keeps them. He had a strong personal following on the lower east side and was of great assistance to the Sullivans. The annual "Larry" Mulligan Ball in Terrace Garden was a joyous occasion of high importance in its own world. In 1912 "Larry" tried to revive the old St. Denis Hotel but his career as a hotel manager was brief. Later he moved to Philipse Manor, where he had been in the real estate business for the last six years.

William Clifford Sr.

Special to The New York Times.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 5.—William Clifford Sr., of 860 Union Avenue, a contractor here for more than thirty years, died suddenly last night of heart disease at his Summer home at Belmar. He was 68 years old. In 1925, Mr. Clifford was a member of the Arrangements Committee for President Coolidge's inauguration.

Dr. William W. Wendover.

Funeral services for Dr. William Wirt Wendover of Warwick, N. Y., will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Howard Conklin, 29 Maple Avenue, Warwick. Dr. Wendover was born in Kinderhook, N. Y., Jan. 29, 1851. He was a graduate of Rutgers University and had been connected at one time with the Roosevelt Hospital.

Obituary Notes.

CHARLES F. HOEN, former Secretary of the Erie County Democratic Committee and former journal clerk of the State Senate, died suddenly Tuesday night of apoplexy at Buffalo, aged 49.

S. DEVENS RICE, 72, formerly for many years an employe of the New York Postoffice, died yesterday at his home in Stamford, Conn., aged 72. Two sisters survive.

MRS. MACKAY DIES OF A HEART ATTACK

Mother of Postal Telegraph Head, 85 Years Old, Succumbs After Short Illness.

FAMOUS AS A HOSTESS

Long Popular in Social Circles Abroad—Her Son Hastens Here From Europe.

Mrs. John W. Mackay, the mother of Clarence H. Mackay, President of the Postal Telegraph Company, and an interesting figure in the social life of London and the Continent during the 1890's and for some time afterward, died suddenly just before midnight Tuesday at the Mackay estate Harbor Hill, Roslyn, L. I. She was 85 years old.

Mrs. Mackay was thought to have been in good health despite her advancing years until she became slightly ill on Sunday. She was confined to her bed following her indisposition and her general condition remained the same until Tuesday evening, when she suffered a severe heart attack. Mrs. Mackay then sank rapidly. Her three grandchildren, Mrs. Kenneth O'Brien, Mrs. Irving Berlin and John W. Mackay were at her bedside when the end came. This, so far as is known, was the first visit of Mrs. Berlin to the Mackay home since her marriage to Mr. Berlin, which met with family opposition.

News of Mrs. Mackay's illness was cabled to Clarence H. Mackay in London on Sunday and Mr. Mackay immediately arranged passage on the Majestic, which sailed from Southampton yesterday. A radio message to the vessel later told Mr. Mackay of his mother's death. Funeral arrangements, at his request, will be withheld until Mr. Mackay's arrival in New York.

Just before Mrs. Mackay's death, St. Mary's Church in Roslyn was visited by some one from Harbor Hill, it was learned yesterday who asked for the services of a priest to administer the last rites of the church to Mrs. Mackay. Both priests were engaged and could not be reached immediately. The representative of the Mackay family then went to Manhasset and from St. Mary's Church there obtained the services of the Rev. Francis Coppinger, the rector, who went to Harbor Hill and administered the rites to Mrs. Mackay.

Daughter of Army Officer.

Mrs. Mackay was born in Brooklyn and received her early education in a convent. She was the daughter of Colonel Hungerford, who belonged to a family related to the British nobility and who was an officer in the Mexican and Civil Wars. When a young girl she went with her family to live in the West and was married to a Dr. Bryant at Virginia City, Nev. Dr. Bryant died a few years later and she was forced to make her own way by keeping a boarding house in the mining camps of Nevada.

Later she met and married John W. Mackay, who came to this country before the Civil War to find his fortune in the mines of Nevada and in other places in the Far West. A daughter by her first marriage, Evelyn Bryant, was adopted by Mr. Mackay and later became the wife of Prince Stigliano di Colonna.

When greater fortune came to her husband, Mrs. Mackay went to live in San Francisco and some time afterward, with her two sons, John W. Mackay and Clarence Hungerford Mackay, went to Paris. After the death in Paris of John W. Mackay Jr., who was killed while riding horseback, Clarence H. Mackay came to New York, leaving school in England. Mrs. Mackay remained abroad. Her husband died in 1902.

Popular Hostess Abroad.

One of the most interesting women in London in the early Nineties to English and Americans alike was Mrs. Mackay, who presided at many brilliant receptions in her mansion in Carlton House Terrace. At about the same period she held an enviable position in the social life of Paris and on the Riviera. No other American woman, it was said, had the place Mrs. Mackay held for thirty years at the English court, in the exclusive circles of the Faubourg St. Germain in Paris and in the coteries of royalty on the Mediterranean coast.

When she went to Paris, it is told, as a young wife of a wealthy man, accompanied by her unmarried sister, the two were widely received. They had learned French from their mother and their horsemanship in the Bois, due to their training in California and Nevada, was the envy of all who saw them.

Mrs. Mackay, with her rich, dark beauty, her intelligence, witticisms and her exquisite taste in entertaining, won herself many friends and admirers, while her loyalty to her intimate friends and her courage to face social leaders who sometimes opposed her made for her some few enemies who, nevertheless, envied and imitated her excellent manner and simplicity.

Mrs. Mackay's position brought jealousy among her rivals, who invented many stories of the uses she made of her power. One account had it that after the famous painter Meissonier had made a portrait of her she was so displeased she destroyed the painting with a poker. When the artist, according to another story, threatened to display the portrait publicly after she refused to accept it she purchased the piece and stored it away in her garret. None of the stories was confirmed, however.

Moved to London in 1891.

In 1891 the Mackay residence in Paris was sold and Mrs. Mackay went to London to live. The mansion on Carlton House Terrace became the scene of fashionable gatherings and elaborate entertainments. The Prince of Wales, afterward King Edward, was a frequent visitor at the mansion.

The house was on the site of the once famous Carlton House, where the Regent Prince of Wales, George IV, lived. The marble hall and stairway were considered among the finest examples of Italian art in England or France. Upon the walls hung Gobelin tapestries which formerly adorned the walls of the Winter Palace in Petrograd. Mrs. Mackay had purchased them from the Swedish royal family, into whose hands they had passed, for $250,000. The house contained some of the finest art objects of Europe.

The war and taxation had made the up-keep of the mansion very expensive, and Mrs. Mackay sold the property in 1920 and announced that she would return to the United States. In 1924 Mrs. Mackay, her gracious hospitality still evident at 84, entertained the Prince of Wales at Harbor Hill when the Prince visited the United States, and in June, 1927, received Colonel Lindbergh at the Long Island mansion of her son.

JUDGE S. J. PEELLE, 86, DIES IN WASHINGTON

MAYOR IN DEFENSE CALLS GRAFT PETTY

In Sharp Reply to Citizens Union Attack He Resents "Political Propaganda."

FINDS CITY "MOST MORAL"

98 Per Cent. of 116,000 Employes Come From Civil Service Lists, He Points Out.

BACKS TAYLOR AND KOHLER

Street Cleaning and Milk Evils Remedied During Their Terms and by His Aid, He Says.

Replying to charges recently made by the Citizen Union, through The Searchlight, publication of that organization, Mayor Walker last night vigorously defended his Administration against the indictment that it had failed to rout out corruption and punish maladministration in the Health and the Street Cleaning Departments.

To the charge that he still retained Commissioner Taylor at the head of the Street Cleaning Department, though the Citizens Union had branded him "an incompetent," the Mayor replied that Mr. Taylor had served faithfully for twenty-eight years in the department, rising from the post of driver to that of Commissioner solely on merit, and that not a single charge ever had been brought against him.

Similarly he defended Budget Director Charles L. Kohler, who was Secretary of the Health Department in the Hylan Administration at a time when many of the milk irregularities, subsequently brought to light by Commissioner Harris, were practiced. Of Mr. Kohler the Mayor said: "Nobody has been able to bring one scintilla of evidence against either his efficiency or his honesty."

Sees Political Intent.

The Mayor suggested that the Citizens Union had timed its attack so as to synchronize with the present political situation in the hope of aiding the Republican Party in the national campaign. Comparing graft in the two parties, Mayor Walker said:

"This criticism of New York City departments comes strangely at the season of the year when it may perhaps be good political propaganda to make New York City appear like the home of graft. That is the most unfair calumny ever directed against this city. Morally, there is no better city in the civilized world. But the ways of political manipulators are strange. There are approximately 113,000 employes of the municipality in the City of New York, within 9,000 of the number of men in the standing army of the United States. Of the 116,000 a fraction more than 98 per cent. hold their places as the result of competitive civil service examinations and, in my administration at least, the man who comes out first on a civil service list gets the appointment, irrespective of his race, creed, color or politics.

"In other words, those persons guilty of grafting in the City of New York—and it has been limited there to petty grafting—have been those who won their positions through civil service examinations. Contrast this with the record of the Republican Party, which for political reasons slanders the fair name of the City of New York. In the Republican Party, where the stakes have been not petty but colossal, the grafters have been found among Cabinet members, Governors and leaders of that party."

Praises Work of Union.

At the outset of his reply Mayor Walker said he appreciated the cooperation he had enjoyed in many ways on the part of the Citizens Union. "I value its opinion," he declared, "and hope it will continue to function. I do not expect always to agree with it. All I expect in its criticisms is that it will at all times consult the records. Few organizations in the category of the Citizens Union have been as helpful to this Administration.

"In the 1926 Gubernatorial contest," said the Mayor, "milk was again the issue. But even before that time Dr. Harris had carried on an investigation resulting in a number of convictions. I appointed Charles H. Kelby, a former Justice of the Appellate Division, Second Department, and a lifelong Republican, to conduct an investigation in 1926.

"I hope the Citizens Union or anybody else will not accuse me of being such a terribly poor politician as to pick out prominent and lifelong Republicans, of unimpeachable character, to protect Democrats. If I were out to protect Democrats guilty of irregularities in public office, I would not take that kind of a chance."

Mayor Walker strongly emphasized that this investigation he initiated was just as relentless as the inquiry into snow removal graft which he caused Joseph A. Warren, then Commissioner of Accounts, in 1926, to start, that resulted in the conviction of fifteen men and the saving to the taxpayers of millions of dollars that might have been muleted as graft.

The Mayor came to the defense of Street Cleaning Commissioner Taylor, declaring that the commissioner was scrupulously honest, had risen from driver in the department, which position he won by competitive civil service examination in 1900, to his present post.

"I never heard of stockholders in a bank losing confidence in a capable president because some clerk developed into an absconder."

In answer to the Union's criticism at not having ordered a "John Doe" inquiry into the street cleaning payroll padding, the Mayor said:

"I cannot at the request of the Citizens Union, much as I would like to, change the Constitution of the State of New York and the City Charter and substitute myself for any district attorney in any county of New York State."

It was due to his personal efforts, the Mayor said, that the street cleaning investigation, resulting in three convictions, had been initiated. Suspicious checks, submitted to a branch of the Corn Exchange Bank, were investigated by the Controller's office and then called to the attention of the Mayor.

"Controller Berry and Commissioner Taylor both came to the Mayor's office," said the Mayor, "and when the matter was explained I immediately ordered two of the men arrested. As a result of my orders, and as the result of cross-examination at Police Headquarters, also under my orders, and a subsequent confession, three convictions were obtained—Lougheed, Oswald and Stoeber."

Jersey Town Honors Boy, 11, Who Gave Jail Break Alarm

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 5.—Pasquale Ceraso, 11 years old, had a unique honor paid to him when the Princeton Borough Council halted its official business and voted an appreciation of his efforts in reporting the escape of four prisoners from the local jail on Monday. As a substantial demonstration of its gratitude, the Council ordered that a reward be given to the boy.

Young Ceraso, who lives next to the jail, saw the four Newark youths, who were prisoners, jump over the rear fence of the jail. He ran to the centre of town and notified Chief of Police Myers. As a result, police got to work and a few hours later were able to rearrest the men.

Tribute to the boy was paid by Mayor B. F. Bunn and by Police Chairman E. A. Stevens.

CONNOLLY LOSES PLEA TO DELAY HIS TRIAL

Court Holds Sewer Case Will Be as Fair Before Election as It Would Be Afterward.

The motion of former Borough President Maurice E. Connolly for a postponement until after election day of his trial in the extraordinary term of the Queens Supreme Court on an indictment charging him with conspiring to defraud the city in the $16,000,000 Queens sewer contracts, was denied yesterday by Justice Arthur S. Tompkins.

Justice Tompkins was appointed by Governor Smith to preside at the trial, in which Frederick Seely, former engineer in the Connolly administration, will be a joint defendant. The defendants were ordered to appear for trial on the date originally set, Sept. 24.

Mr. Connolly had sought postponement on the ground that he could not obtain a fair trial at this time because of charges made against him in "inflammatory speeches" and in literature issued by friends of three of the candidates that are opposing Borough President Bernard M. Patten, Mr. Connolly's successor, in the Democratic Borough Presidential primaries, which are to be held on Sept. 18.

The decision, made public by Justice Tompkins in his home in Nyack, was accompanied by an opinion, which says:

"There is no good reason why the proceedings of this court should be stayed or trial of the defendants delayed because of the primary contest and election campaign in Queens, in which neither defendant is a candidate. The defendant will be tried by jurors whose fitness and impartiality must be demonstrated before they are selected and impaneled.

"No juryman will be accepted who will not declare on oath that he can render an impartial verdict, according to the evidence, regardless of anything he may have heard or seen outside the courtroom. The Court will thoroughly instruct the jurors as to their duty and the rights of the defendants. Besides, I do not see how the defendants will be in any better position with respect to influence of elections propaganda immediately after the election than they are or will be on Sept. 24."

SIX HURT IN COLLISION OF TROLLEYS ON BRIDGE

Workman Nearly Hurled Into East River in Smash on Williamsburg Span.

Six persons were slightly injured and one of them narrowly escaped being hurled into the East River when an eastbound trolley crashed into the rear of another which had stopped in the middle of the Williamsburg Bridge early yesterday afternoon.

Only two were injured sufficiently to require medical attention. They were John Lamb, 38 years old, of 490 West Forty-seventh Street, a workman employed by the New York Railways Company, who was treated for abrasions of both knees and the left shoulder, and Benjamin Javer, 23, of 275 Hooper Street, Brooklyn, treated for abrasion of the scalp. After being attended by Dr. Block of Gouverneur Hospital both went home.

The others, who were cut by pieces of flying glass, were Daniel Nolan of 11 Corlears Street, motorman of one car; Anna Baum, 42, of 349 Rodney Street, Brooklyn; Richard Weiss, 13, of 321 Division Avenue, Brooklyn, and William Walsh, 8, who gave his address as 157th Street and 153d Avenue, South Jamaica.

About 1:25 P. M. car No. 790, operated by William Kamanko, almost in the middle of the span over the river, stopped for Lamb to get off. Car No. 807 was almost directly behind, and Motorman Nolan was unable to apply the brakes to his car in time.

The impact threw Lamb onto the narrow roadway, and he clung to girders to prevent falling into the river. Both the rear of the first car and the front of the second were badly smashed. Trolley traffic on the bridge was held up for about twenty minutes. The accident did not interfere with vehicular traffic.

Coast Guard Finds Knott's Body.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 5 (AP).—Coast Guardsmen today had recovered the body of Alexander MacCallum Knott, former member of the British Parliament, who with six other persons, lost his life when a Columbia Airways monoplane plunged into Puget Sound Aug. 25. The body, the third found, was located as guardsmen were carefully holding what was believed to be the submerged wreck of the plane near Port Townsend, Wash. The object has been towed to shallow water pending the arrival of a salvage tug and diver.

4,420,920-SHARE DAY IN GROPING MARKET

SOME INDIVIDUAL GAINS

Trend of Values Uncertain as the "Public" Rushes Into Market, Choking Tardy Tickers.

The stock market rolled vigorously, and at times boisterously, along on its course yesterday and, like the pleasure seeker on a Coney Island merry-go-round, it had a lot of fun, but got nowhere. It was a day in which the turn-over of shares totaled 4,420,920, in which 693 separate issues were dealt in, and the tickers limped along from ten to thirty minutes behind.

Yet, after the smoke from the battle of dollars had cleared, to change the metaphor, and the débris had been swept away, it was found that the average of stocks—that is, fifty representative issues—had declined 20 cents, the industrial shares, as measured by these same averages, being up 7 cents and the railroad shares down 48 cents.

At any rate, it was a herculean effort for such a negative result, but the effort, useless and negative as it was, provided Wall Street with more excitement, from the market standpoint, than the day of painful memory on June 12, when everybody tried to sell at once and the market collapsed with a roar.

There was electric tension at the very opening. The total of Stock Exchange brokers' loans for the month of August had been announced late the previous afternoon, and they disclosed the unprecedented advance of $214,000,000 in a single month's period. First prices were fractionally lower, but the market was active from the start. A few favorites were taken in hand and bid up, and this appeared to give the market a measure of confidence. Finally in the late morning a forlorn hope attack was made by floor brokers on General Motors, and when the battle-scarred leader withstood this attack and then began to climb buoyantly up the ladder of fluctuations most other stocks started forward.

New Leaders Sought.

It was a day, however, in which new leaders were sought among the public utilities, the amusement stocks, the food issues and the oils. Strange quotations, some of which have not appeared on the tape for a week or more, came out, totaling several thousand shares. But the gains were narrowed by profit taking and at the close the minus signs were about equally divided in the Exchange table with those of plus quality. The b gest gain of the day was 9 points in Radio, and while Warner Brothers Pictures, the newest high-powered blue chip to make its bow and win speculative favoritism, was active, it could gain but 2½ points on the day.

The day's best advances are shown in the following table:

Broad Interest in Market.

It was from the point of the tremendous turnover and the confusion which prevailed in trading, however, that the greatest interest in the market developed, and the conclusive proof furnished by the trading, as well as the trading of the previous day, that the "public," meaning every one who dabbles in stocks, whether in a few shares or thousands, is back in the market and bullish.

The wire houses, with their tentacles of telegraph wires spread to every corner of the country, were literally swamped with business. The pool operators, big individual traders and many who have had faith in the market during the dull days of July and August were liberal sellers on balance. The tickers had a miserable day of it. By 10:15 they were behind the market and never did catch it all day, with the greatest lag thirty minutes exactly at noon. It was 3:39 o'clock before the last record of a purchase and sale was tapped out.

Under such conditions there was a great deal of confusion among traders. It seemed to whet their appetite for more stocks, however, and every brokerage house, uptown and downtown, was crowded to the doors with men—and a few women—trying to follow the dancing quotations. Possibly the money situation gave many of them hopes. Funds renewed at 7½ per cent. and the rate did not change all day, despite the withdrawal of $15,000,000 by bankers.

Today's announcement of the size of broker's loans, to be made by the Federal Reserve Board after the market's close, will be watched with great interest. Some guesses of the expansion range upward to $100,000,000, because it appears evident that some of the load brokers and pools have been carrying on their shoulders for a month or so has at last been shifted to the shoulders of the public.

The fact that the market has suddenly wheeled about and started churning rapidly with such vigor and force is counted in the financial district as one of the year's seven wonders, especially at a time when credit demands from industry and agriculture are so heavy. In the last month, however, the public—for some unexplainable reason—started back into the market, slowly at first and then in pell-mell fashion.

Some people are inclined to call it a "Hoover market" or a "Smith market," according to their politics; a few attribute it to the world peace pact effected by Secretary of State Kellogg; a few to the continuance of corporate prosperity. For whatever reason, and probably all of these are factors, along with dozens of others, the urge to gamble in stocks seems once more to have developed throughout the country, and the 'public' is in the saddle, riding with whip and spur.

C. T. Hill to Return to Yale.

DEL MONTE, Cal., Sept. 5 (AP).—Cortland T. Hill, 22 year old son of Louis W. Hill, Chairman of the Great Northern Railway, will return to Yale for the Fall semester instead of joining the Northwest Mounted Police as was reported a few days ago. The statement was issued at the Pebble Beach home here of the Hill family to put an end to reports that young Hill intended to take out British citizenship papers in order to serve with the organization.

Western Roadway of Grand Central Building To Be Opened for Traffic by Walker Today

The official opening of the newly built western elevated roadway around Grand Central Building will be celebrated today with ceremonies which will be attended by Mayor Walker, Borough President Miller, President P. E. Crowley of the New York Central lines, and other railroad and civic officials.

Following the opening ceremonies, which will be held at 11:15 o'clock, Mayor Walker will address the midtown business men at a luncheon to be held by the Fifth Avenue Association at the Hotel Commodore. Other speakers at the luncheon will include President Crowley and Borough President Miller who, in recognition of his efforts in securing the new roadway for the city, will be the guest of honor.

The opening of the roadway to traffic marks another step in a project which has been the subject of negotiations by the city and railroad officials for many years and which began with the application by the Fifth Avenue Association for the Fortieth Street viaduct in 1911. This first step in the Grand Central-Park Avenue improvement plan was completed in 1919 and was the beginning of a series of traffic improvements which included the widening of Park Avenue between Forty-sixth and Fifty-seventh Streets, the opening of Dewey Place and the construction of the eastern roadway.

The completion of the western roadway, started in April and opened to traffic today, marks next to the last chapter in the plan. The final step, the widening of Park Avenue between Fifty-seventh and Seventy-second Streets, has already been approved and work is to start immediately.

EMPLOYMENT AGENT SLAIN IN HIS OFFICE

OUTSIDE DIN DROWNS SHOT

Murder Is Not Discovered Till Client Comes In—Clue Sought in Record Book.

James Lappin, 38 years old, proprietor of an employment agency at 861 Sixth Avenue, was shot and killed about 8 o'clock yesterday morning as he sat in a chair in his office on the second floor of the building gazing out of the window at the crowds in the street. The motive for the murder, according to the police, was robbery.

Detectives of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, who came to Lappin's office shortly after the body was found, said his assailant sneaked up behind him and shot him through the back of the head. After firing the shot, Lappin's pockets were turned inside out, all valuables having been taken by the murderer, who then walked down the stairs into the street, where he mingled with those passing by.

Because of the frequent passing of elevated trains in front of the building, those on the upper and lower floors did not hear the shot. None knew that a murder had been committed until Frank Nihan of the Mills Hotel, Thirty-sixth Street and Seventh Avenue, entered Lappin's office shortly after 8 o'clock to seek a job.

Nihan ran into the adjoining office and told Anna Zolke of 338 East 101st Street that Lappin had been killed. The young woman notified the West Forty-seventh Street station. Detectives James Leach, John Coleman and Thomas Walsh found Lappin slumped down in the chair.

Tenants in the building told the detectives it was Lappin's custom to arrive daily shortly before 8 in the morning. Lappin was said to have had from $50 to $175 in his possession before he was slain, as he was to have paid his office rent yesterday.

Detectives took one of Lappin's record books to the station house. There was a blood-stained entry giving the name and address of a man who applied for a job, supposedly a few minutes before Lappin was killed. The detectives want to question this person.

Lappin was married and lived at 2,048 Powell Avenue, the Bronx. The widow, Mrs. Adelaide Lappin, and her daughter, Phyllis, 20 years old, became hysterical when they came to the Sixth Avenue address, where they identified the body.

SOFIA CABINET RESIGNS ON MACEDONIAN ISSUE

Bulgarian Foreign Minister, Who Opposed Revolutionists, Overthrows Government.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Sept. 5.—In a political duel between the Bulgarian Foreign Minister, M. Buroff, and the War Minister, General Wolkoff, the former today scored the more effective thrust. As a result Premier Liapcheff, in the words of the official communiqué, visited the palace and informed the King that the Cabinet had decided to resign.

Thus at the very moment that the League Council, according to reports from Geneva, gave its blessing, so to speak, to Bulgaria's efforts to obtain a foreign loan, the country finds itself without a responsible Government to conduct negotiations for the loan.

M. Buroff is Francophile and recently attempted to carry out Franco-British demands for dissolution of the Macedonian revolutionary oragnization, the "Imro." M. Buroff held that this must be done if Bulgaria were ever to get the much-needed loan.

General Wolkoff, who meanwhile had won the support of army officers as well as the Macedonians, blocked the way. There being no other way open, two of M. Buroff's colleagues in the Cabinet, Messrs. Boboschewski and Christoff, resigned, their resignations being presented to Premier Liapcheff yesterday.

This put Premier Liapcheff in a minority in Parliament.

FIND SLAIN GUNMAN WAS AN EX-CONVICT

Police Identify Man Shot Down by Patrolman in 10th Av. by His Fingerprints.

TWO WOMEN ARE ARRESTED

Companions in Hold-Up and Auto Flight Held as Accessories in Pistol Battle.

The gunman who was shot and killed shortly after midnight yesterday near a garage at West Thirty-fourth Street and Tenth Avenue by Patrolman James A. Cronin of the West Forty-seventh Street Station after a chase from Forty-fifth Street and Ninth Avenue, as told in a late edition of THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday, was identified through fingerprints as Frank Gallagher, 30 years old, of 502 West Fifty-second Street, an ex-convict with a record of six arrests and three convictions. The police are seeking his companion, said to be William Duffy of 34-20 Sixty-third Street, Woodside, Queens.

According to the detectives of the West Thirtieth Street Station, Gallagher, another man and two women companions shortly before midnight drove up in an automobile to 254 West Fifty-fifth Street, where Albine Stewart of 25-43 Fifty-fourth Street, Sunnyside, Queens, has a café, and held up the place. While Gallagher pulled out a gun, and ordered "hands up," his companion, it was said, rifled the cash register and took $72 from the till. There were eleven diners in the café.

Samuel Stein, 30 years old, of 127 Harrison Avenue, a taxicab chauffeur, heard a shot as Gallagher and his companions drove away from the café, and notified Patrolman Cronin, who jumped on Stein's taxicab and gave chase. In the exchange of shots Gallagher was killed and Stein was wounded. The two women were taken in custody, but Gallagher's companion escaped.

From fingerprints the dead gunman was identified as Frank Gallagher, alias John McGill, alias William Robinson. Gallagher was first arrested in 1922, when he was sentenced to Elmira Reformatory on a grand larceny charge. In 1924 he was arrested twice—on a robbery charge and for assault and robbery. Both charges were dismissed, but in 1925 he was arrested and convicted of felonious assault and sentenced to three and a half years in Sing Sing. He was paroled in 1927 and was again arrested on a grand larceny charge in January, 1928, and was returned to Sing Sing for violation of parole.

The women described themselves as Mrs. Edna Klenne, 25 years old, of the Hotel St. Albans, 365 West Sixty-eighth Street, and Mrs. Helen Termine, 20 years old, of 147 St. Ann's Avenue, the Bronx. They were taken to the District Attorney's office, where they were questioned by Assistant District Attorney George N. Brothers, who said the two would be held as accessories in the shooting at Patrolman Cronin. The women told Mr. Brothers they did not know Gallagher or his companion, having been invited for an automobile ride by one of the men, whom they met last week.

$100,000 FIRE SWEEPS THE HOTEL MONTEREY

BLUE POINT, L. I., Sept. 5.—Fire at 2 A. M. today routed twenty-five guests from their beds in the Hotel Monterey and virtually destroyed the four-story frame building. The blaze burned until 10 A. M. when it was finally brought under control by firemen. The damage partly covered by insurance, is estimated at $100,000. The jewels of several guests are believed to have been destroyed, although many valuables were saved.

A cook discovered the fire and gave the alarm to William Lambert, night clerk, who summoned the Blue Point volunteers. Slow telephone service, however, delayed the firemen, and the kitchen wing was a furnace when they arrived. Firemen also were called from Bayport, Sayville, West Sayville and Patchogue.

3 INJURED IN CRASH ON 3D AV. ELEVATED

HEDLEY IS REPRIMANDED

Transit Commission Scores Him for Tardy Reports—Warped Rail Found on B. M. T.

Rear-end collision of two empty Third Avenue elevated trains of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company north of the Grand Street station slightly injured three persons yesterday and caused material traffic delay. A second, and possibly far more serious, accident was averted by the discovery of a warped rail on the northbound tracks of the B. M. T. This disrupted northbound traffic for an hour, during which the Montague Street tube was closed to Manhattan-bound trains, which were routed over the Manhattan Bridge.

Meanwhile Frank Hedley, President and General Manager of the Interborough, which has had four accidents within the last twelve days; George F. Keegan, his assistant, and Arthur Peacock of counsel for the company appeared before the Transit Commission and were severely reprimanded for failure to report promptly to the commission the details of the recent Times Square and Queensboro Tunnel subway accidents, the first of which resulted in seventeen deaths and injuries to many and the second in 100 or more persons being overcome by smoke.

The Interborough's fourth recent accident occurred shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday morning when an empty, northbound Third Avenue elevated train driven by Motorman Edward Snyder, 52 years old, of 1,465 Mayflower Avenue, the Bronx, crashed into another empty, northbound train driven by Motorman James Sullivan, 52, of 154 West 101st Street. Sullivan had stopped his train just north of the Grand Street station to change his lights, he said. The first coach of Snyder's train telescoped six feet into the rear coach of the train ahead, derailing it and tearing up ties for a distance of fifteen feet or more.

Three Trainmen Hurt.

Sullivan received a deep gash on the left side of his forehead, Snyder was severely cut and bruised and George Marden, conductor of the second train had several teeth knocked out and was bruised about the face and body. All went home after receiving first aid treatment.

The trains had brought loads of persons down town as expresses and had started back north to make another express trip to City Hall. Sullivan's train was bound for Webster Avenue and Snyder's for White Plains Avenue and 241st Street. When the first coach of Sullivan's train reached Rivington Street, he stopped to change his lights so that switchmen would know he was driving an empty train on a non-stop run north. He had left his cab and climbed up to change the lights when Snyder's train, using additional power for a slight grade, crashed into the stationary train before Snyder, according to his statement, had time to apply the emergency brakes.

Sullivan was thrown to the platform of his car, his head striking the floor. Snyder was showered with broken glass and shaken and bruised by the impact. Marden, who was seated in the second coach of the moving train, was thrown to the floor.

Sullivan explained that, although it was customary to change the lights at the City Hall station, motor men did not always get a chance to do so. Snyder, although declaring he was still too dazed and shaken to recall clearly what had happened, said he had never heard of a motorman stopping to change his lights while making a run.

In Delancey Street just under the telescoped coach, Patrolman Stephen Donnelly and Joseph Sevec of Traffic A had to jump from under the falling glass and débris. With Patrolman Weiss of the Elizabeth Street Station they rushed to the Grand Street Station after notifying the Police Emergency Squad. There they aided in getting the injured members of the train crews to the platform where they were attended by Dr. Block of Gouverneur Hospital.

Traffic in the street under the elevated structure was tied up for nearly twenty minutes, including the surface cars of the Third Avenues lines. Northbound traffic on the Third Avenue elevated was disrupted for about two hours.

Northbound local trains were sent up the express tracks to Thirty-second Street, thus being forced to pass by the Fourteenth, Eighteenth and Twenty-eighth Street stations without stopping. At Thirty-second Street they were switched onto the local northbound tracks. Southbound express trains were switched to the local tracks at Ninety-eighth Street but stopped only at Forty-second Street. Passengers were discharged at Thirty-fourth Street and the trains sent back north at Thirty-second Street.

Shuttle Service to City Hall.

Southbound passengers waited for Third Avenue locals or shuttled to the Second Avenue elevated. Southbound Third Avenue locals for City Hall were run to Franklin Square, then back to Chatham Square from where a shuttle service to City Hall was maintained. Platforms all along the line became greatly congested because of the disruption of the service. The northbound local line resumed traffic normally at 10:10 A. M., according to an announcement from the Interborough offices.

The warped rail on the northbound tracks of the B. M. T. about fifty feet south of the Canal Street Station was discovered at 10:20 A. M. by an equipment inspector and his crew. It was said that the rail would almost certainly have split during the rush hour and a very serious accident would probably have occurred.

Southbound traffic was not affected. Trains caught between DeKalb Avenue and Canal Street on the northbound tracks let their passengers out at the nearest stations and were taken around the warped rail on extra tracks used ordinarily for parking trains during non-rush hour periods and at night.

During the hour's disruption of traffic northbound trains were halted south of Canal Street and southbound trains which ordinarily run to Whitehall Street were run to DeKalb Avenue and from there sent back over the Manhattan Bridge, the northbound tracks of the Montague Street tube having been closed to trains. A great deal of congestion occurred in a number of stations before the ticket agents were notified of the trouble.

Hedley on The Carpet.

Mr. Hedley, his assistant and attorney, who were reprimanded by the Transit Commission yesterday, had been previously criticized by the Commission for lack of "good railroad operation." They appeared to take the matter good-naturedly. Mr. Hedley was said to have admitted to the Commission that it should have been notified more promptly.

The Interborough officials appeared at the regular weekly meeting of the Commission and went over, with Col. William C. Lancaster, Chief Engineer of the Commission, the report of the Commission's Emergency Department on the company's laxity in reporting details of the Times Square and Queensboro Tunnel accidents. It was pointed out that in the Queensboro Tunnel case the first report, twenty minutes after the accident, read: "Power off, details later." The Commission knew nothing of the details of the trouble for two hours after the accident. The officials of the Interborough were told pointedly to see that reports of accidents are submitted to the Commission promptly hereafter.

It was said that the Interborough's slowness in reporting accident details was contrasted with the report of the B. M. T. on the Canal Street defective rail. Full details with respect to the discovery of the rail and what followed were in the hands of the commission twenty minutes after the equipment inspector found the defect, it was declared. Neither Mr. Hedley nor his associates would discuss their talk with the commission. It was understood that Colonel Lancaster made suggestions to them for more careful operation of the entire system in future.

I. R. T. Writes Employes.

Mr. Hedley made public yesterday the following letter, sent by him to all employes of the Interborough:

"The recent series of unfortunate occurrences on our lines prompts me to address this note to each of you directly, to urge that you practice even more faithfully the 'eternal vigilance' which has always been the watchword on the Interborough System.

"Our company has been proud of its record as the safest railroad in the world. The newspapers of the city have called attention to this record frequently, and we all must do everything to maintain that record and to assure the public that it will be given the safest transportation service that human ingenuity can devise. A strict observance of each of the operating regulations contained in the book of rules of this company, with which you have been provided, is of first importance in maintaining safe transportation.

"I have again directed all supervisory forces to continue to maintain the equipment to the highest degree of safety and to keep the strictest check to see that each of these rules is obeyed at all times and that no infraction of the rules, however trivial it may seem, may be overlooked.

"I feel that I can count on your full cooperation, which is absolutely necessary in order that we may continue to operate the safest transportation service in the world."

Will Rogers Says Campaign Has Passed Acceptance Stage

To the Editor of The New York Times:

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 5.—Well, it looks like everybody has accepted that is going to accept. So now they can settle down to see what chance they have of receiving what they have already accepted.

Being associated with national calamities more or less for years, you would think that Hoover belonged on the Democratic ticket, wouldn't you?

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

SEES WRECK BLAME IN WORKING CONDITIONS

J. P. Ryan Says Accidents Would Not Have Occurred if Men Were Not Overworked.

Declaring that the recent subway accidents would not have occurred if the Interborough employes were not forced to work excessive hours under "almost inhuman" working conditions, Joseph P. Ryan, President of the Central Trades and Labor Council, which has a membership of 800,000 in New York, demanded yesterday that subway employes should have the right to organize a labor union which will obtain for them "the human working conditions that will give New York a better subway service and will eliminate the hazard of accidents."

"The cause of the series of accidents, according to investigators, seems to be the failure of man power," he told a gathering of business men at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club at the Hotel McAlpin. "How can the subway workers be expected to be mentally and physically on their toes with the long hours and the low wages with which they must contend? Give them better hours and better wages and I feel sure that the subway service will improve and the papers will not be so full of the stories of subway wrecks and accidents.

"President Hedley, Quackenbush and other officials of the Interborough agreed with Mayor Walker two years ago that the workers should have the right to join a union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor if they chose. But when the labor movement attempted organization, the Interborough broke its promise, secured an injunction and forced the men to adhere to the company union and the yellow dog contracts."

A flood of Soviet gold to win the American working man over to Communism is pouring into this country, with at least $200,000 of it in New York City, the speaker said.

The abuse of the injunction is one of the most important problems facing the American labor movement, he continued. He said that he expected the abuse to be eliminated in this State as a result of the strong fight which New York unions are making against it.

When asked following his address what action the Central Trades and Labor Council would take as a result of the warm endorsement of Governor Smith last week by the New York Federation of Labor, Mr. Ryan said the question will be discussed at an executive meeting of that group on Sept. 20. He indicated that the New York City organization would support Governor Smith in every way possible but said he was not in a position to make a public announcement until the meeting.

CONNOLLY EXAMINED IN DEATH OF D'OLIER

SUICIDE NOW INDICATED

Newcombe Continues Murder Inquiry, but Fails to Find More Evidence of Crime.

PISTOL EXPERT REPORTS

Says Examination of the Fatal Bullet Shows It Came From Gun Found on Body.

Although District Attorney Newcombe continued his investigation yesterday on the theory that William L. D'Olier, sanitation engineer, was murdered last Sunday morning, there were indications that the man had shot himself beside the rail surrounding Mount Elon Cemetery in Maspeth, Queens. The prosecutor examined seven witnesses yesterday, including Maurice E. Connolly, formerly President of Queens, in the hope of developing some tangible lead which would reveal whether the case was one of murder or suicide, but he admitted when he was leaving his office last evening that none of these witnesses had thrown any light on the case and that he was just as mystified about it as he had been from the start.

One development which supported the theory of suicide, although the prosecutor was unwilling to accept it as final, was the report of Sergeant Harry Butts, ballistics expert for the Police Department, that the .32-calibre, hammerless pistol found lightly clutched in the right hand of the dead man was the weapon which discharged the bullet through the right temple. This report was based on a microscopical examination of the bullet produced by Chief Medical Examiner Charles Norris in his autopsy last Monday.

A second development was the evidence discovered by detectives that D'Olier had met his death at that spot where he was found. The wound had bled profusely on the ground.

Connolly Calls on Newcombe.

Mr. Connolly called on the prosecutor at Mr. Newcombe's request and was closeted with him for more than two hours. Mr. Newcombe refused later to discuss the visit, except to say that, while he had questioned him about D'Olier, the former Borough President had not told him anything which would clear up the mystery.

Mr. Connolly, on the other hand, freely told of the statement he made to the prosecutor. He said that it was similar in every respect to that which he had made the day before, in which he told of his brief acquaintance with D'Olier. This was to the effect that he had met D'Olier about ten weeks before the tragedy through a client, Robert E. Moore, an electrical contractor, whom D'Olier had sought to interest in the financing of a road-building contract in Kentucky.

The former Borough President two weeks before had advised Mr. Moore against entering the project, saying that a clause in the contract giving D'Olier the work in perpetuity was illegal. Mr. Moore arranged to have D'Olier call in connection with the matter, and at this visit Mr. Connolly repeated his advice to Mr. Moore.

D'Olier, Mr. Connolly added, disagreed with his view, and to satisfy both men, he said, he sent them to some banks, where Mr. Connolly's opinion was upheld, and the loans, which would have amounted to about $1,600,000 a month, were refused.

Mr. Connolly said that that was the last he saw of D'Olier. He had heard from Mr. Moore, however, that the engineer had gone to Kentucky, but was not aware that he had returned to this city until he read last Monday of his death.

Disputes Connolly Statement.

Walter C. Lowe, a taxicab chauffeur of 242 Fourth Avenue, Astoria, told the prosecutor, however, that he felt certain he saw Mr. Connolly in conversation with D'Olier outside Mr. Connolly's office in Long Island City on Aug. 17 and 27, or since the former President said he had seen the engineer. He said on each occasion he drove D'Olier to the Pennsylvania Club at 26 East Fiftieth Street.

Mr. Connolly said that Lowe probably mistook one of his lawyers in his coming trial, John Wilson Brown, for D'Olier. He added that D'Olier bore a strong resemblance to Mr. Brown, who was stopping at the Fiftieth Street address. Mr. Brown will call on the prosecutor today and Lowe promised to be present then.

One of the others questioned by Mr. Newcombe was Frederick Seely, formerly an engineer under Mr. Connolly in the Queens Borough Administration, who is under indictment with his former chief on a charge of conspiring to defraud the city, an outcome of the Queens Extraordinary Grand Jury's investigation into the so-called $16,000,000 sewer scandal.

Mr. Seely told the prosecutor that he had known D'Olier for several years, but had not seen him since the early part of last June and was not in position to furnish any information which might aid the investigation.

Three other witnesses were Joseph Ryan, a bonding agent and a brother-in-law of Mr. Connolly, and Clair D. Schlemmer and James Richardson, President and Vice President respectively of the Awixa Corporation, from which D'Olier, on behalf of the Sanitation Corporation, of which he was President, obtained a sub-contract on a Jamaica sewer. D'Olier had been questioned by Emory R. Buckner, Special Deputy Attorney General in charge of the Grand Jury investigation, and was expected to be an important witness in connection with the contract before the Grand Jury. Mr. Newcombe said that none of the three men gave information which would aid him.

FEW PUPILS ENROLL.

Only 15% of Expected Entrants at Some Schools on First Day.

Few pupils were enrolled in the city's 900 schools yesterday, the first registration day. In some schools only about 15 per cent. of the expected registration of new entrants showed up.

School officials expect an increase of some 20,000 students in the total registration. Only children who are to enter the kindergarten or 1A grade are registered, properly speaking, the bulk of the school population being automatically carried on the books of the schools from term to term as pupils are promoted. Thus, the great majority of the school children will not appear at the respective schools until Monday, official opening day. Several thousand pupils from out of town, whose families have just moved to the city, are expected to swell registration figures.

DECORATES PARIS NURSE.

German Ambassador Honors Girl Who Gave Blood for Patient.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—Herr von Hoesch, the German Ambassador to France, in the course of a simple ceremony at the German Embassy this morning, decorated Mlle. Suzanne Simonnet, French nurse, with the Medal of Honor of the German Red Cross, as a token of the appreciation of the German Republic of the French girl's heroic effort to save the life of a German citizen who was recently taken seriously ill here.

On two occasions Mlle. Simonnet gave freely of her blood when the attending physicians gave the opinion that transfusions might save the patient's life. The name of the German is withheld, but it is understood that Mlle. Simonnet's courageous acts proved successful.

MRS. AKELEY TO HELP IN CONGO PARK REPORT

Will Sail for Brussels With Data Gathered in Africa on Husband's Last Trip.

In response to a request made by M. Jaspar, Prime Minister of Belgium, at the close of her recent African expedition, Mrs. Mary L. Jobe Akeley, widow of the African explorer, Carl Akeley, will sail for Brussels to collaborate with Dr. Jean M. Derscheid of the Congo Museum of Tervueren in the preparation of a final report of the Akeley-Derscheid mission to the Parc National Albert in the Belgian Congo.

The main object of Akeley's last Belgian Congo expedition was to secure for the American Museum of Natural History a painted background and plant accessories for the gorilla group of the African Hall. At Mr. Akeley's instance, however, Dr. Derscheid accompanied the party to cooperate with Mr. and Mrs. Akeley in preparing for the Belgian Government a complete survey of the Parc, which was nationalized by King Albert on March 2, 1925. King Albert also wished to have Mr. Akeley's expert opinion in regard to ways and means of preserving the big primates, particularly the gorillas.

Mrs. Akeley has in her possession a great deal of the data required by the Belgian authorities. So that the survey as made by the Akeley expedition may be as comprehensive and detailed as possible, she and the Belgian zoologist will now prepare the final draft for its presentation to the Colonial Office. Mrs. Akeley will sail for Havre on Sept. 7 on the Ile de France.

COMDR. BYRD IS BEST MAN.

Takes Part in Wedding of C. J. V. Murphy and Miss Walden in Rye.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 5. —Commander Richard E. Byrd was best man this afternoon at the marriage of Miss Jane Brevort Walden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald P. Walden of Rye, to Charles J. V. Murphy of The New York World staff, in Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, Rye.

Although busy with preparations for his South Polar expedition Commander Byrd found time to hasten to Rye to serve as best man for Mr. Murphy, who has compiled a biography of the naval officer.

Miss Rosamond Walden, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Townsend Henshaw, pastor of Christ Church. Miss Walden comes of an old Westchester family.

Son Born to Mrs. Bellinger.

A son was born yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Coudert Bellinger of 114 East Fortieth Street at the Lying In Hospital. Mrs. Bellinger is the former Miss Lucille La Varre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. La Varre of Washington, D. C. The child is a great-grandson of the late Frederic R. Coudert, one of the founders of the law firm of Coudert Brothers.

ENGINEER DEMANDS COMMUTER TUBES

F. L. Stuart Urges Tunnels on East and West Sides for Railroad Traffic.

INDEPENDENT OF SUBWAYS

Brooklyn-New Jersey Connection at Battery Also Suggested to Relieve Congestion.

A proposal to solve the problem of suburban transit by the construction of deep "tunnel terminals" in the east and west sides of Manhattan, to be connected with the railroads at Fifty-seventh Street, and tunnels to be built under the rivers at the Battery, was made last night by Francis Lee Stuart at a meeting of the American Society of Civil Engineers at 33 West Thirty-ninth Street. Mr. Stuart was formerly chief engineer for the Baltimore & Ohio and the Erie Railroads.

Mr. Stuart's plan calls for the construction of two parallel four-track tunnels from Fifty-seventh Street to the tip of Manhattan Island with several stopping places between. Trains coming in from Long Island would use the Queensboro Bridge to come into one of the tunnels and travel downtown. Similarly North Jersey commuters would reach the tunnels by way of a West Fifty-seventh Street bridge.

River Tunnels at South End.

At the south end of the "tunnel terminals" tunnels under the East and Hudson Rivers would be built to enable South Jersey and Long Island-Brooklyn trains to travel into Manhattan Island to points south of Fifty-seventh Street.

In addition to enabling commuters to travel to various points of Manhattan without transferring to the already overcrowded subways and elevated lines, Mr. Stuart said, his plan would have the advantage of making it possible for passengers in any of the "four corners" of the metropolitan area to travel to any other without changing conveyances or stopping in Manhattan. This would relieve congestion in Manhattan and save time between Newark and Brooklyn and between Westchester and New Jersey.

The central principle in Mr. Stuart's plan is that the new system, in the construction and operation of which the various railroads, the State and the city officials would cooperate, would be entirely independent of the interborough transportation system.

Mr. Stuart estimated that the proposed system would cost from $1,250,000,000 to $1,500,000,000 and would add 10 to 15 cents to the cost of each commuting trip. Half of this additional charge, he said, is already paid by the person who transfers from train to subway, elevated or surface car. When completed, the system would be carrying 700,000,000 passengers a year, he asserted.

Operating Company Suggested.

"As a practical method of inaugurating such a plan," Mr. Stuart suggested, "an operating company should be formed by all the railroads, which company would lease, for passenger purposes only, existing rights of way of such suburban railroads as may be needed. It would operate through the tunnel terminal routes on a fare which would be sufficient to pay operating costs, lease rentals, taxes, interest, amortization, &c., on the entire cost of the system."

Mr. Stuart said he was opposed to further extensions of the subway system into the suburbs "on account of their inadequacy and the discomfort for long riders."

The plan was well received by the several hundred engineers present at the meeting. H. M. Lewis, executive engineer of the regional plan of New York and its environs, said that Mr. Stuart's system "covered the requirements of the suburban situation" and declared the rail facilities into Manhattan were inadequate. Gustav Lindenthal also commented favorably on the plan and said the suggestion to keep it separate from the subway system would result in economy and rapidity of transportation. Colonel Lincoln Bush, President of the society, presided.

SAYS LACK OF FUNDS HAMPERS DRUG LAW

Todarelli in Article in The Panel Urges Increased Appropriation for Narcotic Bureau.

POINTS TO JERGE MURDER

Assistant United States Attorney Tells of Difficulty Due to Expense in Getting Evidence.

The evils growing out of the use of habit-forming drugs, the lack of appropriations for the proper enforcement of the law against distribution of the drugs, and the difficulties of obtaining evidence against violators of the law are discussed in an article written by Assistant United States Attorney Thomas J. Todarelli for the September issue of The Panel, the publication of the New York County Grand Jurors' Association. The article was suggested, Mr. Todarelli said, by the failure of the police to arrest the men who shot and killed Edward Jerge, a narcotic dealer, and the charges against eleven members of the narcotic squad of the Police Department of having narcotics and equipments for their use in their lockers.

The article is in the main a call to citizens to urge upon Congress the necessity of strengthening the Narcotic Bureau of the Federal Government. Squads operating under the direction of this bureau, it is pointed out, seldom catch the men directing the big business of illicit drug selling. This is explained by the statement that sufficient money is never placed in the hands of the Federal operators to get evidence of such a character as to insure convictions.

Morphine, Mr. Todarelli says, has been sold in this city at a price as low as $11 or $12 an ounce by general distributors of the drug. Then it goes into the hands of the retailers, small operators and peddlers. Before it reaches the consumer the price rises to $1 a grain for morphine and heroin, or about $437.50 an ounce. A Government agent, seeking evidence against a wholesaler, would have to pay $25 an ounce and he would have to buy 100 ounces because wholesalers rarely deal in smaller quantities.

Mr. Todarelli says that the fifteen subdivisions of the country's narcotic forces cannot advance this money to their agents to spend on preliminary moves leading to the arrest of a wholesaler. If an agent had the capital and the zeal, he says, to supply the money himself he might find it a very slow process to get the money back from the Government. The entire appropriation for the Narcotic Bureau, Mr. Todarelli says, is $1,325,000 and from this sum the salaries of 308 agents must be paid as well as those of the chiefs of the fifteen divisions.

In the fiscal year ended June 30, 1925, thirty-two field agents and one chief made 773 arrests in this State. There were 754 convictions. In this Federal District 199 cases were presented for trial and all resulted in convictions except two. From July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1928, the Narcotic Bureau, it is reported, procured 23,363 convictions which were followed by sentences aggregating 38,756 years, imprisonment and $950,704 in fines. Mr. Todarelli calls attention to the fact that the Harrison Narcotic Act of 1914 is strictly a revenue act and that it is not thought that aliens convicted under it can be deported after conviction.

RECORD MOTOR SHIPMENTS.

August a Banner Month for Cadillac, With 5,142 Cars.

Record shipments of automobiles in August were indicated by several companies in reports submitted yesterday. Combined shipments of Cadillac and La Salle cars by the Cadillac division of the General Motors Corporation totaled 5,142 units during the month. This figure, Lawrence P. Fisher, President of the Cadillac company, announced yesterday, exceeds by more than 600 units the best previous month and establishes a new record for all time in the high-priced field for the automobile industry. Current shipments are equally divided between Cadillacs and La Salles, it was indicated.

"With the introduction of the new Cadillac and La Salle we embarked upon our heaviest production schedule, averaging 5,200 cars a month, with all plants running at full capacity," Mr. Fisher said.

Shipments of cars by the Marmon Motor Car Company in August totaled 1,768 units, exceeding any previous August in the history of the company.

Peerless Motor Car Company shipments were 976 cars in August, against 1,001 units in August last year.

A total of 753 trucks was shipped in August by the Federal Motor Truck Company, compared with 605 in August, 1927.

CUT RUBBER TIRE PRICES.

United States Rubber and Goodyear Make 20% Reduction.

A temporary 20 per cent. price cut was announced yesterday by the United States Rubber Company and the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company on their second grade tires, known respectively as Usco and Pathfinder. The adjustments were made to meet a similar rection by the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company on old Oldfield tires, which are being replaced by a new line bearing the name of the Firestone Company, together with the regular Firestone medallion. The new Oldfield tires are expected to sell at the same price as the old before the 20 per cent. adjustment. When stocks of the old line of Oldfield tires are exhausted, it is expected that all three companies will readjust their second grade tires to their former selling prices.

The Fisk Rubber Company intends to make no downward revision of prices on its premier line of tires at the present time, according to an announcement made yesterday. These tires are competitive with the lines on which reductions have recently been announced by other companies.

PHILIPPINE IMPORTS UP.

Increase Is 50 Per Cent. Despite Drop in Piece Cotton.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Trade Commissioner Howard at Manila has reported to the Department of Commerce by radio that substantial increases in July imports of all principal items except cotton piece goods, resulted in an advance of over 50 per cent. in value of Philippine import trade compared with the previous month.

The textile market in July was the slowest of the year, as a result of uncertainty in the raw cotton situation, and continued boycotting by Chinese firms of Japanese goods. Imports of cotton manufacturers other than piece goods, however, showed an increase, and reached the highest value of the year.

Export values were the lowest in over a year totalling 23,145,000 pesos (about $11,572,500).

The excess of July imports, amounting to 5,500,000 pesos or $4,250,000 was the first adverse monthly trade balance since October 1926. The accumulated export balance for the first seven months of the year was reduced to $13,925,000, compared with $33,045,000 at the close of July 1927.

$5,000 BAIL FOR BROKER.

Walter C. Hicks Held on Charge of Larceny of Collateral.

Walter C. Hicks, formerly President of Hicks & Co., a bankrupt cotton brokerage concern, was held in $5,000 bail in Tombs Court yesterday on charges of grand larceny made by Bernard E. Loveman of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Loveman alleged that Hicks had sold 500 shares of National Cash Register stock, valued at $25,000, which stock belonged to Loveman and had been turned over to Hicks to be held as collateral. He charged that Loveman never had been authorized to sell the stock, and after he did so, he had refused to turn over the proceeds.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—The tropical disturbance, which is of slight density, is moving Westward across the Yucatan Peninsula. Pressure remains low from Greenland Southward to Newfoundland, and it is low and falling from Saskatchewan and Alberta Southward over the plateau region.

Pressure remains relatively low over the Gulf of Mexico and Florida. High pressure prevails almost generally east of the Rocky Mountains. This pressure distribution has been attended by quite general rains within the last twenty-four hours in the South Atlantic States.

The indications are for showers Thursday and possibly Friday in the Appalachian region and along the East Gulf Coast and in the Atlantic States except Northern New York and Northern New England. Elsewhere east of the Mississippi River generally fair weather will prevail during the next two days. There will be little change in temperature Thursday, but it will rise slowly during Friday in the Middle Atlantic States and in the Northern Appalachian region.

COMBINED WIRE WEATHER CONDITIONS.

In the following record of observations at United States Weather Bureau stations yesterday the temperatures given are the highest during the twelve hours from 8 A. M. to 8 P. M. and the lowest during the preceding twelve hours, from 8 P. M. to 8 A. M., the barometer reading and condition of weather are those recorded at 8 P. M. and the rainfall is for the twenty-four hours ended at 8 P. M.

ADD TO PHILADELPHIA PRICE

Underlying Companies Ask $151,000,000 for Transit Holdings.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—Underlying companies in the Philadelphia rapid transit system will demand $151,000,000 for their holdings if they are condemned by the city, the Public Service Commission was informed today by Francis S. Bracken, counsel for one of the largest of the groups, at a city hall hearing.

This figure is $17,000,000 in excess of the estimated value of the properties as made by Charles C. McClord for the Public Service Commission. Condemnation proceedings were recommended by him. The price of $151,000,000 was arrived at by the capitalization, the present rentals paid by the transit company at 5½ per cent., and by adding $27,000,000 to cover bonds of various underlying companies which are outstanding.

Either the city or the underliers may appeal from the valuation placed on the properties by the commission, but Mayor Mackey indicated today that the city would make no appeal. It is expected to have the condemnation proposal placed on the November ballot.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

For more than a year the stock market, which seemed to be sensitive to nothing else—harvests, politics, or business activities—has been singularly subject to doubts when the brokers' loan account took a sudden and startling turn. In its every-day conversation, Wall Street has repeatedly insisted that the increase of a billion dollars or more in such credits within a single year was a perfectly normal incident, reflecting only the strong situation of the investing and underwriting markets. Yet a weekly or monthly statement showing sensational increase in the brokers' loans invariably acted as a chill on the speculative spirit, while a substantial reduction would be greeted with enthusiasm.

Tuesday afternoon's late report by the Stock Exchange, showing addition of $214,000,000 to such borrowings in August, whereas the Federal Reserve's weekly statements had indicated $24,000,000 reduction for the month, appeared at the opening yesterday to have the effect on the market's feeling that such announcements have usually exerted. It was more in the nature of a momentary hesitation, however, than a reversal in the course of prices. There was a considerable number of declines for the day, but in the half-dozen stocks on which professional activities have converged there was no relaxation of the bidding-up process. Advances of 3 to 5 points in a number of these, and of 9 points in Radio, were accompanied by transactions larger than those of the day before. This has been the rather familiar program on previous occasions when Wall Street itself displayed a moment's instinctive uneasiness over the picture presented of the existing credit situation.

The iron-production figures for August, as published yesterday, were in line with the preceding month's returns—that is to say, were larger than in 1927, but smaller than in 1926—but the mid-week returns from the steel trade appeared to show a more remarkable comparison. It has been an exceptionally active Summer in that industry, and it is now predicted that total output for the third quarter of the year will surpass all records for the period. If steel production were now the infallible indication which it was once supposed to be to the course of general trade, inferences regarding the business situation as a whole, during the Summer and in the coming Autumn, would be unmistakable.

Like many other once-familiar "trade barometers," however, the steel trade has of late years been a somewhat erratic prophet. It correctly foreshadowed, in the last months of 1924, the general trade revival of 1925, but the exceptionally rapid increase of production in the first quarter of 1927 came almost at the moment when reaction in general business was beginning. Its present testimony is at least, however, a pleasing indication of what appears from other evidence, that the condition of trade in general is favorable, notwithstanding high money.

Even prices appear to be strengthening in the steel trade. The monthly averages of prices in all commodity markets, however, as published yesterday, show little change; the Dun compilation makes August the lowest of any month since February. But the average is nevertheless 3 per cent. above this date a year ago, and the highest for the period since 1920, except for the one year 1925. The year's enhancement of commodity prices is irregularly distributed; it is again almost wholly a result of higher farm-product markets, and it makes humble comparison with the rise on the Stock Exchange. Nevertheless, the fact that average prices both for stocks and commodities should have risen in a year of sweeping reduction of the American gold holdings throws an odd light on the theories of cause and effect that prevailed some five or six years ago.

PARK & TILFORD ADVANCES.

Shares Go to New High for the Year, Reaching 87⅝.

The sudden advance of the shares of the Park & Tilford Company to a new high for the year yesterday at 87⅝ was in response to news that the corporation had just completed the largest half year in its history, and that from present indications the last half will be equally good.

In the March quarter $1.11 was earned per share, compared with 20 cents in the corresponding period last year. Dividends for the full year 1928 at the rate of 4 per cent. in stock and $3 in cash have been declared ahead and are payable in four quarterly instalments.

It was estimated yesterday that of the 200,000 shares outstanding the floating supply is now limited to 60,000 shares.

SECURITIES AT AUCTION.

Following securities were sold at the auction salesrooms of Adrian H. Muller & Sons, auctioneers, yesterday:

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, on the Stock Exchange and in the Financial Markets.

Halted temporarily by what seemed to be misgiving over the huge expansion in the Stock Exchange's figures of brokers' loans, the stock market presently resumed its upward movement yesterday. Money conditions were swept aside as unimportant, and gains ranging from a point to upward of 8 points were established throughout a varied list of shares, of which the most important were those of moving picture, communication, public utilities, food and tobacco companies, with a few selected railroad stocks joining the procession. The tickers early lost pace with the market and were from 5 to 30 minutes behind it all day. The last quotation was printed at 3:39. While there was a little profit-taking at the close, the trend of the market was upward. General Motors was the market's leader all day. After the pressure of the early sales had proved to be ineffective, the body of stocks started forward and kept the same pace all day.

Public's Appetite for Stocks.

Several commission brokers remarked yesterday that the public demand for stocks seemed to be "perfectly amazing." The biggest demand is coming from out of town, and the large Stock Exchange institutions described themselves as finding their network of wires throughout the country a "gold mine." In some cases the strain on the operators was so great that additional men were added in the "wire rooms." Just where all the new business is coming from was a matter of a great deal of conjecture in Wall Street. Many of the persons who are "in the market" at the present time are those who held on through the June break. Many of them, however, represent a new crop of speculators who have not been in the market before, and are getting their first stock market thrill.

The Brokers' Loan Puzzle.

The increase of $214,000,000 during August in the loans of Stock Exchange brokers was one of the principal topics of discussion in Wall Street yesterday. It was the consensus there that the brokers are borrowing from sources not bound by the necessity of reporting to the Federal Reserve Bank. These funds, it was pointed out, are coming from two sources. Some of them are foreign money, mainly from London, Paris and Amsterdam, which has been obtained by the brokers through big private banks here which are not members of the Federal Reserve System and are not obliged to make any reports of these transactions. The other source was believed to be corporation funds, also lent through private banks. There was suggested yet a third reservoir of credit which has been widely tapped in the last month—the loans of small banking institutions in various sections of the country, gathered up by one central bank in that district and lent directly to the brokerage houses. This is said to have been the case of the small banks around Detroit, St. Louis and probably other centres. Usually the arrangements are made with the branch of a New York brokerage house in one of those centres, so that the transactions never see the light of day until published at the end of the month by the brokerage office in its report to the Stock Exchange.

The Autumn Season in Finance.

Labor Day, according to custom, is the line of demarkation between Summer dullness and Fall activity. So far this week, the renewed activity in the various financial markets has given the impression of running true to form. The stock market started with the closing days of August. New bond offerings announced so far this week are in excess of the total for the last fortnight, and bond dealers have been encouraged over sales made since the holiday on Monday. The various commodity markets are described as having shaken off the lethargy of Summer, although activity in all cases has not necessarily meant higher prices. Announcement of the Treasury financing for Sept. 15 in connection with the retirement of the Third Liberty 4¼s is expected to prove a relief to the bond market, which in the past has taken its cue from new Treasury financing.

The Price of Money.

It was rather generally insisted in Wall Street yesterday that it does not make a great deal of difference to the customer how much he is paying in interest on his debit balance, so long as his stocks are going up. A charge of 7½ or 8 per cent. (the figure, which most Stock Exchange houses charged their customers last month), was described as almost infinitesimal if the stocks, which the customers carry have had, say, a 10-point advance during the month. One Stock Exchange member remarked that "anybody can get used to much that is disagreeable, provided it is not dangerous, and everybody knows that there is always enough money to go round if the price is paid—for money remains a commodity in spite of all other characterizations."

Fewer Time Loans.

In the midst of the uncertainties in the money market, one fact stands out, and that is a distinct trend toward demand loans by the banks in preference to time loans. This is usual in periods of high money rates such as the present. Bankers said yesterday that in a majority of cases when time loans mature now, the borrowers are asked to take renewals on a demand basis. Even at the current rates for time money, the banks are reluctant to tie up funds for long periods, and the prediction was heard yesterday that as a result of these conditions the time loan rate was likely to average close to 7 per cent. between now and the first of next year.

MONEY.

Wednesday, Sept. 5, 1928.

Money was in good demand all day at 7½ per cent., the Stock Exchange charge, nothing cheaper than that prevailing in the counter market. About $20,000,000 was withdrawn. In time money, trading was virtually at a standstill so far as quantity loans go, since it is not so much the question of rates as the fact that offerings are scant, the few loans arranged being a matter of individual rates. However, all maturities continued firmly bid at 6½ per cent. Commercial paper and acceptances were unchanged.

What Your Investment Dollar Will Earn for You in

TUDOR CITY

YOU have watched Tudor City rise high above the East River at the end of 42nd Street. You have seen this "city within a city" come into being within three blocks of Grand Central Terminal to bring a new convenience and a new manner of living to thousands of New Yorkers.

Have you considered the equally remarkable advantages that Tudor City offers to you as an investor?

You Can Own Part of Tudor City!

You can participate in the ownership and share in the profits from the operation of any of these great income-producing buildings—the individual Units of Tudor City—through the investment of any convenient sum—$100 to $100,000.

Under the FRENCH PLAN you not only have a safeguarded investment—plus 6%—but you share in the profits distributed from the operation of the property—and from its inevitable increase in value—above and beyond your original investment.

Sound Value—Steady Earnings

Land acquired at a low cost . . . sound, economical and practical construction by the organization that has built millions of dollars worth of large income-producing buildings during the last 17 years . . . management by the organization that has earned and paid millions of dollars to investors . . . Tudor City represents sound value and an exceptional earning power per dollar of investment.

An Assured Success!

Hundreds of New Yorkers are already enjoying the thrill of a new convenience—a new and pleasanter manner of living. Busy men are walking to work and adding hours to their productive day. New York has discovered a way to sidestep traffic congestion, and the demand for accommodations in Tudor City promises to exceed the supply for many years to come.

Steadily increasing traffic with its dirt, din and delay must make outlying districts less desirable and Tudor City more desirable

6%—Plus Operating Profits!

Your investment in any Tudor City Unit under the FRENCH PLAN pays you 6% income—plus the repayment of every dollar of your original investment through 10 capital retirements of 10% each—plus 50% of all profits distributed from the operation of the property thereafter!

You gain the remarkable advantage of a temporary investment that gives you permanent income.

Thousands of discriminating New Yorkers have invested millions of dollars in income-producing buildings under this Plan and are now sharing in the profits from their operation—and the profits from their increase in value.

Is there any better or surer way to build toward financial independence?

Your Copy is Ready!

The Special Coupon—below—will bring your copy of the 64-page book "The Real Estate Investment of the Future" with full details of the FRENCH PLAN and the results that it is achieving for investors.

You will doubtless find it the most interesting—and the most profitable—half hour's reading you have done in months!

LISTED BOND MARKET ACTIVE ONLY IN SPOTS

Dealings in the listed bond market were comparatively small yesterday. United States Government issues sagged, foreign loans were extremely dull and corporation bonds rarely showed more than fractional changes. The slight easing in the call-money rate to 7½ per cent. appeared to have little effect on the bond market.

Public Service Corporation of New Jersey 4½s of 1948 were one of the few features, leading the entire list in activity and reaching a new high price for the year above 145. The close was up 2½ points. Other public utility bonds showed only routine changes.

Trading in copper companies' issues continued fairly active, with Andes Copper 7s up a point. Activity in Dodge Brothers convertible 6s has tapered off, although the market for the bonds holds close to the year's high point of 99.

In the railroad group, a heavy turnover of St. Paul bonds, led by the adjustment 5s, was notable. Net changes in these issues were small fractions, however.

New Bonds for $3,636,000 Placed on Market Today

New securities totaling $3,636,000 will be placed on the market today by New York banking houses and syndicates. The financing consists entirely of bonds.

The new issues are classified as follows:

Industrial	$3,000,000
Municipal	636,000

MUNICIPAL LOANS

Awards and Announcements of Public Issues for Various Purposes.

The City of Cleveland, Ohio, which was to have placed bond proposals totaling $6,000,000 on the ballot at the November election, may defer that financing at least a year, according to word received here yesterday. The City Council voted down the plan to get the issue before the voters. The funds were to be used for straightening the Cuyahoga River.

Of several major municipal bond issues authorized earlier in the year but yet unissued, the $4,250,000 City of Austin (Texas) improvement bonds, which were voted on May 19, may be marketed this month. Several counties in Texas are understood to be awaiting a more favorable market before scheduling their issues for sale.

Tacoma, Wash.

The City of Tacoma, Wash., will open bids on Oct. 1 on a new issue of $225,000 bridge bonds, part of a total authorization of $2,078,500, of which $948,500 was sold on May 23. The new issue will consist of $150,000 Puyallup River bridge and $75,000 Lincoln Avenue bridge bonds. Bidders are asked to name the interest rate at not to exceed 5 per cent.

Rochester, N. Y.

Award of an issue of $775,000 City of Rochester (N. Y.) three-month notes, due on Dec. 10, 1928, was made yesterday to Salomon Brothers & Hutzler on a 4.94 per cent. basis, plus a premium of $3. The issues comprise $400,000 local improvement, $200,000 overdue taxes, $125,000 school $25,000 subway and $25,000 water works.

Akron, Ohio.

Offering of an issue of $636,000 City of Akron (Ohio) 4¼ and 4½ per cent. bonds will be made today by Phelps, Fenn & Co. and Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc. The 4½s, due from 1929 to 1938, are priced to yield 4.35 to 4.50 per cent. The 4¼s are priced at 99½. The bonds are issued for various street improvements. The city has an assessed valuation of $366,725,750 and a net bonded debt of $31,558,673, including the present issue.

BOND FLOTATIONS

New Corporation Issues to Be Offered for Subscription by Investors.

Offering of a new issue of $3,000,000 Graham-Paige Motors Corporation 6 per cent. sinking fund debentures, series A, due on Aug. 1, 1933, will be made today at par and interest. The offering syndicate comprises the First National Company of Detroit, the Detroit and Security Trust Company and the Guardian Detroit Company, Inc. The issue is callable as a whole or in part at 100½ to Aug. 1, 1930, at 100¾ to Aug. 1, 1932, and thereafter at par and interest.

Proceeds of the issue will be used to provide additional working capital. The balance sheet as of June 30 after giving effect to this financing, shows total assets of $29,578,770 and working capital of $9,413,092, including $6,305,677 is cash.

An additional issue of $2,500,000 Pennsylvania Gas and Electric Corporation 6 per cent. debentures, series A, will be offered by A. C. Allyn & Co., Inc. The company, through its subsidiaries, supplies electric light and power, manufactured gas and, in some instances, manufactured ice.

FEDERAL RESERVE PLANS FALL CREDIT

Bankers Hear Purchases of Bills and Securities Will Release $200,000,000.

NEW VIEW OF STOCK LOANS

Authorities Said Now to Regard Them as Not Excessive, as Gold Supply Has Shrunk.

A new phase of Federal Reserve operations, of pronounced importance both in the stock market and also in commercial circles, has arrived, according to information in banking circles yesterday, in which enlarged credit facilities are to be supplied for the movement and marketing of the nation's crops and the Autumn business expansion through the purchase of bills and securities by the Federal Reserve banks. The time of year now at hand usually calls for an expansion of credit amounting to approximately $200,000,000, and the Reserve System is preparing to meet this situation without strain. In centring their efforts in this direction, the Reserve authorities have ceased emphasizing their stand against what, earlier in the year, they termed excessive speculation.

It was said that Federal Reserve policies had not been altered, and that a change in open market operations, should it take place, would be the result of seasonal influences calling for increased commercial credit.

New View of Big Loans.

Recognition of a new era, however, was seen in banking circles in the equanimity with which the total of more than a billion dollars of borrowing by the member banks from the Federal Reserve banks now is viewed. Last week's statement of the twelve Federal Reserve banks combined showed a total of $1,038,773,000 of rediscounts. It was said yesterday in circles close to the Federal Reserve Bank that this was considered not excessive in view of the loss of more than $500,000,000 in gold by the United States in the last year and other factors which have entered the situation. Early this year the rediscounts stood at only about $450,000,000, since which time the rediscount rate has been advanced three times, from 3½ to 5 per cent. During most of the time that member bank borrowing was expanding, banking leaders issued warnings against the amount of credit that was being diverted into stock market channels.

The Federal Reserve's credit policies several times this year have produced reactions and irregularity in the stock market, but the main trend of prices of securities has persisted upward, and an additional rally occurred yesterday afternoon in the face of an increase of more than $214,000,000 in brokers' loans reported for August by the Stock Exchange. This indicated to many that Federal Reserve policies were entering stock market considerations to a less degree than formerly. At any rate, the bearish element in the stock market centred its attack on other factors rather than the continued high money rates.

Sources of New Loans.

The rise of $214,000,000 in brokers' loans, as compiled by the Exchange, during the same period that the figures supplied by the Federal Reserve member banks in New York City were decreasing more than $24,000,000, was explained yesterday as due in part to large amounts of foreign funds coming into the market. Several large Canadian banks have agencies here which make collateral loans direct and store the securities in their own vaults. In addition, French, English and other European interests place loans through their fiscal agents here whose activities are not covered by the Federal Reserve reports. New York banks in the last month in adjusting their position with the Federal Reserve Bank, have been calling loans, and this resulted in firm money rates and attracted increasing amounts of foreign funds into the market. Also, large amounts of funds are being placed in the market by corporations through private bankers and other agencies which do not report to the Federal Reserve Bank.

Bankers asserted, however, that money conditions were still fundamentally firm owing chiefly to the heavy loss of gold which has taken place, and they said they saw little possibility of a rate level much lower than the present one. Call money ruled yesterday at 7½ per cent., as against 8 per cent. on Tuesday, while time money held at 6½ per cent. One of the most pronounced trends in the money market at present is a reduction in the volume of time loans and an expansion in demand loans. The Stock Exchange's report of brokers' loans issued on Tuesday showed an increase of more than $326,000,000 in demand loans and a reduction of $112,000,000 in time loans. This tendency is expected to continue, and the prediction was made yesterday that time money probably would command 7 per cent. during a considerable portion of the remainder of the year.

EQUIPMENT SECURITIES LAG, ASSOCIATION SAYS

Owners' Body Charges Lack of Interest by Bankers in Competitive Selling Plan.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—The National Association of Owners of Railroad and Public Utility Securities made available today an article, to be published in The Security Owner, in which it is contended that "lack of interest in recent months on the part of bankers in equipment trust securities, offered by carriers through competitive bidding, raises some questions as to the merit of this method of distributing these issues."

The Interstate Commerce Commission in June, 1926, after a long fight on the part of some of its members led by former Chairman Eastman, recommended and approved the policy to which reference is made, expressing the opinion that it would produce capital more cheaply for the issuing railroads than the old system of marketing them through favored bankers.

The Association of Owners says that it has been conducting an investigation to determine if the method has had sufficient trial to warrant its continuation in view of the present lagging tendency in the market for these securities. Letters were sent out by the association.

"In a large majority of cases," it stated in part, "the replies from the bankers indicate that their experience tends to show that the reasons which the commission gave for its approval of this procedure have not proved to be in substantial accord with the facts. It developed that, in the opinion of practically all of the distributing houses, the commission was too optimistic in considering that such securities are virtually uniform and afford a high degree of safety."

As to the policy of competitive bidding broadening the market for the securities, the association also expressed doubt.

More Johns-Manville Stock.

Stockholders of the Johns-Manville Corporation yesterday approved an increase in the authorized common shares from 750,000 to 1,000,000. It is understood that the proceeds from the sale of new stock will be used to acquire other businesses, extending the present organization and provide a distribution fund for employes. Part of the additional stock, it is reported, will be offered to shareholders at about $100 a share.

An Attractive Common Stock

The obligation of a seasoned company in a staple line of business.

Current assets more than five times current liabilities.

Selling at about five times annual earnings, which currently are showing a substantial improvement over the same period last year.

We recommend this stock, which is listed on the New York Curb Exchange, as having excellent speculative possibilities.

FOX

A complete and growing organization in the motion picture industry

FROM its beginning in 1904, the Fox organization has steadily extended its operations until now it is conceded to be one of the three largest factors in the industry. Through two principal companies—the Fox Film Corporation and the Fox Theatres Corporation—its operations include all phases of the motion picture business—production, distribution and exhibition.

The Fox Film Corporation owns three completely equipped studios, two in Los Angeles and one in New York. It has distributing facilities in 125 larger cities throughout the world. Directly or through subsidiaries, the two companies own, control, operate or lease, a total of 292 theatres in this country, ranging from The Roxy, "Cathedral of the Movies," to chains of first run houses in smaller communities.

The Fox organization, in line with its forward looking policy, is actively pressing the development of the talking picture. Early in the field, it has an advantage which it is holding in a practical way. Through an affiliated company, the Fox-Case Corporation, it produces Movietone, one of the most successful means yet devised for recording pictures and sound at the same time. New studios for sound production are being erected on the West Coast.

Halsey, Stuart & Co. has been actively associated with the recent growth of the Fox interests through underwriting and distributing bond issues on various Fox properties. Among these issues are the Fox West Coast Properties, which include the production facilities at Los Angeles; the Fox Office Building, covering the administrative facilities in New York; the Roxy Theatre, Fox St. Louis, Fox Detroit—de luxe theatres with seating capacities of 4500 to 6000 each.

An illustrated booklet more fully descriptive of the Fox Organization will be sent upon request.

PRODUCTION

The Fox Organization has produced to date 1300 photoplays and short reel films, exclusive of news reels. 220 pictures are scheduled for this year, including 55 features and 44 educational and comedy films. From twenty to thirty of the Fox feature pictures this year, and about 150 short subjects, including news-reels, will have sound accompaniment. The Fox name is associated with some of the outstanding pictures of film history, including What Price Glory, The Iron Horse, The Red Dance, Sunrise, Seventh Heaven, Street Angel, Four Sons.

DISTRIBUTION

There are estimated to be 50,000 motion picture theatres in the world and Fox deals with about half of them. About thirty per cent of the Fox Film Company's business is outside the United States. Over $5,000,000 has been expended in building up a world wide distributing organization, though carried on the books at only $1.00. Distribution has been greatly enlarged during the present year through acquisition or control of some 200 additional theatres.

EXHIBITION

Stretching across the country, already erected or to be built, is a chain of de luxe theatres which are either owned, controlled, operated or leased by the Fox interests. Chief among them is the Roxy Theatre in New York, the largest theatre in the world, seating about 6000. Other de luxe type theatres are in Detroit, St. Louis, Brooklyn and Philadelphia; similar theatres are planned for other large centers. Various owned or controlled chains and circuits, including more than two hundred theatres on the Pacific Coast and in the Middle West, bring the total owned, controlled, operated, or leased up to 292 theatres.

Statements herein, while not guaranteed, are based on information which we regard as reliable.

MARKETS IN LONDON, PARIS AND BERLIN

British Industrials Are Active, With Gains in Gramophone and Tobacco Shares.

LONDON MONEY IS EASIER

Paris Dull After Early Selling—Berlin Weak, Fearing Stringent Money Conditions.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 5.—The Stock Exchange was quieter today with British funds less active than they have been for several days. The 5 per cent. war loan declined one-sixteenth, while 2½ per cent. consols were equally dull. Conversion loans were steady with 3½ per cent. closing at 77 1-16.

Among industrial shares, however, there was animation in the last hours of trading. Victor Talking Machine opened at $114 and soon sagged to $113, but later, on American support, rose to $116. The rest of the gramophone group had an easier appearance. Mond Nickel were firm all day, closing 3-32 higher at 41 15-16. Similar strength was displayed by British-American Tobacco, which advanced 1s 6d to 129s 6d. A decline occurred in British Celanese and Courtaulds in the artificial silk group and in Molasses and Photomaton shares among the miscellaneous issues.

Shipping and cable shares were firm. Only minor changes occurred in the oil market. Mining shares were easier with the exception of East Rand mines which rallied sharply.

Rates were easier in the short loan market. Before closing balances could be obtained at 3½ per cent. Revenue returns showing how small a proportion of national war bond redemption money had been paid out up to Saturday, provided one explanation of the recent monetary tightness.

The American exchange closed slightly lower at $4.85 4-5.

Paris Curb Stocks Advance.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—Some early selling on the Bourse today was followed by very slack trading. The dominant tone was heavy. Renewal of tension of New York call money was credited with a weakening influence on the market here.

Certain curb stocks, however, made slight advances, notably Transvaal, Hotchkiss and Rumanian oils. The curb market closed with a cheerful tone after an uncertain opening.

Berlin Boerse Depressed.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 5.—The Boerse opened very weak today and the expectation that yesterday's boom of special values would be followed by a general improvement was unfulfilled. Banks and speculators began to unload from the start, the principal reason being a fear that the money market would become much tighter shortly, although call money was plentifully offered at 6½ to 8½.

Additional depressing factors were the downward tendencies of the London and Paris Exchanges and unsatisfactory Geneva reports, though the contents of Chancellor Mueller's speech are not yet known. During the day business was almost completely stagnant, but in spite of this only a few stocks lost more than 2 to 3 points.

At the closing hour the market improved slightly as speculators sought covering. Foreign stocks and rentes were quiet, Canadians being 2 to 3 points higher.

Chicago Radio Plants Merge.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5 (AP).—Merger of the Electrical Research Laboratories, Inc., and the Greene-Browne Manufacturing Company, both pioneer firms of the radio industry, was completed today with George A. Pearson and Burton Greene, Presidents of the two companies, signing the merger agreement. The new consolidated company will be known as the Erla Corporation, continuing the manufacture of radio apparatus.

MEXICO BUDGET CUT BY 21,000,000 PESOS

Reduction Is Attributed to Finance Minister's New System—Economies Will Continue.

DEBT SETTLEMENT URGED

Mexican Economist Says Present Situation Harms Country—Suggests a 60-Year Payment Plan.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 5.—It is officially reported this morning that next year's budget expenditures have been calculated in round figures at 270,000,000 pesos (about $128,500,000), as against 291,000,000 for the current year, and that this reduction of 21,000,000 pesos will result completely from the new financial system established by Minister Montes de Oca and his insistence that the governmental departments must continue to live within the limits allotted them by the financial experts.

From this unusually good financial statement one is able to foresee to a certain extent what may be the Mexican intentions on the renewal of the payment of their foreign obligations. Borja Bollado, in his new publication, "Economista," has some pertinent observations to make in that connection under a heading to the effect that Mexico should not pay more than her economic capacity permits, he says in part: "Up to this moment the Mexican Government and its creditors have not reached an agreement and the exchange of opinions still continues. On this point both the New York bankers as depositaries of the bondholders and the Mexican Ministry of Finance have considered it necessary, as the primary basis of any arrangement for payments, that the agreement must provide for the settlement, not only of the payment of interest on foreign indebtedness, but also for progressive amortization."

Señor Bollado emphasizes that European nations indebted to Washington have arranged extended payments on a basis of sixty years, and that although Mexico's indebtedness really is not limited to any one foreign Government, the situation of his country as a debtor nation is the same as the war debtors. Señor Bollado regrets the lack of publication of the report of the international bankers on Mexico after the visit of their experts to study the economic situation here on the spot.

He goes on to say that the prevailing moratorium on foreign interest payments does Mexico no good, and insists that to get to the bottom of the matter and fix a new and permanent agreement there must be an early solution.

With regard to any new agreement with international bankers there is another point of importance to consider. It arises from reports circulated locally that many Mexican bond issues have passed from the hands of the original holders, who were bona fide purchasers, into those of a group of speculators who probably bought them at an immense discount and now await the fulfillment of President Calles' declaration that Mexico will comply with her obligations in order to collect the premium which critics say they are not entitled. Whether the Mexican bonds have passed into the hands of speculators or not does not affect the national obligations, but some see no reason why, if any such bonds are outstanding, Mexico should not buy in its own paper.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Japanese Yen and Dutch Guilder Move Higher—Sterling and Europeans Firm.

Demand for the Japanese yen, most of it by bankers with Eastern connections, helped carry that bill higher again yesterday and at the close of 45.81⅛ cents for checks there was a gain of ⅜ cents over Tuesday's final. Speculative purchases are also mixed up in the buying and this has been coming from those who are selling their Chinese currencies for a consequent reaction in these descriptions.

Holland guilders also enjoyed a good rally, moving up 1¼ points to 40.08¼ cents, for checks, bank accumulation here being a factor in the upturn. Sterling and the Europeans were virtually neglected so far as volume business and wide movements were concerned, the pound, francs, lira and others ruling steady on quiet trading. Canadian rose to a premium of 5-64ths, from 1-32, on Tuesday.

Dividends free of present normal Federal income tax. Central Union Trust Company of New York, Registrar. Bankers Trust Company, New York, Transfer Agent.

The following information has been summarized by Mr. L. E. Kilmarx, President of Central States Electric Corporation, from his letter dated September 5, 1928, copies of which may be obtained upon request, and is subject to the more complete information contained therein:

BUSINESS AND ASSETS

Central States Electric Corporation, organized in 1912, is engaged in investing primarily in securities of public utility holding and operating companies. Its principal investment is in the common stock of The North American Company, in which company it is the largest single stockholder. Dividends have been paid by The North American Company on its common stock without interruption for more than nineteen years. For five years such dividends have been paid in common stock at the rate of 2½% quarterly.

The value of the net assets of Central States Electric Corporation, as at August 31, 1928, as shown by the balance sheet of that date, but adjusted to give effect to the issuance of this $10,000,000 par value of preferred stock and to the present market value of securities then owned, after deducting all current and accrued liabilities and funded debt, but before deducting any preferred stock, was over $73,000,000.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE

The proceeds from the sale of this issue of $10,000,000 par value of preferred stock are to be used to acquire additional investments, and for other corporate purposes.

OPTIONAL DIVIDEND PRIVILEGE

Dividends on this series are to be payable quarterly in common stock of the company at the annual rate of one-sixteenth of a share of common stock per share of this preferred stock, or, at the option of the holder, in cash at the annual rate of $6 per share. The option to receive payment of any quarterly dividend in cash may be exercised by delivering notice of such election to the company within the period of ten days immediately following the record date for the payment of such dividend. Notice of each record date is to be mailed by the company to the holders of preferred stock of this series, at least five days before such record date.

The preponderant part of the company's common stock is controlled by interests identified with the affairs of The North American Company. Its present market value, as evidenced by quotations on the New York Curb Market, is approximately $112 per share.

We offer this preferred stock for delivery if, when and as issued and accepted by us, subject to approval of legal proceedings by counsel. It is expected that delivery will be made on or about September 18, 1928, in the form of temporary stock certificates of the company or interim receipts of Dillon, Read & Co. As dividends will accrue from October 1, 1928, interest at the rate of 6% per annum on par value, from date of delivery to October 1, 1928, will be credited on the purchase price.

WILL TAP RESERVES TO PAY DIVIDENDS

American Car and Foundry and Certain-teed Products Order Payments.

EXTRAS BY OTHER CONCERNS

Five Companies Make Declarations —Two Increases of Rates Announced.

Although earnings of two large industrial organizations, the Certain-teed Products Corporation and the American Car and Foundry Company, have declined during the current year, their directors yesterday authorized the payment of regular quarterly dividends on their stocks, both preferred and common.

During the six months ended on June 30 Certain-teed Products earned nothing for the common stock, but a regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a share was declared. For the fiscal year ended on April 30 American Car and Foundry earned $2.76 a share on the common, while the stock is still paying dividends on a $6 annual basis. However, in the case of the latter company, a reserve fund for payment of dividends in lean years had been provided by the management.

The Devoe & Raynolds Company declared yesterday an extra dividend of 20 cents a share on its A and B common stock, the same as was paid three months ago.

The Humble Oil and Refining Company declared an extra dividend of 20 cents on the common stock.

The David Pender Grocery Company declared the usual extra dividend of 25 cents on Class B stock, and the Lambert Pharmacal Company declared the usual extra dividend of 50 cents.

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Canada declared an extra dividend of $1 on common.

The Utah Copper Company declared a quarterly dividend of $2 on its common shares, against $1.50 previously paid. The Humphrey Manufacturing Company declared a quarterly distribution of 50 cents against 37½ cents previously paid.

The Kimberly Clark Corporation declared an initial quarterly dividend of 62½ cents on its common stock.

The directors of the Standard Commercial Tobacco Company will meet on Sept. 14 to consider the declaration of a stock dividend.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC ASKS TO BUY ANOTHER LINE

Seeks Commerce Board Permit to Get Full Control of Northwestern Pacific.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Application was made to the Interstate Commerce Commission today by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company for authority to acquire by stock purchase complete control of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad Company, which is now owned jointly by it and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe. It contended that such action would be in the public interest and named $4,443,349 as the purchase price.

Total mileage operated by the Northwestern Pacific is about 478 miles, and the points of interchange with the Southern Pacific lines are at Santa Rosa, Schellville Junction and San Francisco, all in California.

"Such acquisition," the application stated, "will vest in the applicant all of the capital stock of said carrier and will place upon applicant the entire responsibility for furnishing through said carrier adequate transportation service to the public."

The Southern Pacific further set forth that while the stock has no ascertainable market value, it believed that the value agreed upon represented the fair value for the reason that it was the cost of the stock to the Santa Fe plus its additional advances to the Northwestern Pacific Company, without interest.

The application was accompanied by a resolution adopted by the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific in New York July 12 authorizing purchase of the outstanding half of Northwestern Pacific stock. Another exhibit was an agreement by the Santa Fe to sell its shares of Northwestern Pacific stock at the figure named in the application. This agreement was signed on Aug. 4.

PHOTOGRAM SERVICE BEGINS

Postal Telegraph Transmits About 100 Messages to Seven Cities.

Officials of the Postal Telegraph Company yesterday expressed satisfaction with the first day's results of the inauguration of their new photogram service. It was estimated that about 100 photograms had been received and transmitted up to 4 P. M. here, the destinations being Atlanta, Boston, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Doremus & Co. were first on the wire with an advertisement to those cities transmitted at 7:30 A. M., and soon thereafter the first foreign language message, in Arabic script, was sent to Chicago. Other messages sent included facsimile in Jewish script, advertisements, business letters and social communications.

The new service results from a contract entered into by Postal Telegraph and the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. Messages collected by about 140 stations throughout New York City are sent to the clearing office at 20 Broad Street, which delivers them to the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's laboratories at 15 Dey Street, where they are put on the wires.

There was no formal inauguration of the service, which began as if it were in the regular line of the company's business. Only those departments directly connected with the handling of the messages showed increased activity. Officials of Postal Telegraph expressed the opinion that the new service would not cut into ordinary telegraph business, but would displace to some extent the regular channels of fast mail service, including the air mail.

TO OFFER $5,000,000 BONDS.

Hungarian National Industrial Mortgage Institute Negotiating Here.

The Hungarian National Industrial Mortgage Institute, recently organized, plans to offer a $5,000,000 bond issue in New York toward the end of the month. Negotiations with interests here are near a conclusion.

The institute will lend funds to industrial corporations on chattel mortgages and raise funds by selling its bonds. Its capital is 10,000,000 pengoes ($1,742,000), of which 8,000,000 pengoes were furnished by the Hungarian Government and 2,000,000 by Hungarian industries.

OLD ST. PAUL ISSUES FACE HEAVY LOSSES

Unexchanged Securities Likely to Be Declared Valueless, Banker Announces.

AMOUNT PUT AT $2,000,000

Deposits Still Accepted, Although Termination of Agreement Was Authorized Last February.

Holders of securities issued by the defunct Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway may lose $2,000,000 by failure to exchange them for securities in the successor company, the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific, it was announced yesterday by Jerome J. Hanauer, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. These bankers and the National City Company, managers of the reorganization plan, have recently found holders who were unaware that the road went into receivership in March, 1925. These and others who have delayed the deposit of their holdings are faced with the prospect of having them declared without value.

Although the courts authorized termination of the deposit agreements last February, the bankers have continued to accept deposits of securities under the plan in the hope that investors will come forward with their securities. There are still about $4,000,000 in bonds, 6,000 shares of preferred stock and 15,000 shares of common stock undeposited.

Under the foreclosure decree, the bonds will be entitled only to a distribution value of about 49 per cent., while the new securities given under the plan, together with the cash adjustment, are now worth more than 80 per cent. in the market. The preferred and common stocks of the old company are without value as a result of the mortgages ahead of them having been foreclosed, but the value of the securities given under the plan for the shares, after deducting the assessment of $28 for each share of preferred and $32 for each share of common, would leave a market equity of about $49 for each share of preferred and $33 for each share of common stock.

Many registered holders of old St. Paul securities are not actual stockholders, but have sold their shares, leaving the present holders unknown, while the owners of the bonds which are payable to the bearer, are entirely unknown to the reorganization management. While the deposit agreements must eventually be terminated, the management will give every opportunity for the avoidance of loss by security holders.

LUNCHEON FOR H. N. HUNT.

Marks 50 Years of Service by L. I. R. R. Ticket Stock Room Manager.

A testimonial luncheon given to Harry N. Hunt at the Hotel Pennsylvania yesterday by a group of railroad associates who have known him for twenty years or more marked a half century of service on the Long Island Railroad. Mr. Hunt became connected with the general passenger department of the Long Island at the age of 12 as messenger and office boy in the ticket stock room in Long Island City.

After various promotions Mr. Hunt was placed in charge of the ticket stock room in 1888, so that for the past forty years he has had the responsibility of accounting for and taking care of no less than a billion tickets of all kinds sold to the traveling public. He resides with his wife at Oyster Bay, L. I., where he has lived for the past thirty-five years.

F. H. Woodward, general passenger agent of the railroad, acting as toastmaster, said that in all the time Mr. Hunt had been the directing head of the ticket stock room not a single error was ever discovered, despite the great number of tickets entrusted to his care. Mr. Hunt is one of only four still actively employed by the railroad who have passed the half century mark.

The knowledge of a few reaps profit for many . .

Until recently only a few could afford the purchase of technical guidance on mining securities so necessary to profitable investment. But, after securing such knowledge, they benefited handsomely, for profits in mining are generous.

Now any investor can profit through expert guidance of an eminent group of mining engineers—whose services could not be bought by any individual—and yet, in the case of Metal and Mining Shares Incorporated, is extended with even a single share.

Metal and Mining Shares Incorporated provides a medium for sound and profitable investment in the mining field. Descriptive literature sent upon request.

THE FATE of Block's four huts, built in 1613 on the site of the present Harriman Building at 39 Broadway, is unknown to us, nor is it known how long the little redoubt built the following winter by Captain Christaensen endured. But the story is told that in 1625 Kryn Fredericksz, engineer and surveyor, came from Holland with instructions to build a fortification and in 1626 he staked out a fort "planned to be of large dimensions." This is the earliest record of technical engineering direction on the site of the building which now houses Ford, Bacon & Davis, Inc., Engineers, designers and supervisors of construction of large engineering works. It is interesting to observe that a contemporary historian says of Francois Molemacker in 1626, "He is busy building a horse-mill over which shall be constructed a spacious room sufficient to accommodate a large congregation and then a tower is to be erected where the bells brought from Porto Rico will be hung." The bells, incidentally, were captured at San Juan at the sacking by the Dutch fleet under Admiral B. Hendricksz in October, 1625. So Roosevelt did not bring the first war trophies to New York from San Juan.

Rock-Ribbed Investments

The whole financial structure of modern business is based on CREDIT. Banking, therefore, is the foundation of all industry. Relatively speaking, the business of Banks is not subject to periods of prosperity or depression. Regardless of economic conditions, their service is ever in demand.

The business of successful institutions is constant and earnings and resources are steadily increasing.

Their stocks, therefore, are unusually attractive for Investment Trusts and have proven particularly profitable for which is the OLDEST INVESTMENT TRUST IN AMERICA, operating exclusively in financial institution stocks.

EASTERN BANKERS CORPORATION

DECREASE IS SHOWN IN CAR LOADINGS

Drop of 28,501 Cars for Week of Aug. 25 as Compared to Same Period in 1927.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Loading of revenue freight for the week Aug. 25 totaled 1,080,840 cars, the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association announced today, an increase of 23,945 cars above the preceding weeks. Increases were reported in the total loading of all commodities except grain and grain products, which showed a slight decrease.

The total for the week of Aug. 25 was a decrease, however, of 28,501 cars below the same week in 1927 and a decrease of 47,723 cars below the corresponding week two years ago.

Miscellaneous freight loading for the week totaled 224,627 cars, an increase of 7,829 cars above the corresponding week last year and 11,008 cars above the same week in 1926.

Coal loading totaled 173,098 cars, a decrease of 21,870 cars below 1927 and 27,848 cars below 1926.

Grain and grain products loading amounted to 56,180 cars, a decrease of 4,662 cars under 1927 but 495 cars above 1926. In the Western districts alone grain and grain products loading totaled 40,497 cars, a decrease of 445 cars below 1927.

All districts reported decreases in the total loading of all commodities compared with the same week last year except the Central Western and Southwestern, which showed increases, while all except the Southwestern reported decreases compared with the same period two years ago.

Week.	1928.	1927.	1926.	1925.
Aug. 25	1,080,840	1,108,341	1,128,583	1,124,438
Aug. 18	1,056,895	1,090,828	1,081,503	1,079,995
Aug. 11	1,044,442	1,089,245	986,224	1,044,476
July 28	1,032,976	1,044,697	1,065,997	1,048,620

STOCKS SHOW GAINS IN COUNTER MARKET

Strength Develops After Easier Opening, but Trading Is on Reduced Scale.

After an easier opening yesterday prices in the over-the-counter market developed a stronger tone, although trading was on a reduced scale. Banks, trust companies and insurance shares continued to attract attention at the higher levels. Chain store stocks were in demand with an upward trend. Public utilities and industrials held steady.

Among the industrial shares, Joseph Dixon featured the group with a good gain. Royal Baking Powder common, Carnation Milk common, Hercules Powder common, Truscon Steel common, Eiseman Magneto preferred and Armstrong Cork moved higher. Childs Company preferred, Acoustic Products preferred and Wheeling Steel common were lower.

First National of New York in the bank group scored a good gain, as did Chase, United States Mortgage and Trust, New York Title and Mortgage, Murray Hill, Bankers, Bank of New York and Trust, Corn Exchange, Chelsea, Empire and State. Chemical, Chatham-Phenix, Interstate and City Trust closed lower.

In the insurance group Aetna Casualty and Surety, United States Casualty and Springfield Fire and Marine were better. Northwestern National, Providence-Washington, National Fire, Home and Hartford Fire were on the down side.

In the chain store section Piggly Wiggly common featured the group with active trading taking place. Piggly Wiggly Western States A, G. C. Murphy common, Diamond Shoe common, Sanitary Grocery preferred and Metropolitan Chain common were all higher. J. J. Newberry declined.

Skelly Oil Buys 18 New Stations.

The Skelly Oil Company has purchased and is now operating the eighteen service stations in St. Paul and Minneapolis formerly owned by the Midwest Refining Company, giving the Skelly company thirty retail distributing stations in the Twin Cities.

LABOR DAY TRAVEL GAINED.

Pennsylvania Reports 18% Rise on Its Lines for Week-End Period.

The Pennsylvania Railroad issued yesterday an analysis of Labor Day travel over its lines which shows large increases in this traffic by comparison with the same date last year. The analysis covers travel over the Delaware River Bridge route between the Broad Street Station in Philadelphia and Atlantic City, between New York and Philadelphia, between New York and Atlantic City and between New York and North Jersey resorts from here to Point Pleasant, N. J.

In the four days from Friday to Monday 207,421 passengers traveled over these lines, against 176,221 passengers in the same period in 1927, an increase of 31,200 passengers, or 18 per cent. They were carried in 461 trains of 4,297 cars, against 432 trains and 3,936 cars last year. Pullman cars used on these lines in the holiday period totaled 297, against 240 last year.

ORDERS INCREASED FOR IRON AND STEEL

Consumers Reported Acting to Avoid Higher Prices Listed for Fourth Quarter.

RECORD FOR FALL EXPECTED

Test of New Quotations Awaited—Buyers Believe Concessions Will Be Made.

Buyers of both pig iron and steel are covering their needs more liberally than in recent months and the industry thus is emerging from the Summer in an unusually strong position, according to the weekly reviews of the iron and steel trade. Consumers of pig iron generally have been contracting for their fourth quarter requirements to escape advances in price, and users of finished steel have been accomplishing the same purpose, in a measure, by specifying heavily against expiring contracts.

Interest now centres in the effects of the higher quotations announced for the fourth quarter in shapes, plates, bars and sheets. This, together with the fixing of Sept. 10 as the closing date on releases against current contracts, has had the effect of driving in an unusually large volume of specifications. Taking account of the rising scale of production and demand in July and August, and the assured high rate of operations this month, the industry as a whole is said to be looking for a record third quarter.

Comments of Iron Age.

The Iron Age summarizes the market as follows:

"A real test of price advances for fourth quarter is necessarily deferred. While there is little interest in contracts for that period, some of the large buyers who have sounded out the mills on prices are confident that business in bars, plates and shapes will be accepted at 1.95c., and possibly 1.90c., Pittsburgh, as contrasted with the announced quotation of 2c. Although a failure to achieve advances aimed at would be repeating previous experiences of the mills this year, a price of 1.90c. would be $1 higher, and of 1.95c. $2 a ton higher, than the prevailing contract figure for the present quarter.

"The extent to which mills may succeed in increasing prices remains in doubt, but the volume of bookings, chiefly in specifications, leaves little to be desired. Although tinplate output has shown a seasonal decline to 75 per cent. of capacity, steel production as a whole is holding its own and may possibly gain in the course of the month. In sheets the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company had the largest August bookings and shipments since 1917.

"Sales of foundry and malleable grades at Cleveland totaled 40,000 tons, following bookings of 310,000 tons in the month of August. Buffalo reported 60,000 tons of pig iron sold, while the totals for the week at Philadelphia and Chicago were close to 50,000 tons each. At Chicago here the market was raised to $18, hace, last week, another increase of 50c. a ton is an expectation."

Opinions of Iron Trade Review.

The Iron Trade Review comments as follows:

"Not for several years, if ever, have many producers experienced a July and August of such proportions in bookings and production. It has been generally believed that this material was passing directly into consumption, represented an expansion of Summer rather than an anticipation of Fall requirements, and was not artificially stimulated by the threat of higher prices. Now, with the Summer holidays and vacations past and business supposedly normal the sureness of the market's footing will soon be revealed.

"'Labor Day caused little impairment of steel production. On a daily basis new business, though featureless, has been equal to the August rate.

"The aggregate of small orders from widely diversified sources is surprisingly high, while tonnage requirements from the automotive industry hold up as increased schedules of some manufacturers offset the curtailment of others. Several important pipe lines, one requiring 42,000 tons, may be placed this week. As the mills acquire moderate backlogs they are able to schedule rollings more economically."

Both of the Iron Age composite prices remain unchanged, that for pig iron at $17.34 a ton and that for finished steel at 2.348c. a pound.

Iron Trade Review composite of fourteen leading iron and steel products is up 1 cent this week to $35.11. For three consecutive weeks this index has been rising moderately.

INCREASE OF IRON PRODUCTION IN AUGUST

Pig-iron production in August, compiled from returns to The Iron Age, was 3,136,570 tons, or 101,180 tons per day, against 3,071,824 tons, or 99,091 tons per day, in July—a gain of 2,089 tons, or 2.1 per cent., in the daily rate. There was a net loss of two active furnaces in the month. However, the daily operating rate of the 183 active furnaces as of Sept. 1 is estimated at 98,730 tons, compared with 98,445 tons for the 185 stacks in blast Aug. 1, indicating a higher output per furnace. The loss in active furnaces was wholly in steel works stacks, merchant furnaces having shown a net gain of one.

The month's output during the last three years compares as follows, in tons:

CHANGES IN DIRECTORATES.

J. W. Platten Elected Chairman of Gulf States Steel Board.

Changes in the directors of four corporations were announced yesterday. M. L. Emerich, resident partner of Haligarten & Co. in Chicago, Walter Kasten, President of the First Wisconsin National Bank of Milwaukee, and Paul M. Mazur, a partner in Lehman Brothers, were added to the Board of the Kimberly-Clark Corporation. The election of these new directors gives representation on the company's board to the financial houses that offered the corporation's securities in July.

John W. Platten, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Gulf States Steel Company, was elected Chairman of the board to succeed the late James Bowron. William H. Cloverdale was elected President, and Leslie E. Geohegan, Vice President and General Manager, was elected a director.

Robert A. Fairbairn, a director and member of the Executive Committee of the National Biscuit Company, was elected a director of the International Combustion Engineering Corporation and a member of the Executive Committee. J. G. Eaton of Cleveland, member of Otis & Co., and G. C. Guthrie Hunter, Vice President of the International Combustion, were also added to the board.

Directors of the Hercules Powder Company have increased the board from seven to twelve members, the new members being L. N. Bent, C. A. Bigelow, C. A. Higgins, C. C. Hoopes and G. M. Norman. An Executive Committee was organized with R. H. Dunham as Chairman, and a Finance Committee with E. G. Rheuby as Chairman.

UTILITY EARNINGS

The American Water Works and Electric Company reports gross earnings for July as $4,059,626, and balance after operating expenses, maintenance and taxes as $1,904,686. This compares with gross earnings for July, last year, of $3,933,053, and balance, after the same charges, of $1,774,356.

For the twelve months ended on July 31 consolidated gross earnings of the company were $49,994,367, against $47,551,693 in the preceeding twelve months, an increase of $2,442,674. Net income available for dividends was $5,234,708, equivalent after first preferred dividends to $2.89 a share on 1,397,246 common shares outstanding. The net income for the preceding twelve months after similar charges amounted to $5,182,604, or $3.16 a common share on 1,328,219 shares which would have been outstanding upon the basis of the present capitalization.

American Natural Gas Corporation.

The American Natural Gas Corporation's consolidated income account for the six months ended on June 30, the first statement issued by the present management, shows gross revenues of $6,162,442. Operating expense, maintenance and general taxes, other than Federal income tax, amounted to $3,259,950, leaving a net operating income of $2,902,492 before depreciation and depletion. After interest on funded and unfunded debt, depreciation and depletion, dividends accrued on preferred stock of subsidiaries and minority stockholders' equity in earnings of the Oklahoma Natural Gas Corporation, there remained $1,381,887. After interest and dividends on American Natural Gas Corporation securities there was a balance of $781,577 available for amortization of debt discount and expense, Federal taxes and 651,300 shares on common stock.

Schulte-United Merger Seen Near.

The negotiations for a merger of the Schulte retail stores and the United Cigar Stores are nearing completion, according to Wall Street reports yesterday, although officials of each concern would neither confirm nor deny the reports. The merger would link 300 Schulte and 1,200 United Cigar Stores as well as 2,000 United Cigar agencies.

CORPORATION REPORTS

Monthly and Other Statements of Earnings of Industrial Companies.

Sales amounting to $459,628 were reported for August by Isaac Silver & Co., Inc., a chain store organization. This compares with sales of $398,632 in August last year, a gain this year of 16.7 per cent. Sales for the first eight months of 1928 were $3,599,036, against $3,093,808 for the same period in 1927, an increase of 16.3 per cent.

Dubilier Condenser Corp.

The Dubilier Condenser Corporation reports for the year ended June 30, 1928, net loss from operations of $131,356. Net sales were $1,663,900 and gross profit was $249,525, while selling and administrative expense amounted to $380,881. Total assets as of June 30, 1928, are placed in the balance sheet at $2,494,920. Current assets of $644,447 compared with current liabilities of $83,143.

City Stores Company.

City Stores Company for the quarter ended July 31, reports profit of $61,475 after reserve for depreciation, contingencies and deduction of minority stockholding interest, but before Federal taxes. This compares with a profit of $241,464 in the preceding quarter and a profit of $143,809 in the quarter ended July 30, 1927. Profit for the first six months of 1928 totaled $302,939 before Federal taxes, comparing with a profit of $411,780 in the same period of the previous year.

Alaska Juneau Gold Mining Company

The Alaska Juneau Gold Mining Company reports for August an estimated net income of $44,700 after interest and other charges, comparing with $60,350 in the preceding month. For the first eight months of the current year the estimated gross income is $2,240,500 and the estimated net income $715,600 after interest.

UTILITIES GENERALLY FIRM

Some irregularity developed on the Curb market yesterday, although a section of the list continued to advance but in a more conservative manner. The utilities were generally firm, while oils were mixed and industrials irregular. Several new highs were recorded, among them Checker Cab, Evans Loading B, International Printers Ink, Nichols & Shepard, Stutz Motor, Colgate Palmolive-Peet, United States Foil B and Safeway Stores.

In the utility section Electric Bond and Share, Electric Investors, American and Foreign Power warrants and first preferred, and Buffalo, Niagara and Eastern shares headed a rally, and other firm issues included United Gas Improvement, Southeastern Power and Light, Utility Shares, International Utilities B and American Superpower A. Penn-Ohio Edison and Commonwealth Edison eased.

Among the oils, Vacuum, Humble and Standard of Indiana gained, while Gulf Oil eased. Bancitaly was stronger, as were Wire Wheel, Timken-Detroit Axle, Columbia Graphophone, Industrial Rayon, Raybestos and St. Regis Paper.

Weak issues included General Baking, United States Asbestos, Safe-T-Stat, Niles-Bement-Pond, Grasselli Chemical, Bohn Aluminum and Piggly Wiggly among the recent leaders.

DUNBAR BANK CHARTERED.

Institution Founded by Rockefeller to Serve Negroes.

The new Dunbar National Bank, organized through the efforts of John D. Rockefeller Jr., received its charter yesterday from the Controller of the Currency in Washington. The bank is to be located in the Dunbar Apartments at 155th Street and Eighth Avenue, which Mr. Rockefeller erected for the occupancy of negroes. Like the apartments, the bank is intended chiefly for the use of negroes and will be operated to a great extent by members of that race.

The capital of the bank will be $500,000, with a paid in surplus of $540,000 or a total of $1,040,000. The directors will include John D. Rockefeller Jr., John D. Rockefeller 3d and Roscoe C. Bruce, the negro resident manager of the Dunbar Apartments. John D. Higgins will be President and George C. Loomis cashier.

PHILADELPHIA BANKS MERGE

Stockholders Approve $24,000,000 Consolidation of Three Institutions.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 5.—Stockholders of the Broad Street National Bank, the National Bank of North Philadelphia and the Oak Lane Trust Company voted today to merge their resources of $24,000,000 under the name of the Bank of Philadelphia and Trust Company. Each directorate had approved of the consolidation by unanimous vote.

Dr. Charles E. Beury, now President of the National Bank of North Philadelphia and President of Temple University, will be Chairman of the board of the combined institutions, and L. A. Lewis, now President of the Broad Street National Bank and of the Oak Lane Trust Company, will be President of the new bank. It will have ten branches.

Three National Banks Liquidated.

Announcement was made by the Controller of the Currency yesterday of the liquidation as national banks of the Bayside National Bank, the First National Bank of Whitestone and the Flushing National Bank. All three institutions were recently absorbed by the Bank of the Manhattan Company and are to be continued as branches of that organization. In preparation for the merger, they were changed to State banks, the word "National" being dropped from their corporate titles.

Bankers Will Play Golf.

The golf tournament of the American Bankers' Association will be held on Oct. 5 at the Philmont Country Club, near Philadelphia, in which city the association will hold its annual convention this year. The tournament will be open to all delegates.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The firm of Kirby, Reed & Co., Inc., has been formed with offices at 60 Broad Street, to deal in investment securities.

RAINS CAUSE RISE IN COTTON PRICES

Net Advance of 8 to 15 Points Made Despite Loss of Part of Earlier Gains.

SOUTHERNERS SELL HERE

Continued heavy rains in Atlantic States and the least favorably weekly weather report in the last two months exerted a strengthening influence on yesterday's cotton market. After an early gain of a dollar a bale, which carried October above 19 cents, a setback left final quotations on the Cotton Exchange with a gain of 8 to 15 points on the day.

While strength in Liverpool widened the spread between the foreign and local markets and created a demand for contracts in the first hour, an improvement of a quarter of a cent appeared to exhaust the buying power. When New Orleans came under a weight of contracts later in the day and sold in New York, prices eased off slowly under the execution of scattered Southern selling orders. Spot houses released October contracts 15 points over December, and hedging in distant deliveries continued on a scale to furnish all cotton wanted to supply the limited demand. Uncertainty over Saturday's Washington estimate which will be issued after the close of the Exchange restricted professional operations.

A Chicago firm raised the indicated yield from 14,894,000 bales last month to 15,016,000, while a New York commercial publication reduced the probable yield from 14,973,000 on Aug. 1 to 14,347,000 on Sept. 1. The average of thirteen estimates from private sources is about 14,500,000 bales, compared with 14,800,000 a month ago, when the Department of Agriculture placed the crop at 14,291,000.

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Prv.Day.
October	18.92	19.03	18.86	18.96-98	18.81-82
December	18.75	18.92	18.70	18.80-82	18.65-67

May	18.66	18.85	18.65	18.70-73	18.62-63
July	18.57	18.74	18.56	18.63n	18.52

The local spot market for cotton was steady, 20 points advance, to 19.25 for middling upland.

Southern spot markets were: Galveston 18.65, 15 points advance, sales 1,122 bales; New Orleans 18.70, 15 points advance, sales 2,382; Savannah 18.46, 14 points advance, sales 106; Augusta 18.63, 25 points advance, sales 435; Memphis 18.55, 15 points advance, sales 1,216; Houston 18.55, 15 points advance, sales 19,224; Little Rock 18.36, 14 points advance, sales 633; Dallas 18.00, 10 points advance, sales 14,962.

Yesterday's cotton statistics were:

	Yesterday.	Last Week.	Last Year.
Port receipts	60,353	25,537	56,346
Exports	56,879	24,277	5,682

Port stocks	521,115	470,251	1,171,538
N. Y. arrivals	1,598	194	900

Liverpool cables: Spot cotton, a fair business, 13 points decline to 10.52d for middling. Sales 8,000 bales; American 4,000. Imports 9,000; American 2,000. Futures opened quiet, 1 to 2 points decline; closed steady, 1 to 3 points advance. Prices: Oct. 9.97d, Dec. 9.86d, Jan. 9.86d, March 9.88d, May 9.90d, July 9.87d.

Manchester: Yarns dull. Cloths quiet.

WANTS CHECK ON OIL FUEL.

Head of Jersey Measures Body Says Public Needs Guard.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 5.—The checking up of liquid fuel dispensing equipment and the enactment of proper legislation to govern the sale of eggs and ice cream were urged by J. Harry Foley of Jersey City, President of the New Jersey Weights and Measures Association, in a speech before the opening session of the seventeenth annual convention of that organization at the Ritz-Carlton today.

Mr. Foley declared that enforcement officials were confronted with the necessity of providing a satisfactory means for checking up on the deliveries of fuel oil.

"The near future will undoubtedly bring forth extensive developments in fuel oil burning equipment that may cause a general lessening in the consumption of anthracite and other fuels," he said. "We, therefore, have to adopt the best procedure to be followed to properly protect the public in their purchase of this commodity.

"There also seems to be a demand on the part of dealers for measures that will speed up the delivery of crank case oil to cars. The manufacturers are willing to accede to this demand, and some have already placed upon the market measures which, while they may serve for speedy delivery, are at the same time detrimental to the interests of the motorists.

"Eggs are sold in New Jersey by numerical count. Our sister State, New York, specifies a certain weight for each individual egg. What is the result? They cull their eggs in New Jersey, send the large ones to New York, and our people take what is left, the small ones, and they pay the same price as our New York neighbors."

GETS $75,000 ALIEN TAXES.

Government Collects on Incomes Paid by Corporations Here.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—Examination of reports by corporations giving detailed information of payment of dividends to stockholders has resulted in the Government collecting more than $75,000 in income taxes from aliens in the last sixty days. L. F. Moss of the records division of the Internal Revenue Bureau, who made the report, added that the amount is expected to be augmented, as letters from alien stockholders indicated that no income tax returns had ever been filed.

In one case an alien who paid taxes of more than $300,000 to his own government on dividends received from American corporations was found to owe approximately $65,000 to this country. He had not been aware that he owed income taxes in this country.

Employes Buy Best & Co. Stock.

Purchase of 7,500 shares of Best & Co. common stock for account of about fifty executives, buyers and department heads was announced yesterday by Philip Le Boutillier, President and General Manager of the company. The purchase was made in the open market at considerably less than prevailing prices. Participants in the syndicate have paid 25 per cent. of the cost, and the balance is payable in four equal annual instalments.

WEATHER FOR THE WEEK NOT GOOD FOR COTTON

Rain Delays Wheat Threshing in North Dakota and Minnesota —Corn Safe From Frost.

The weekly weather report issued yesterday by the Government was as follows:

"Weather for the week was in general rather unfavorable for cotton, as further rain in the eastern portion of the belt and in some Gulf sections was detrimental, and the rainfall was insufficient to relieve drought in parts of Texas. In the Carolinas progress was mostly fair, but there were increasing reports of shedding, and cloudy, wet weather favored increase of weevil activity.

"In Georgia progress was very irregular, mostly good in the north and in scattered localities elsewhere, but crops deteriorated where there was too much rain. Continued shedding of young bolls was noted. Warm, dry weather is generally badly needed. In Tennessee progress was fair to very good, with plants fruiting well, but with some shedding.

"In Alabama and Mississippi the advance was poor to only fair, with deterioration in some sections, and considerable shedding, reports of rotting bolls, and the condition favorable for weevil. Frequent rains were unfavorable in Louisiana. In Arkansas progress was mostly good in the north, but in central and southern portions ranged from deterioration to only fair. In Oklahoma cotton is badly spotted, ranging from poor to only good.

"Weekly progress was mostly poor, with much shedding reported. In Texas progress and condition were also spotted, ranging from poor in some drier central and southern sections, with bolls small and considerable shedding, to very good in parts of the north and west. There were local rains in nearly all parts, but very irregular and unevenly distributed, with picking interrupted in some wetter sections.

"Corn made fair to good advance in the Ohio Valley, but there are some local areas where it is too dry; the crop is probably safe from frost damage in Illinois, and some is safe in Indiana. In Iowa progress was fair. Rain was needed for late corn in Nebraska. In Kansas the crop is ripening fast and is considered safe from frost. Condition and progress were excellent in Missouri. Early corn is matured in Oklahoma.

"Mostly fair advance was made in the South and the crop was good in the East. Poor to good growth was indicated in Northern States, with warmth and sunshine needed in the northern part of the Great Plain area.

"There was some delay by rain to threshing in North Dakota, and work was practically at a standstill in Minnesota, but elsewhere in the Spring wheat belt threshing made good advance. Considerable plowing for Winter wheat was accomplished, although this work was delayed in Nebraska, and plowing is difficult in Kansas. Part of the Ohio Valley still needs rain. Seeding of Winter wheat was begun in the western third of Kansas. Frequent rain interrupted threshing of rice in the lower Mississippi Valley and West Gulf section. Conditions were favorable for buckwheat in the Appalachian Mountain section."

NOTICE.
THE SPANISH RIVER PULP AND PAPER MILLS, LIMITED, IN LIQUIDATION.
ONTARIO PULP & PAPER COMPANY, LIMITED.

To the holders of Six Per Cent. First Mortgage Sinking Fund Gold Bonds of Ontario Pulp & Paper Company, Limited, issued and secured under Deed of Trust and Mortgage dated the 1st day of January, 1912, between Ontario Pulp & Paper Company, Limited, and The Royal Trust Company, Trustee, and assumed by The Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, Limited, by virtue of an instrument dated the 2nd day of July, 1912, made between the said Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, Limited, and the said The Royal Trust Company pursuant to the provisions of said Deed of Trust and Mortgage.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that, pursuant to the provisions of the Deed of Trust and Mortgage, dated the First day of January, 1912, between Ontario Pulp & Paper Company, Limited, and The Royal Trust Company, Trustee, securing said Bonds and the Deed supplemental thereto, dated the 15th day of January, 1915, between The Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, Limited, and The Royal Trust Company, Trustee, the above mentioned 6% First Mortgage Sinking Fund Gold Bonds of Ontario Pulp & Paper Company, Limited, have become redeemable at 110 per cent. of the principal amount thereof and interest accrued to the date of redemption, and that GODFREY T. CLARKSON of Toronto, the undersigned Liquidator of the said Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, Limited, has fixed the First day of October, 1928, as the date of redemption of said Bonds.

Holders of Sterling Bonds are hereby required to deliver their Bonds with all unmatured interest coupons and, unless detached pursuant to the agreement dated May 1st, 1922, between The Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, Limited, and the said Trustee, with all unpaid dividend coupons pertaining thereto for surrender and payment on said redemption date at the office of the Bank of Montreal in the City of London, England, or at the agency of said Bank in the City of New York, U. S. A., or at the office of The Royal Trust Company in the City of Toronto or the City of Montreal, and upon such surrender for payment the holders of the said Sterling Bonds will be paid the principal amount thereof plus 10 per cent. premium with accrued interest to the said date of redemption in English Sterling if presented for payment in London, England, or if presented for payment in Montreal or Toronto in gold coin (if demanded) of the present standard of weight and fineness forming legal tender in Canada, or if presented for payment in New York in gold coin (if demanded) of the United States of America, at the fixed rate of exchange of $4.86 2-3 to the Pound Sterling in full payment and satisfaction of the liability of the Company under said Sterling Bonds and coupons.

Holders of Currency Bonds payable in dollars are hereby required to deliver their Bonds with all unmatured interest coupons and, unless detached pursuant to the agreement dated May 1st, 1922, between The Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills, Limited, and the said Trustee, with all unpaid dividend coupons pertaining thereto for surrender and payment on the said redemption date at the office of The Royal Trust Company in the Cities of Montreal or Toronto, or at the agency of the Bank of Montreal in the City of New York, N. Y., and upon such surrender for payment the holders of the said Currency Bonds will be paid the principal amount thereof plus 10 per cent. premium with accrued interest to the said redemption date in gold coin (if demanded) of the present standard of weight and fineness forming legal tender in Canada if presented for payment in Montreal or Toronto, or in gold coin of the United States of America of the present standard of weight and fineness if presented for payment in New York, in full payment and satisfaction of the liability of the Company under said Currency Bonds and coupons.

In case any Bondholder shall neglect or refuse to deliver up his Bonds and coupons as aforesaid at the time and place fixed for redemption thereof or shall neglect or refuse to accept payment of the redemption money payable in respect of such Bonds, the moneys payable to such Bondholder will be set aside in the name of the trustee and the trustee will deposit the moneys so set aside in the Bank of Montreal, Toronto, at the current rate of interest in trust for such Bondholder and such setting aside shall be deemed for all purposes a payment to such Bondholder and shall avail for the cancellation of such Bonds and as a sufficient authorization to the Company to cancel the entry relating to such Bonds and to the Trustee to discharge the security in respect thereof, and interest on such Bonds shall cease to accrue as and from the said redemption date.

WHEAT PRICES OFF IN EASY MARKET

FOREIGN DEMAND IS SLOW

Corn Rallies on Favorable Reports and Closes at a Slight Gain—Oats Are Firmer.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—The wheat market showed an easy undertone today. Hedging pressure from the Northwest was in evidence, and with a slow outside trade prices declined. The finish was at the bottom, with net losses of ⅞ to 1 cent. At the inside the September was within 1¼ cents of the lowest figure on the crop and the December only 1⅝ cents above where it sold several weeks ago. While the movement this side of the line is not large, there is a rapid increase in the arrival of new grain in the prairie provinces, with deliveries at country points for two days aggregating 2,660,000 bushels, against 2,200,000 bushels last year. At the same time the foreign demand remains distinctly slow, with sales of 300,000 to 400,000 bushels in all positions, largely Manitobas.

A bearish construction was placed on a Broomhall summary indicating that the action of the Canadian and Australian pools during the past few years in holding up prices had resulted in an increased acreage in all of the leading exporting countries. Murray estimated the crop of the Northern Hemisphere at 3,195,000,000 bushels, against 3,059,000,000 bushels last year and a five-year average of 2,885,000,000 bushels. The yield in the prairie provinces is estimated at 508,000,000 bushels, and for all Canada at 530,000,000 bushels, or 90,000,000 bushels in excess of 1927. Winnipeg showed more resistance to pressure than did Chicago and was off only ⅝ cent for the day. Liverpool closed ⅛ to ¼ penny lower.

Primary arrivals today, 2,327,000 bushels; week ago, 2,369,000 bushels; last year, 2,363,000 bushels. Shipments, 1,704,000 bushels; week ago, 2,053,000 bushels; last year, 2,477,000 bushels.

September corn was easy early on scattered selling by longs, but an advance of 1 to 2 cents in the basis in the sample market and reports that leading holders had made liberal shipping sales in addition to 158,000 bushels disposed of by other handlers led to buying and a rally of 1⅞ cents from the inside figure. Deferred futures also firmed up toward the last and the close was at net gains of ⅝ to ¾ cent. Murray estimated the new crop at 3,088,000,000 bushels, or 58,000,000 bushels more than the Government August figures, and compared with 2,774,000,000 bushels last year. The average of the five leading statisticians' reports is 3,072,000,000 bushels.

Primary arrivals today, 1,041,000 bushels; week ago, 655,000 bushels; last year, 1,137,000 bushels. Shipments, 665,000 bushels; week ago, 749,000 bushels; last year, 741,000 bushels.

Oats finished ⅛ cent higher to ¼ cent lower, with September showing the most strength, and it gained fractionally on the December, closing at 1⅝ cents under. Duluth sold rye here while locals bought and sold wheat, closing spreads. The finish was ½ to ⅞ cent lower.

Prices for the principal grains were as follows:

GRAIN EXPORT INCREASES.

Last Week's Shipment 1,638,000 Bushels Larger Than Year Ago.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5 (AP).—Grain exports from the United States last week were 7,576,000 bushels as against 6,660,000 the week before and 6,138,000 in the corresponding week of 1927.

Commerce department figures today gave the following comparisons between last week's exports and those of the previous week. Wheat, 2,782,000 bushels against 3,266,000; rye, 222,000 against 69,000; oats, 1,265,000 against 800,000; corn, 209,000 against 138,000; barley, 3,076,000 against 2,387,000.

Canadian grains exported last week through United States ports amounted to 1,494,000 bushels against 1,954,000 the week before, while exports of North American wheat flour were 252,000 barrels against 169,000 barrels the week before.

COMMODITY AVERAGE DECLINED IN AUGUST

Price Index Lowest Since End of April—Above 1927 and 1926.

The index number of average commodity prices at the end of August, published yesterday by Dun's Review, showed decrease of about one-tenth of 1 per cent., and it showed that a progressive decline in the average has occurred in each month since the year's high point was reached at the end of April. As compared with a year ago, however, the average shows an increase of 3 per cent., and was nearly 4½ per cent. higher than at the beginning of September, 1926.

COMMODITY PRICES.

Cash Grains Decline—Lard at New High—Cotton Up—Other Articles Firm.

Cash grains reacted in yesterday's cash markets, following unsettlement in the contract options. Lard was strong and at a new high for the year, cotton also moving forward. Groceries, dairy products, metals and other articles were unchanged.

SUGAR, COFFEE, COCOA.

Sugar.

Sugar future prices on the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange displayed a slightly easier tendency yesterday during a quiet trading session. Initial quotations were unchanged to 2 points lower. Later in the day the list encountered better support from brokers with trade connections and prices were slightly higher. In the refined section business was small and uninteresting. The market closed unchanged to 2 points lower.

Coffee.

Scattered short covering and commission house buying characterised the coffee futures market yesterday. Indications were that the Coffee Defense Committee in Brazil had the raw coffee situation well in hand. The A contracts opened from 2 to 5 points higher, while the D contracts were 1 to 13 points higher. Business on the whole was small. Conditions in the local spot markets were slightly firmer with Rio 7s quoted at 17 to 17¼ cents. The A contracts closed from 1 point lower to 5 points higher, while the D contracts were from 5 to 15 points lower.

Cocoa.

Trading in cocoa futures on the New York Cocoa Exchange was fairly active yesterday. The market opened from 8 to 23 points lower, due to the petering out of arbitraging operations between here and Europe. The market recovered slightly, but at the close was 9 to 25 points lower. December and March were sold heavily by local dealers. The demand for actual cocoa was quiet, with spots quoted at 11¼ cents. The turnover consisted of 152 lots or 2,037 tons.

SUGAR STUDY BOARD NAMED

Will Consider Plan of Chemical Research to Cut Refining Costs.

A committee to consider a plan for chemical research as applied to the refining of raw sugar was appointed yesterday by James H. Post, executive head of the Sugar Institute, Inc. The research is to be directed toward the finding of means for reducing the cost of sugar refining. Rudolph Spreckels, President of the Federal Sugar Refining Company, is to be Chairman of the committee, while the other members will be W. Edward Foster, President of the American Sugar Refining Company, and W. H. Hoodless, Vice President of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company.

Great advances have been made in the last fifty years in the processes employed in the refining branch of the industry, Mr. Spreckels said yesterday, but the possibilities of equally great advances remain.

"At the present time," he added, "approximately 92 to 93 pounds of refined sugar is obtained from every 100 pounds of the raw product. New processes, which would increase the yield, would result in a substantial reduction of costs. Immense quantities of animal charcoal, or bone char, are now required to filter the sugar in its liquid states. The discovery of a less expensive and perhaps even more satisfactory material is a goal which there is no reason to believe is unattainable.

"While for a number of years practically all the large sugar refiners have maintained their own research laboratories, by reason of the expense they have been limited in scope and progress in improvement has been slow. The research to be initiated by the Sugar Institute will be in effect a coordination of effort and should produce results accordingly."

1,500 Barrels an Hour From Oil Well

The Skelly Oil Company's Hendrick No. 12 in Winkler County, Texas, which came in several days ago at 500 barrels of crude an hour, has been deepened twelve feet and is now flowing at 1,500 barrels an hour, or 31,200 barrels a day. It is said to be the largest well at the present time in the United States.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Butter.

Receipts Sept. 4, 24,868 packages. Market held steady with practically no change in values. A moderate amount of business passing but demand not quite as snappy as it was at the close of last week. Quite a number of the buyers seem to have bought some stock ahead. With the return of so many from summer resorts, consumptive demand should improve materially.

DRESSED.

Of the 68 freight cars in or due yesterday about 63 cars were unloaded, approximately 37 cars are due today and 'tis'ings up to Friday night total 195 freight cars. Chickens and heavy fowls favored sellers and most business was being effected on a premium basis. Old roosters scarce and wanted. Ducks higher in order to attract stock this way. Geese also advanced.

Huth Fur Offering Large.

Six days will be required to dispose of the $4,000,000 offering of raw furs that has been assembled for sale here by Frederick Huth & Co. at their Fall auction. Due to Jewish holidays the sales dates are somewhat split up, sessions being scheduled for Sept. 10, 20, 21, 26, 26 and 27. The goods will be on show Sept. 13, 14 and 17, and from then until they are sold. According to General Manager J. M. Bossack, several collections of domestic furs run much larger than in the Fall sale of 1927. Particularly sharp increases are seen in Northern muskrat, raccoon, wolf and silver fox. The white fox collection, on the other hand, is substantially smaller.

To Make Drapery Survey.

A survey of the trend of sales of fabrics going into home decoration, particularly draperies and upholsteries, was decided upon yesterday at a meeting of an Advisory Committee of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, headed by William A. Fitzgerald. The study will cover the year ended July 31 last. Field work will begin immediately and 100 stores throughout the country will be visited to gain first-hand information. The survey will be made by Alexis Sommaripa and Jane Hill. It is expected the report will be ready about Dec. 1.

After Children's Shoes Now.

An excellent "at once" delivery business with retailers in the metropolitan area is being done this week by local wholesalers of children's footwear. The reasons are the approaching opening of the schools in Greater New York and the unwillingness shown by many retailers to anticipate their needs a little earlier in the season. Other features are lacking, there being little in current business in adults' footwear of the more popular price types to distinguish it from that placed during the last couple of months. August volume, while fair, was none too satisfactory. Nor have the year's sales been to date with most houses.

Fabric Meetings Next Week.

Three group meetings of the Wool Institute are scheduled for next week. They comprise: Sept. 11, men's wear worsteds; Sept. 12, women's wear woolens and worsteds, and Sept. 13, men's wear woolens. It is expected that at the women's wear group discussion of Spring openings will take place. On Sept. 12 Maurice Dubrulee of Mathan & Dubrulle, Turcoing, one of the largest worsted manufacturers in France, will be the guest of the directors and officers of the institute at a dinner at the Union League Club. Colonel F. Vernon Willey of London will also be a guest.

Women's Glove Prices Firm.

The price situation in women's gloves is very firm, reflecting the quotations being made by European producers. It is claimed that orders for late Fall delivery will carry an advance. Kid gloves maintain strong leadership over the fabric types, sellers reporting that considerable business in the latter is yet to come. The favored styles in both kinds include both slip-ons and fancy cuff numbers, with gray, beaver, mode, Havana and biscuit among the popular shades. Wholesalers here will shortly offer their Spring lines on the road.

Pacific Opens Worsted Fancies.

Lines of fabrics for Spring were opened yesterday by the men's wear worsted department of Pacific Mills. All worsted fancies of the 9,600 range, half-blood quality, including skein dyes, compound mixtures and vigoreux mixtures, were priced from $2.50 to $2.62½ net, 60 days. The prices are unchanged from Fall. The weights range from 12 to 12½ ounces.

Raw Silk Levels Unchanged.

Yesterday's settlements for raw silk in Japan were made on the basis of 1,285 yen, with resters showing resistance to buyers' requests for lower levels. Yen exchange, however, advanced to 46¾, thus offsetting the decline. Local prices were $4.95 for crack XX and $4.70 for XX, according to E. Gerli & Co., Inc. Cantons continued firm at $4.10 for 14-18s and $3.90 for 20-22s. Fluctuations in these sorts have been at a minimum for some time. Tussahs were steady at $2, the bulk of the demand being confined to the Far East.

Burlap Prices Drop Sharply.

Sharp declines in burlap prices in this market during the past week, both in spot and future goods, have resulted from the "softness" developed among speculative groups in Calcutta on Monday and Tuesday. Yesterday that market stiffened somewhat, but not enough to have any material effect on prices. Quotations on spots here fell 20 to 30 points for the week, while those on futures declined from 20 to 25 points. Consumer buying was checked by the decline. These prices were quoted here yesterday by C. E. Rockstroh & Co., Inc., on standard 40-inch burlaps:

	8 Oz.	10½ Oz.
Spots	7.95c	10.20c
September shipment	7.60c	10.15c
October-December shipment	7.35c	9.90c
January-March shipment	7.05c	9.20c

No Spring Gingham Prices Yet.

Despite the fact that recent weeks have seen a steady broadening of the demand for the more staple lines of Fall ginghams, indications here yesterday were that prices on Spring lines could not be expected for some time. Neither the cutters-up nor the jobbers appear interested in the new season yet, and there is said to be little evidence that the former will ask about prices for the next thirty days or so. The jobbers will probably act still later. Two years ago the leading Eastern line of ginghams was priced for Spring about Sept. 15, but prices on this line last year were deferred until late in October.

Gray Goods Buying Better.

Gray goods buying broadened somewhat here yesterday. In the printcloths there was further buying of 39-inch 72-76s at 9¼ cents, 39-inch 68-72s at 8¾ cents, a few actual spots of 35½-inch 64-60s at 7½ cents and some 38½-inch 60-48s at 6¼ cents. For 37-inch 48-square, 4-yard sheetings buyers paid 8¾ cents, and they also took 36-inch 5-yard goods at 6½ cents. Business in drills was done on the basis of 8¼ cents for 37-inch 3.95s. Buying of broadcloths was not so active as on Tuesday, but among the sales were additional "non-feeler" 50-60s at 8½ cents.

THE CUSTOMS COURT

U. S. Applies for a Rehearing on Carbon Blocks—Special Diamond Hearing.

Application for a rehearing of evidence in the decision involving over $1,000,000 in duty on imported carbon blocks has been made by attorneys for the Government to the United States Customs Court. The case, which has been a matter of Customs Court litigation for over ten years, was decided recently when the court upheld protests of the Morganite Brush Company against placing United States values on the blocks for the purposes of duty.

Judge J. B. Sullivan of the United States Customs Court will hold a special hearing on Friday on an application for reappraisement on a shipment of diamonds imported into this country by the Extein Diamond Company of St. Louis. The hearing will be the first in Customs Court since adjournment was taken for the Summer. Regular court sessions will start next Monday.

Yesterday's Decisions.

Protests of the Saydah Importing Company of New York against a duty of 90 per cent. assessed against a shipment of embroidered articles under the first part of paragraph 1,430, are sustained in part, in a decision made public yesterday. The bulk of the goods are held dutiable at 70 per cent. under the latter part of the same paragraph.

The other decisions yesterday were:

DRESSED DOLLS, appraised at 90 per cent., under par. 1,430, as articles in part of net and lace, held dutiable at 70 per cent. under par. 1,414, as in chief value papier-mache. George S. Bush & Co., Portland, Ore.

EMBROIDERED ARTICLES, appraised at 90 per cent., under paragraph 1,430, held dutiable at 75 per cent. under last part of same paragraph. Marshall Field & Co.

HANDKERCHIEFS, hemstitched and embroidered, appraised at 90 per cent., under par. 1,430; part held dutiable at 75 per cent. (par. 1,016) and balance at 75 per cent. under latter part of par. 1,430. A. J. Brasher & Co., New York.

STATUARY, appraised of 20 per cent. under par. 1,440 affirmed. Free entry claim as first or second replicas of ordinals (par. 1,704) denied. F. B. Vandegrift & Co., Philadelphia.

PRICE BATHING SUIT LINES.

The principal surprise of the opening of leading 1929 lines of bathing suits here yesterday was furnished by the Malden Knitting Mills, which offered its men's, boys', women's, misses' and juveniles' ribbed suits at the same prices as for 1928. They are featuring men's and women's ribbed suits in regular and "speed" models at $16.50 a dozen and boys' and misses' suits at $13.50. A flat suit for men and women is offered at $14.50, as well as a complete line of novelties and juvenile health suits. The Malden concern is understood to have purchased its 1929 wool four months ago.

Agents for some of the higher-priced lines were unwilling to give out quotations, and in some cases they were said not yet to be available. It was learned, however, that certain lines, which at last year's opening ranged from $24 up, show advances for 1928, which range from 7½ to 10 per cent. In some cases the rise touches 15 per cent., it was said. In these lines emphasis is put very largely on ribbed suits in novelty colors and patterns, both in the California and step-in types. One of the best-known lines has a new ribbed number in it of such fine gauge that it has the "feel" of silk. Prices on this line were not available for publication yesterday.

PIANO SALESROOMS UNITED.

American Company Will Display Four Kinds in Ampico Tower.

The consolidation of the retail departments of the four divisions of the American Piano Company—Knabe, Chickering, Mason & Hamlin and the Foster Armstrong companies—was announced yesterday by Berthold Neter, Vice President of the the Knabe Piano Company, who will be in charge of the combined show rooms in the new Ampico Tower Building at Fifth Avenue and Forty-seventh Street. The change, which will take place next Monday, involves the discontinuance of Chickering Hall, erected four years ago at 27 West Fifty-seventh Street, and of the Mason & Hamlin retail establishment, located for the last twenty years at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-second Street.

The amalgamation of the piano houses of Chickering & Sons of Boston and the William Knabe Company took place about twenty years ago, when the American Piano Company was formed. The Mason & Hamlin Company of Boston joined the organization four years ago. The Foster-Armstrong Piano Company of Rochester has been associated with the larger concern for several years.

Daily concerts by the Goldman Band from 4 to 6 o'clock will mark the opening week of the consolidation. New features announced in connection with the retail establishment include a central ticket agency for concerts and opera, a music teachers' registry and a bureau of information concerning the engagement of artists.

BUSINESS BUILDING ON 47TH ST. IS SOLD

EAST SIDE HOUSE SOLD

Mrs. Henry A. Griffen Disposes of Residence to a Banker—Other Manhattan Sales.

The six-story business building at 617-623 West Forty-seventh Street was purchased yesterday by Herbert McLean Purdy, head of the real estate brokerage firm of Herbert McLean Purdy & Co. The purchase was made by Mr. Purdy from the P. G. Corporation and was for his own account.

The building has a frontage of 100 feet and a similar depth. The transaction was an all cash one, Mr. Purdy paying $250,000 for the property. His own firm acted as broker in the transaction.

Mrs. Henry A. Griffen has sold the five-story residence at 115 East Seventy-third Street to a banker, who will occupy it after alterations. The house is twenty-seven feet wide and contains an elevator. The negotiations were carried on by cable, the broker being the Worthington Whitehouse Company, Inc.

In the Yorkville section, Louis Dresen sold to Estelle Wohlgemuth for investment the five-story tenement at 429 East Eighty-first Street, near Avenue A. The building accommodates twenty-two families. Lowenfeld & Luxenberg were the brokers in the sale of the property. They recently sold 306 East Seventy-eighth Street and 420 East Eightieth Street to Mrs. Wohlgemuth for investment.

The five-story tenement house at 502 West 133d Street, adjoining the southwest corner of Amsterdam Avenue, has been sold by Ida Bogach to a client of McClarey Brothers, brokers. A resale of the property is pending.

Jacob Goodman, operator, disposed of the five-story apartment house at 157-159 Edgecombe Avenue, between 142d and 143rd Streets. The buyer was William F. King. Paris H. Qualles and Willis A. Larke were the brokers.

The Alliance Realty Company, Clark G. Dailey, President, resold 1,409 York Avenue, southeast corner of Seventy-fifth Street, two five-story tenements.

Caroline I. Gross and others sold to Valtract Realty, Inc., the five-story house at 53 West Eleventh Street.

PREPARE FOR MOVING DAY.

Warehouse Men to Concentrate on Local Jobs—Rising Rate Scale.

Preparations to handle the household effects of numerous families whose leases on apartments expire the end of this month are well under way, according to local warehouse and van men yesterday.

Moving companies which maintain local and long distance services are discontinuing temporarily their out-of-town hauling to meet the increased demands locally.

No general increase in rates over those prevailing last year is expected. The regular rate, as given by a large Manhattan warehouse concern yesterday, is $10 an hour for a van and four men. This is increased twice during the month, to cover overtime pay to the movers. From Sept. 17 to 25 the rate is $14 an hour. The peak price is from Sept. 25 to Oct. 2, when the rate is $15. After Oct. 2 the normal rate prevails.

According to the Secretary of the Van Owners' Association of Greater New York, Inc., the minimum rate for a van and three men at present is $7. After Sept. 15 overtime increases the cost from $8.50 to $14 an hour. The average moving job, he said, takes from three to four hours, making the cost at the minimum rate from $21 to $28. Delays due to inadequate elevator facilities in apartment houses increase the number of hours, and consequently flat rates for moving goods into apartments no longer are made.

The van men advocate lease expirations at three or four dates during the year, instead of mainly on Sept. 30, as at present. The former system, now in effect in Chicago, has reduced congestion considerably, it was said.

REALTY FINANCING.

General.

At the weekly meeting of its Mortgage Committee the Title Guarantee and Trust Company approved 106 loans amounting to $1,254,500, distributed as follows: Manhattan and Bronx, $584,000; Brooklyn, Queens, Nassau and Suffolk, $700,500.

Resale on East 76th Street.

Louis Baumgarten resold 424 East Seventy-sixth Street, a five-story tenement, to Siegbert Pflaster, owner of the adjoining tenement, 426 East Seventy-sixth Street. Mr. Baumgarten recently acquired 424 East Seventy-sixth Street from the Seiler estate. The J. W. Gerrish Company, Inc., acted as broker in both transactions.

Henry Clews Estate Sells House on West 51st Street

The estate of Henry Clews, represented by James B. Clews, executor, has sold to an investor, through Frederick Fox & Co., Inc., as brokers, the large residence at 27 West Fifty-first Street, which has been occupied, until recently, by Mrs. Henry Clews. The house is built on a lot 28 feet, with a depth of 100 feet, and is one of the finest residences west of Fifth Avenue.

The purchaser will probably alter the building into stores and suites. The buyer was represented by Davis, Symmes & Schreiber and the Clews estate by Parsons, Closson & McIlvaine.

BRONX PROPERTIES SOLD

New Dealings in Improved and Unimproved Holdings.

The four-family brick house containing fifteen rooms at 2,147 Chatterton Avenue was sold by Levy & Levy to Vito Vitalli through A. Sobel and the Jolles Company, brokers.

WESTCHESTER DEALS

Transactions in the County as Reported Yesterday

Colonel Jason S. Joy of Hollywood, Cal., sold to W. D. Virtue of New York City a parcel at the corner of Mendotta and Seneca Streets in the Apawamis section of Rye. E. V. Siedle was the broker.

Honor Paul bought a lot adjoining his residence on Cortlandt Court, Rochelle Heights, New Rochelle, from Rena Kotzen. Mrs. Clifford A. Wolf arranged the sale.

ABANDON MUSSOLINI CITY.

M. J. Gordon Says Opposition Caused Cancellation of Land Sale.

The plan to build a city in Westchester County near Briarcliff Manor as a memorial to the Fascist leader, Benito Mussolini, has been abandoned, owing to strenuous opposition by citizens and civic organizations.

Last July Milton J. Gordon, a real estate operator with offices in the Graybar Building, announced that he had sold a large tract of land to a syndicate headed by John W. Gugliucci for $1,000,000 cash.

The announcement aroused the real estate men of the county, as well as the property owners in the vicinity of the proposed city. The Italian Consul at the time said that the plan did not have the sanction of either the Italian Government or Mussolini.

In the meantime it was stated that plans were being prepared and a number of lot sales were reported by the promoters.

Little real progress was made from a development standpoint, however, and yesterday it was said that the entire scheme had been abandoned.

Mr. Gordon could not be found at his office, but his secretary said that the contract of sale with Mr. Gugliucci had been canceled, owing to the opposition the plan had aroused.

FOUR DOWNTOWN LEASES.

Printing Firms Take Space in the Tyrrel Building.

Four companies in the printing and allied trades leased space in the Tyrrel Building, now under construction at the southwest corner of Greenwich and Carlisle Street, it was announced yesterday. The building is a nine-story structure and is being erected by Benjamin H. Tyrrel, Inc., law printers.

In the leases just completed the Cresset Company, Inc., electrotypers, will occupy the entire sixth floor and part of the fifth floor; Baxter & Spencer, the balance of the fifth floor; David Gildea, Inc., the entire fourth floor, and the Hardingham Press, Inc., the third floor. The second floor is the only remaining loft not leased.

The four leases announced yesterday are all for twenty-one years and were arranged by Louis W. Goldstein, broker. The Charles F. Noyes Company is managing agent of the building. The steel frame of the building was completed about a month ago, and it is expected the structure will be ready for occupancy about Dec. 1. The building is being erected to provide space for printing and allied concerns doing business in the downtown and financial districts.

BUSINESS LEASES.

Whitehouse & Hardy, Inc., store and basement at 20 East Forty-second Street for long term from Childs Company at rental aggregating $500,000; Albert E. Ashforth, Inc., broker. The present restaurant is to be discontinued immediately and space converted into a men's shoe shop.

Adds to Holdings in Elmhurst.

William Wiegand and F. J. Carberry have sold to Angelo Paino a plot 50 by 145 feet on the south side of Queens Boulevard, Elmhurst, running through to Old Road and opposite a motion-picture theatre under construction. The parcel adjoins Mr. Paino's holdings to the east. Fred G. Randall was the broker.

Getting Ready for the "Hop Off"

FAMOUS AVIATORS seek advice of weather experts.

Of almost equal importance is the advice and counsel of trained experts in real estate to owners contemplating big operations.

Our success may be measured in the fact that we assembled the sites for many of New York's prominent structures, among them Sherry's (300 Park Avenue), The Roosevelt, the Dorset, the Drake, the Savoy-Plaza, Steinway Hall and the new Madison Square Garden.

Every branch of this business is operated at your service with the same intensive specialization.

A. James B. Murphy Auction

Motoring through the Blue Book

Not really, yet it seems like that when one drives to the LARCHMONT SHOREFRONT. For here is a restricted waterfront residential park—the former MURRAY ESTATE—on Larchmont Harbor adjoining the famous Larchmont Yacht Club and in the heart of the exclusive Larchmont shore colony. On every hand are the estates of E. F. Albee, S. F. Rothschild, Wilmer W. Salmon, W. C. Hubbard, Supreme Court Justice Clarke and a host of others prominent in business, society, literature, fashion and art.

NOW—An Amazing Opportunity

Is presented you to purchase property in this unexcelled Westchester Sound Shore community—for homesites or investment—at bargain prices of your own making, for the Owners of the former MURRAY ESTATE on the Larchmont Shorefront are closing out their holdings. Send for illustrated booklet and get the full story.

An Apartment Hotel with HANGING GARDENS

Atop the skyscrapers, ivy grows green. Small fountains splash. The noise of the street recedes to a murmur. There is always a breeze. Come up while you can. Penthouses get fewer everyday.

Eighteen stories above the street, the penthouse at The Dryden. Five rooms and three baths—a whole floor, with private terraces the full width of the building, facing north and south. Intelligently planned. View unusually fine. Smaller balconies from the 10th floor up. 1, 2 and 3 room suites, furnished or not, $1440 up. Complete hotel service.

TO ASSIGN NO BLAME IN SINKING OF TUG

Inspectors Withhold Decision on Cause of Loss of Volunteer in River.

WHISTLE SIGNALS MIXED

Board Understood to Hold That Collision Which Cost One Life Was Accidental.

Investigation to determine the causes of the sinking of the tug Volunteer last week was concluded yesterday at the Custom House by the local board of the United States Steamboat Inspection Service with the testimony of two witnesses, who substantially corroborated the statements of other witnesses examined at previous hearings.

Although a decision cannot be announced until next week after the members of the board, Captain G. T. Charlton, Inspector of Hulls, and W. H. Powers, Inspector of Boilers, have reviewed the transcript of testimony, it was understood that blame would be attached to no one.

The accident occurred in the East River on Aug. 28, when the tug was in collision with the New England Line steamer Chester W. Chapin. One man, a deckhand, was drowned in the swirling waters of Hell Gate after the tug crossed the bow of the Chapin when whistle signals were misinterpreted. The sharp bow of the Chapin rammed the Volunteer and the deckhand was thrown into the water.

Following the testimony yesterday of John Leopardi, Captain of the tug Bronx 2, which was in the vicinity of the crash, he was praised by Inspector Powers for the rescue of several men of the tug crew. Mr. Powers agreed with Captain Charlton that the accident was apparently a result of misunderstanding of signals. Captain Charlton said:

"This is an unusual case, where the testimony on all sides agrees perfectly—both the interested and disinterested testimony. There is usually considerable conflict in accounts of such an accident."

The only other witness was Antone Henriquez, mate of the Chapin, who told how the lifeboats were lowered as soon as the Chapin was beached. He said the crew got the boats down in a hurry, but the men from the Volunteer had been picked up by Captain Leopardi's crew, assisted by the crew of a near-by yacht.

A stenographer who will prepare the transcript for review of the hearing said yesterday it would be ready in a week and after that time the inspectors will file an opinion with the Supervising Inspector of the Second District.

REAL ESTATE NOTES.

The Edward Corning Company has been awarded the contract for the construction of the William Sloan Memorial Y. M. C. A. Building on Ninth Avenue, between Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth streets, according to Brown's Letters, Inc., construction reports. The proposed fourteen-story structure will cost $1,000,000, according to Cross & Cross, the architects.

Brown, Wheelock; Harris, Vought & Co. were the brokers in the leasing of 34-36 Wall Street and 31-33 Pine Street by the Iselin family to the 36 Wall Street Corporation. White & Case, attorneys, represented the corporation and Thomas Barkerville of Middlebrook & Sincerbeaux acted for the Iselin interests.

SAYS CANADA BARS ST. LAWRENCE CANAL

Woollard Tells at Waterways Convention of Obstacles Raised by Dominion.

DEMANDS PORT AT ALBANY

New Jersey Men, Under Censure for Delay, Promise Last Link for Intra-Coastal Route.

Special to The New York Times.

CAPE MAY, N. J., Sept. 5.—Speaking in opposition to the St. Lawrence River power ship canal project tonight at the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association convention, W. E. Woollard, Chairman of the Deeper Waterways Commission of the Albany (N. Y.) Chamber of Commerce, declared that Canada has summoned a host of arguments in opposition to the St. Lawrence plan.

While the attitude of the Atlantic Waterways Association and the New York State Waterways Association has crystallized public opinion in the Atlantic Coast States in opposition to the St. Lawrence route, said Mr. Woollard, that sentiment "does not seem to be sufficiently effective to prevent our Government from favoring the St. Lawrence River project."

"Our help, however, comes from an unexpected source, for it seems clear that Canada's attitude toward the project will defeat it," he added.

Points to Canada's Obstacles.

Pointing out that Representative S. Wallace Dempsey of Buffalo had analyzed the diplomatic correspondence passing between the representatives of the United States and Canada, Mr. Woollard said that "one will be easily convinced by reading that analysis that not only is the Canadian Government opposed to the scheme, but that they present too many important and truly insurmountable obstacles to its accomplishment."

"In effect," continued Mr. Woollard, "Canada says she does not care to assume the cost of deepening the St. Lawrence River until her financial situation has changed and, further, until a number of financial difficulties have been solved and 'until fundamental engineering disputes as to the development of the international sections of the river have been settled,' and 'if Canadian constitutional questions are involved it must be determined by the courts before she could agree to the improvements' and 'that the Dominion of Canada must consult with the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec before making an agreement.'

"She further says that we must improve the river for its entire length as a boundary line for 141 miles for power for both the Dominion and the States at a cost of $274,247,000, and dredge all channels, theirs as well as our own, at a cost of $85,100,000. She wants credit also for her expenditures in her own territory, already made, of $30,000,000 and also $50,000,000 for the cost of improving the Welland Canal.

"It seems safe now to predict that despite all the propaganda in its favor, by reason of Canada's attitude, the St. Lawrence River project will never become a reality. The St. Lawrence River project, however, threatens such disaster to the continued development of the Barge Canal system and the Hudson River that we must be continuously vigilant in our opposition. It would create another Dardanelles in America, for Canada, owning both sides of the outlet, would control all that lies behind. It might also be the cause of bitter disputes with the friendly empire, which our neighbor on the north is a part."

Doubtful of Hudson Project.

Mr. Woollard did not see any greater hope for a deep water route from the lakes to the sea by way of the Hudson River. He pointed to the adverse report of the army engineers who studied the latter project. He said that if the Federal Government a decade ago had provided a channel width of 400 feet and a depth of thirty feet in the Hudson River and fully utilized the New York barge canal system and the Hudson River there would not have been the great agitation for the St. Lawrence River route.

He pleaded for further support for the project of making Albany a seaport by dredging the thirty-six miles of the upper Hudson between Hudson and Troy so as to permit ocean going vessels to ascend the river from New York to Troy and there connect with the terminal of the barge canal.

"The making of a seaport at the head of the navigable Hudson is one certain solution for relieving congestion at the New York terminals of the New York Central Railroad," he concluded.

Former Representative John H. Small of North Carolina criticized the people of Ney Jersey for their delay in completing the New Jersey link of the intracoastal waterway connecting Maine and Florida. He urged the people of the State to get favorable action from Congress for the Federal appropriation covering the last link of the inside waterways system.

William A. Stevens, president of the New Jersey Senate, promised the State would provide funds for the acquirement of the right of way for the connecting link, and if additional funds were necessary they would also be voted. Representative Harold G. offman of South Amboy, N. J., also pledged his cooperation.

At their caucus following the morning session the New York delegates decided to propose that the next convention be held in New York, Albany and Troy and that the delegates live on a Hudson River steamer and move from city to city to inspect various waterways systems.

The convention continues tomorrow.

BORAH SAYS SENATE WILL RATIFY TREATY

Thinks Briand-Kellogg Pact Will Help Effect Further Disarmament.

STRESSES ITS MORAL FORCE

Any Signatory Violating It Will at Once Be Branded as an "Outlaw Nation."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—That the Briand-Kellogg treaty for renunciation of war ultimately will aid in effecting further disarmament was predicted today by Senator Borah, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. He did not, however, believe it would have any great effect on the Disarmament Conference in 1932.

Mr. Borah said that previous so-called "peace treaties" had provided, almost without exception, that if a contracting nation violated the terms of the instrument, the other parties would immediately go to war to enforce its provisions against that nation. That type of pact he characterized as a "peace and war treaty."

The strong point of the Briand-Kellogg treaty, from the Senator's viewpoint, is that it contains no such war-making provisions. When ratified by all the signatory and adhering nations, he said, it will become "international law" for those nations and any one of these starting an aggressive war in violation of its provisions immediately becomes branded as an "outlaw" nation.

"The Kellogg treaty thus carries a tremendous moral force," he added.

Confidence that the treaty would be ratified by the Senate at its next session beginning in December was expressed by Senator Borah. As Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee he will guide the treaty through the various stages of ratification.

He admitted, however, that there appeared to be one or two factors on the legislative horizon which might slightly delay final action. He was disinclined, however, to discuss the various diplomatic factors entering into ratification until Secretary of State Kellogg, now en route from Cherbourg to New York, had returned and expressed his views.

One possibility of delay connected with getting all nations formally aligned behind the treaty was suggested in some quarters today.

It was believed possible that the Senate might be asked to ratify the treaty as submitted with the signatures of the original fifteen nations, including the United States, and later ratify separately the adhering notes of the other countries invited to participate.

The reason for this seemingly long, drawn-out ratification procedure, it was explained, is that each adherence constitutes another and separate treaty between the United States and the adhering nation, each requiring separate ratification by the Senate under the Constitution.

This theory, however, is scouted by State Department officials and by Senators who say that the adherences, when formally delivered to the Department of State, becomes a part of the original treaty just as much as if the adhering nations had had their representatives signing the original document at Paris last week. Thus the treaty, with its adherences, constituting but a single instrument, can be ratified simultaneously by the Senate, say those who favor this procedure.

Proponents of both plans, however, say that the final departmental ruling on this legal phase of the matter will come from Secretary Kellog, although the Senate may decide to consider the signature or adherence of some one nation separately, because of unusual circumstances pertaining to that particular case.

Senator Borah today remarked that he had received a letter from a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Belgian Parliament saying that sentiment in Europe was favorable to the treaty.

The Governments of Costa Rica and Honduras today officially notified the State Department of their decision to adhere.

Chile Acknowledges American Note.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 6.—A Foreign Office note delivered this evening to the American Ambassador does not outline Chile's future policy regarding the Kellogg anti-war pact but acknowledges receipt of the American note and expresses the hope that complete success will crown the efforts that have led to this pact which constitutes new and valuable guarantee for international peace.

ADMITS SHE STABBED HUSBAND FATALLY

Brooklyn Wife Breaks Down as Police Question Rival, Who Is Held as Witness.

A few words of sympathy succeeded after sixteen hours of continuous questioning had failed to determine the slayer of Samuel Lensky, who staggered from his home at 17 Whipple Street, Brooklyn, Tuesday afternoon with a stab wound in the abdomen and died soon afterward in the Cumberland Street Hospital.

When the police arrived they found in the Lensky apartment Mrs. Bessie Lensky, 31 years old, wife of the slain man, and Mrs. Mary V. Behrend, 38, each of whom accused the other of the slaying. As each had bloodstains on her dress and no weapon could be found, the police detained both for questioning.

An all-night session brought no results, but yesterday morning Inspector John J. Sullivan, in command of Brooklyn detectives, learned that Mrs. Behrend, who was separated from her husband, had been carrying on a clandestine affair with Lensky. He sharply rebuked her for it.

Moved by his words, Mrs. Lensky broke into tears and confessed the stabbing. She said she had confronted the couple and in a rage had grabbed a bread knife and tried to stab the woman, instead the knife pierced her husband's abdomen, she said. She threw the knife out of the window.

She made a written confession to Assistant District Attorney Joseph V. Gallagher, who said that she will probably be indicted for manslaughter. She re-enacted the crime when she was taken to the scene by detectives. She was held without bail by Magistrate Liots in Homicide Court for examination Sept. 11. Mrs. Behrend was held in 500,000 bail as a material witness.

Convict Doctor Escapes From Devil's Island; Thousands Try, Few Ever Succeed in Breaks

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 5.—A brief cable today from the convict settlement in French Guiana tells of the dramatic escape from the famous prison of Dr. Pierre Bourgrat, prominent Marseilles physician and member of a well-known family, who in March of last year was sentenced to hard labor for life for the murder of Jacques Rumebe, a bank collector.

Two other prisoners escaped with the doctor, and squads of armed men are now searching the wild country into which the trio fled. The details, which are sure to be absorbing, are still lacking.

In the long and gruesome history of this French penal colony few inmates have ever escaped, and the few who have got away have undergone remarkable experiences.

The Bourgrat case was one of the most sensational in recent years in France. The bank collector, with a large sum of money in his possession, had called on the doctor professionally and then disappeared. His body was found months later in a closet in Bourgrat's office.

The prosecutor showed that the doctor suddenly had a lot of money following the visit of his patient.

Only two other men are known to be living who have escaped from the penal colony of Guiana. The convict settlement is on the mainland, but there are three islands near by where the most incorrigible prisoners are sent. It is by the name of one of these, Devil's Island, that the convict settlement is generally known. It was on Devil's Island that Captain Dreyfus was imprisoned.

It is estimated that about 1,000 prisoners a year attempt to escape. The only two living known to have reached another shore are Edward Guerin and Eugene Dieudonné.

Guerin, an Englishman, who had lived in this country for several years, was convicted of robbing the American Express Company in Paris of $30,000 in April, 1901. Before that he had robbed the Bank of Lyons of $50,000. He served four years on Devil's Island and then escaped with the aid of American confederates who chartered a tramp steamer and had it lie off the coast.

Dieudonné was sentenced to life imprisonment in April, 1913, on a charge of participating in the murder of two gendarmes. With some companions he got clear of the convict settlement in December, 1926. They obtained a boat but it capsized and only Dieudonné and one companion survived. After three months of indescribable hardship he reached Belem in Brazil. There he was arrested. He protested his innocence, waived extradition and returned to France, where he was pardoned last year. He remarried his former wife, who had waited sixteen years for him.

CAPTAIN IS KILLED AS VESSEL BURNS

MAN AND WOMAN RESCUED

Master's Wife and Passenger Taken Onto Fishing Skiff—Boat Owned Here.

Special to The New York Times.

POINT PLEASANT BEACH, N. J., Sept. 5.—Captain Paul Heacock, 27 years old, of 1,550 Overing Street, the Bronx, New York City, was either burned to death or drowned and his wife and Walter Randby, 30, of 653 Caldwell Avenue, the Bronx, were rescued by a fisherman when a cabin cruiser in which they were motoring from Clason Point, New York, to Barnegat Bay was burned to the water's edge about five miles east of here today.

Mrs. Heacock is in a sanitarium in Belmar suffering from burns and shock. The boat, 45 feet long, was owned by P. B. Phillip, a patent attorney, of 172 East Sixty-fourth Street, New York, and H. S. Baltz, connected with P. Maunberg & Co., brokers, of 14 Wall Street, New York.

Captain Heacock, who had charge of the boat, left Clason Point yesterday afternoon, accompanied by his wife and Randby and a mechanic. They stopped at Highlands for the night and continued south today. They stopped to fish off shore here and while standing there was an explosion which set fire to the boat.

According to Randby, he was in the front of the boat and Captain Heacock was in the cockpit. The raised the deck about four inches and blew the Captain out of the cockpit and onto the rail.

Seeing Captain Heacock in flames, Randby said he and Mrs. Heacock dragged him along the rail by his belt until the belt broke, letting his body drop into the ocean. Randby said he believed Captain Heacock was dead when he went overboard. Randby and Mrs. Heacock were taken aboard a fishing skiff piloted by Gus Freche of Neptune Township and taken to Shark River, where they were put ashore. From the river, Mrs. Heacock was taken to the sanitarium in an ambulance.

Edward Glashen, also of Neptune Township, another fisherman, was near by when the explosion occurred. He developed motor trouble near the scene and said he saw the deck of the ship, named the "Five of Hearts Second," suddenly lift and then burst into flames.

SCORED TOMBS'S CONDITION

Boylan Says Recent Criticism Did Not Apply to Management.

Representative John J. Boylan's recent criticism of the Tombs Prison applied only to its obsolete physical condition, not its administration, he informed THE NEW YORK TIMES by telegraph yesterday. Last week, after an inspection of the Cuyahoga County Jail in Cleveland, with other members of a special Congressional committee, Mr. Boylan was bitter in his denunciation of four jails which his committee had visited. The Tombs, Moyamensing Prison in Philadelphia, Omaha City Jail and Cuyahoga were the jails named.

"I have investigated prisons all over the country," he said. "Conditions in most of them are terrible, but in these four even the medieval conception of humanity is forgotten."

As a result of the criticism, Richard C. Patterson Jr., Commissioner of Correction, on Tuesday visited the Tombs and Jefferson Market Prison. His attention was called to Mr. Boylan's statement in answer to which he cited the presentment of the Grand Jury of last March 30, in which that body spoke of the high efficiency established and maintained in city and county prisons.

I. R. T. TRAIN INJURES BOY,

Imprisons Lad Between Car and Platform for 20 Minutes.

His left leg broken and pinned between an I. R. T. Seventh Avenue northbound express train and the Thirty-fourth Street station platform, Charles Yoeldes, 12 years old, of 374 East 173d Street, the Bronx, stood the pain of this injury and multiple contusions without a whimper for twenty minutes yesterday.

When the emergency squad, under Sergeant Stanton, released him by tilting the subway coach the boy's only remark was:

"Don't tell mother, she'd be worried."

Charles was on his way to his father's store at 1,877 Third Avenue. He was carrying a package and, according to bystanders, appeared to have been pushed off the platform against the moving train. The platform was crowded and several women fainted when they saw the lad's plight. The subway guards in the station tried vainly to pull the boy's leg free, but finally had to call the emergency squad. Dr. Angelo of the French Hospital took the boy there. He said there was a possibility that his skull was fractured.

EXPLORERS RETURN FROM DUTCH GUIANA

Dr. Kahn and Dr. Herskovits Bring Collection of Bush Negro Objects for American Museum.

THINK TRIBES WERE AFRICAN

Believe They Are First White Men to See Religious Dance of Natives —Suffered Hardships on Trip.

Dr. Morton C. Kahn, representing the Myron I. Granger Expedition of the American Museum of Natural History, and Dr. Melville J. Herskovits, representing Northwestern University, returned yesterday after a two months' trip to study the Bush negroes, or Djukas, of Dutch Guiana. They brought back a collection of about 900 picturesque and historic weapons, household utensils, religious and ceremonial objects, clothing and ornaments. The objects of the trip were to obtain a representative collection of Bush negro ethnological specimens for the museum and to study the customs and practices of these people.

The social, moral, religious and political organization of these unusual people who revolted from the Dutch planters in 1750 and maintained their independence and their African culture was studied by the scientists. They said yesterday that they found many African customs, such as polygamy, the marriage of a widow to her dead husband's brother, the importance of the chief in settling legal disputes, and the presence of food taboos associated with a system of clans.

"An experience which we will never forget was the witnessing of an Obeah dance which was accompanied by chanting, beating of tom-toms and frenzied excitement," the scientists said. "The scantily clad natives, seized by the spirit of the drums and the gods of the place, with their faces painted with the sacred red and white clay, dashed about in the frenzy of their religious fervor. With razor-edged cutlasses they slashed out at random, foaming at the mouth, and destroying what came to hand, while others swam the dangerous rapids upstream, aided by their unnatural strength. This particular manifestation of religious ecstasy of the Bush negroes has never before been recorded as having been witnessed by white men."

"A widespread practice among the Djukas is that of skin decoration by cicatrization," the returning scientists reported. "A number of cuts are made into the flesh of the face, arm, back, thigh or abdomen with a sharp knife. Into these cuts finely ground charcoal is rubbed. The wounds are arranged to form a design of geometrical proportions, and when healing is completed these form a pattern of scar tissue welts. This custom of decoration is common among the women, and few have any claim to beauty without a pattern cut at one place or another upon their anatomy."

To make their study and to obtain the collection of native objects, which is soon to be exhibited at the American Museum of Natural History, the scientists had to overcome almost insurmountable difficulties and dangers, they said.

PUMPS AIR INTO BRAIN TO LOCATE TUMORS

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Sept. 5.—Dr. Max Ludin, director of the Roentgen ray department of the hospital at Basle, has just made a striking medical discovery. By pumping rarefied air into the brain and employing rays he has succeeded in locating tumorous growths in the brain, thereby greatly facilitating operations and diminishing their danger.

When the air is pumped into the delicate brain cells they appear like white stains on a photograph if healthy, but are nearly black if diseased, thus indicating the exact locality for operation purposes.

Dr. Ludin, during further experiments with the rays on the medulla, between the brain and spine, replaced the air by his special oil. The fluid, injected into the spinal column, runs down the neck from the brain base, but stops at any tumorous obstruction in the spine, locating the disease and aiding the surgeon in his diagnosis.

Moore Fills Jersey Transit Board.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 5.—Governor A. Harry Moore announced today the appointment of William F. Hoffman of East Orange and John Mantell of Spring Lake as members of the New Jersey Transit Commission to fill vacancies created by resignations.

'HUMAN FLY' FALLS AS BIG CROWD GASPS

BREAKS ANKLE AND ARM

Also Suffers Internal Injuries—Was Climbing to Aid Veterans—Wife and Daughters Present.

Several thousand homeward bound office workers passing through Journal Square at 7 o'clock yesterday evening stopped to watch Steve Peterson, the well known "human fly" scale the sixteen-story Labor Bank Building, the highest in Jersey City. The stunt, which was being staged for the benefit of the Captain Clinton E. Fiske Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, had been widely advertised, nd the Square was jammed, when Peterson, dressed all in white, began his climb while his wife and two small daughters looked on.

Many of the onlookers recalled how in the hectic war days of 1918 Peterson had climbed some of the highest buildings in New York for the benefit of the Liberty Loan or other drives. With bare hands and feet he had scaled the Title Insurance Building at 135 Broadway, bringing an additional $10,000 into the coffers of the Liberty Loan. And without any charge for his spectacular performance, he had climbed the thirty-two stories of the Park Row Building for the benefit of the committee seeking free milk for France.

Consequently, when, after reaching the second floor of the Labor Bank Building, he lost his balance momentarily, the crowd laughed. They knew the shiny marble frontage which adorns the first three stories of the building did not offer very secure footing. But they knew, too, that Steve was an old hand at the "human fly" business and they thought he was "clowning."

So the fifty members of the veterans' post and its ladies' auxiliary who had been passing the hat through the crowd, and who had stopped instinctively at the first groan of apprehension that came from the throng, went on making their collections knowing from the laughter that all was well.

Nobody felt much fear for Steve's safety. That is, nobody but his wife, who sat in an automobile with her two little daughters looking on. Somehow she couldn't overcome her anxiety. She hadn't wanted Steve to make the climb in the first place. It was eight years since he had done any "human fly" work. His daily occupation as lineman for the New Jersey Public Service Commission was hazardous enough. But she hadn't been able to dissuade him. Besides she was a member of the ladies' auxiliary and maybe the pride she felt in watching him hold so many people spellbound at his daring persuaded her to give her consent.

"Had she been wrong?" she asked herself as she watched him ascending slowly with careful searchings for toe and finger holds. "After all, he was eight years older now—and out of practice."

Once again Steve lost his footing for an instant, clung perilously to a ledge, and catching hold again started upward. Once more the crowd laughed at his "clowning." Then he started to draw himself up over the ledge at the third story which marks the top of the treacherously smooth marble.

Again Steve slipped, but this time there was no laughter, only groans and the terrified screams of women. Mrs. Peterson hid her face in her hands. Down he came, striking the sidewalk feet first only a few yards from where his wife sat in the car. Several members of the veteran post picked Steve up and carried him to an automobile.

While Dr. Harold Jaffin, who was in the crowd, bound the human fly's broken right ankle in improvised splints they drove him to the Jersey City Hospital. On the way Steve, smoking a cigarette, confided, "I got a bad break that time."

At the hospital it was found that in addition to the broken ankle he had suffered a broken left arm and internal injuries.

Members of the veterans' post said last night they had not been able as yet to ascertain how much money was collected. Harry Young of 159 Carlton Avenue, Chairman of the drive, fainted when he saw Petersen fall and had to be sent home.
